THE "YEARLY DIGEST," 1924

I—INDIAN DECISIONS.

ABADI.

ABADI—Outgrowth of a sub-division not a separate sub-division.

There is no authority for the proposition that the accretion to or an overgrowth of an old sub-division of a town within the limits of that town is to be regarded as a sub-division of it, though there are rulings to the effect that the new suburbs beyond the limits of the town constitute new sub-divisions. (Harrison and Zafar Ali, JJ.) AHMAD SHAH v. THE CHURCH MISSIONARY TRUST ASSOCIATION, LONDON. 1924 Lah. 700.

———Right of tenant to enclose and build on.

A tenant cannot enclose and construct a house upon a plot of open land in the abadi without the consent of the landlord though he may have been using it for temporary purposes for a long time. (Kanhaiya Lal, J.) MAHOMED TAQI KHAN v. DORI, 78 I. C. 881 (1) : 1924 A. 723 (1).

———Right to occupy house—Non-agriculturists—If transferable.

A non-agriculturist cannot transfer his right to occupy a house and site without the malguzar's consent unless there is an agreement to that effect. The position of a regular lessee is different. (Hallifax, A. J. C.) LAXMI PRASAD v. AHMAD KACHI. 80 I. C. 635.

ABANDONMENT—Proof.

Where a raiyat left his village and settled down in another village and did not either cultivate his lands or pay rent for 16 years, the facts constitute a complete abandonment or relinquishment. (Sukhwatdy and Chotzner, JJ.) KASIRAM KAIBORTA v. BOGA KAIBORTA. 78 I. C. 503.

ABATEMENT.—See C. P. CODE, O. 22.

ABWAB—Abolition of—Exceptions in Bengal.

Though abwabs have been abolished under the Bengal Regulations for many years, the right to Bankar, Jhalak and Phulkar was always an exception and rent in respect of fruit trees or other classes of trees can be charged in addition to the ordinary rent under an agreement or custom. (Miller, C.J. and Mullick, J.) MAHARAJA-DHIRAJ RAMESHWAR SINGH v. WAZUL HAQ 78 I. C. 463.

ACCOUNTS—Entries in—If proof of binding nature of debt.

Where the creditor of a minor brings a suit against him and relies merely on entries in the account books to show items of consideration, the evidence is not sufficient, as he is bound to prove by independent and reliable evidence the purposes for the loan. (Kinkhede, A. J. C.) TULSI-RAM v. ANUSUYA.

78 I. C. 380 : 1924 Nag. 360.

———Suit for—Procedure—Directions to produce accounts. 1924 P. 176.

ACCOUNTS SETTLED—Reopening of—Trading partnership—Mistake or fraud in carrying part of profits to a new account—Effect—Remedy by way of surcharge and falsification. See PARTNERSHIP. 75 I. C. 171.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT—Suit on—Maintainability.

Every acknowledgment implies a promise to pay and a suit is maintainable on the basis of the same. (Kinkhede, A. J. C.) SITARAM v. NANDRAM. 78 I. C. 234 : 1925 Nag. 9.

ACQUIESCENCE—Building a structure on another's land with that person's knowledge—Omission on the part of the true owner to protest—True owner's suit to recover possession after the building reaches completion.

When a party has all along a firm conviction that a certain strip of land is his property and on the strength of that conviction starts building a structure on it to the knowledge of the true owner without any protest being made on his behalf, the doctrine of acquiescence applies and it is not open, after the whole building reaches completion, to the true owner to assert his legal rights and claim possession of the land.

Ramsden v. Dyson, 149 R.R. 543 and Bussche v. Alt, L. R. 8 Ch. D. 286 followed, and 21 A. 496 referred to. (Vazir Hasan, J.C.) RAFIQ HUSAN v. BISHNATH PRASHAD. 10 W. N. 418 : 10 O & A. L. R. 848 : 11 O. L. J. 677.

———What is—Onus of proof.

Acquiescence is quiescence in such circumstances as that assent may be reasonably inferred from it and is no more than an instance of the law of estoppel by words or by conduct. Mere absence of interference is not sufficient to create an estoppel. Nor does delay in coming to Court amount to it. The onus of proving it is on the person who sets it up. (Mukerji, J.) BANESWAR BANDOPADHYA v. AMULYA CHARAN. 82 I. C. 369

ADMINISTRATION.

ADMINISTRATION — Decree on mortgage — When realisable. 1924 P. 110.

——— Executor putting up building—Assets—Liability.

If an executor invests a portion of the assets in constructing a building it forms part of the assets which will be liable to meet legacies. Where he borrows money after the death of the testator his liability is ordinarily personal in character. (Dalal, J. C. and Cuming, A. J. C.) ANANT RAM v. ISHRI PRASAD. 78 I. C. 320.

ADMINISTRATOR—Appointment of — Considerations to be taken into account—Relationship to the deceased—Interest and safety of the estate. See PROB. AND ADMN. ACT, S. 41.

40 C. L. J. 24.

——— Surety—Right to be released from liability.

A surety to an administration bond is not entitled as a matter of right to be released of future obligation at his choice. His remedy, if it exists at all, is only on showing good cause. (Mookerjee and Rankin, J.J.) RADHIKANATH BISWAS v. RATI KANTA BAKSHI. 76 I. C. 1009.

——— Pendente lite—Duties and powers of—Decree in the suit—Appeal.

The duties of an Administrator and Receiver pendente lite commence from the order of appointment, and, if the decree in the action is appealed from, do not cease until the appeal has been disposed of. In the absence of any appeal the functions of an Administrator pendente lite terminate with a decree pronounced in favour of a Will and do not continue until the executors obtain probate. The case is not altered if there are no executors. (Mookerjee and Chotner, J.J.) PRAMILA BALA DEVI v. JYOTINDRA NATH BANERJEE. 28 C. W. N. 576 : 1924 Cal. 631.

——— Tenants—Wrongful collection of rents by claimant—Action in tort by administrator against claimant.

Where the appellant, an administrator, let out certain lands to tenants and the rents were collected by the respondent claiming to be the beneficial owner of the properties.

Held, that an action lay against the respondent in tort for wrongful collection of the rent which was quite distinct from the appellant's right of action against the tenants for recovery of the rent. (Lentaigne and Carr, J.J.) MA MA GUN v. MAUNG BO THAN.

3 Bur. L. J. 25 : 82 I. C. 35 2 : 1924 R. 282.

ADMIRALTY COURTS ACT (1861), Ss. 5 and 35—(Act of 1840), S. 6—Interpretation Act (1889), S. 18 (2)—Claim for necessities supplied to ship—Suit in rem and in personam—Jurisdiction.

76 I. C. 458.

ADMIRALTY JURISDICTION — Bombay High Court—Service on ship — Writ of summons—Warrant of arrest. 76 I. C. 433.

ADMISSIONS—Pleadings—How to construe.

In construing admissions in a pleading a Court ought to look to the plaint and the pleadings as a whole. The rule is that if a party makes a qualified statement, it cannot be used against him apart from the qualification (Prideaux and Kinkhede, A. J. Cs.) KRISHNABAI v. DHONDO RAMCHANDRA. 20 N. L. R. 63 : 78 I. C. 542 : 1924 Nag. 129.

——— Value of—Shifting of burden of proof.

In a suit for recovery of money paid to defendant by mistake, an admission by the defendant in a prior suit that he had received the money was put in evidence. Held, as a result of the admission the burden of proving want of consideration or undue influence in giving receipt for the money was shifted to the defendant. (Broadway and Campbell, J.J.) WASAKHI RAM v. HUSSAIN KHAN. 75 I. C. 1027 : 1924 Lah. 650.

ADVANCEMENT — Presumption of — Anglo-Indians.

Where among Anglo-Indians, a husband obtains a conveyance in the name of his wife, there is, as in England, a presumption of advancement 48 C. 260, Rel. (Robinson, C. J. and May Oung, J.) LECUN v. LECUN.

ADVERSE POSSESSION—Acts necessary to constitute—Tying cattle. 79 I. C. 450 : 1924 A. 103.

——— Adverse possession of one of the proprietary body against others is possible.

The plaintiffs brought the suit under S. 106, Bengal Tenancy Act, to have a certain entry in the record of rights corrected. The subject-matter of the suit was a two-storied building with the tank and orchard round it and some tenanted lands, the area of the whole being some sixty bighas. The building and the tank were in the centre of a village which became a municipality. The record of rights treated that these lands were in the possession of the plaintiffs and that they were liable to be assessed with rent by the Zemindars. The plaintiffs themselves were fractional owners of the Zemindary. The case made by the plaintiffs was that there was an old Brahamatter grant made in 1165 B. S. to one A. that by a kobala dated 1296 B. S. their predecessor-in-interest took from the executor of A.'s (grantee's heir) estate the Niskar right which had been in this Brahmin family for a very long time.

Held, that the plaintiffs had succeeded in tracing back the possession to grantee's grandson and his possession without any stipulation for payment of rent was undoubtedly adverse to the proprietors of the estate and that the plaintiffs were not liable to pay rent. (Rankin and Ghose, J.J.) SAILAJA NATH ROY CHOUDHURY v. RAJA RESHEE CASE LAW. 51 Cal. 135 : 81 I. C. 493 : 39 C. L. J. 380 : 1924 Cal. 693.

——— Co-heirs—Enjoyment of rents and profits.

The possession of one co-heir is in law the possession of all co-heirs unless it is shown to be otherwise. The fact that one co-heir has not been in enjoyment of the rents and profits of the property is not sufficient to establish a title by adverse possession in the persons who have enjoyed such profits. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) ABDUL SHAKUR KHAN v. MAHOMMAD ALI KHAN.

78 I. C. 282.

—Co-mortgagee.

Where the mortgage is an indivisible transaction according to its terms, any one of the co-mortgagees cannot obtain adverse possession of a particular share in it by lapse of time. The mortgagor could only redeem the whole of the mortgage by a payment of the whole of the mortgage money irrespective of the shares of the co-mortgagees inter se, the money contributed by each being not stated in the deed. A co-mortgagee takes the place of each co-mortgagee whom he pays off; he does so, as a co-mortgagee and thus his possession in his place is that of a mortgagee only and not in other capacity. (Broadway and Zafar Ali, JJ.) SHUJA-U-D-DIN KHAN v. SHER MUHAMMAD KHAN.

1923 Lah. 366.

—Co-owners—Possession among—Repudiation of title—Non-receipt of profits, effect of—Plea abandoned in lower appellate Court, whether can be raised before High Court.

The ordinary presumption of law is that joint possession of co-owners is continued until there is some overt act of ouster or separation. Therefore mere non-receipt of rents and denial, in the course of previous litigation, of a party's title are not sufficient to constitute adverse possession against that party. 20 O. C. 231, 9 I. C. 425 and 20 A. L. J. 545, Rel. to. A plea abandoned in the lower appellate court cannot be raised before the High Court in second appeal. (Neave, A. J. C.) RAM NIDH V. JANKI.

10 W. N. 674;
10 O. & A. L. R. 937.

—Constructive possession of a portion of the property—Effect of.

Where a person is shown to have exercised acts of possession on land as it reformed and became capable of possession and all these acts of possession were all done in the assertion of claim to the land by virtue of settlements made by the Government, the possession extends to the whole of the property especially where there were circumstances to link together various portions of ground so as to make the possession of a part as it emerged amount constructively to possession of the whole. 44 C. 558, Rel. (Newbould, Ghose and Page, JJ.) SURESH CHANDRA MUKHERJI v. SHITI KANTA BANERJEE.

51 Cal. 669 : 78 I. C. 679 :
28 C. W. N. 637 : 1924 Cal. 855.

—Co-owners—Possession of one owner not presumed to be adverse—Onus.

Where one or more of several joint owners are in possession of property, they are presumed to hold that possession on behalf of the whole body of joint owners, and the burden of proving that their possession had become adverse is on them. 20 Bom. L. R. 1064; 10 L. B. R. 45, Rel. (Herald, J.) MA SAN HLA ME v. MA TUN ME.

3 Bur. L. J. 105 : 82 I. C. 821;
1925 Rang. 40.

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

—Co-owners—Overt act necessary.

The possession of one co-sharer is ordinarily on behalf of all, but if by means of an overt act he shows unequivocally that he is holding for himself alone, his possession becomes adverse from that moment. (Campbell, J.) HIRA SINGH v. PUNJAB SINGH.

78 I. C. 113.

—Co-owners—Ouster—Proof of—Essential.

Where the parties are co-owners, in order to establish title by adverse possession in favour of one co-owner against another, it must be established by unambiguous evidence that there was a complete ouster to the knowledge of the co-sharer. The possession of one co-sharer can be said to be adverse against another, only if there is an open denial of title and limitation can run, if at all, only from that date. 43 M. 244 : 35 C. L. J. 554, Rel. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) HASIM ALI v. ABJAL KHAN.

40 C. L. J. 30 :
82 I. C. 392 : 1924 Cal. 1046.

—Co-owners—Transferee from co-owner—Position of.

A transferee from a co-sharer, if he pleads that he was in adverse possession, must prove exclusion or denial of title, but in the event of his having neither actual nor constructive notice of the common character of the property, he will be on the same footing as any ordinary transferee. (Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ.) VENKATRAMA AIYAR v. SUBRAMANIA SASTRY.

20 L. W. 122 : 78 I. C. 37 :
1924 Mad. 741.

—Co-sharer—Essentials.

The possession of one co-sharer being on behalf of all, if he sets up title by adverse possession, he must show overt acts amounting to hostile possession and not as co-sharer. (Moti Sagar, J.) UDI v. MARU MAL.

78 I. C. 159 : 1924 Lah. 682.

—Co-sharers—Nature of possession.

Possession of joint property by one co-sharer does not constitute adverse possession against other sharers until there has been a disclaimer of the latter's title by open assertion of hostile title on the part of the former. Nature of such adverse possession discussed. Mere non-participation in the rents and profits or residence outside will not amount to such ouster. (Kinkaid, J. C. and Raymond, A. J. C.) MT. BHAGBHARI v. MT. KHATUN.

80 I. C. 118.

—Co-sharers—Stranger in possession on behalf of co-sharer—Effect of.

1924 Cal. 366.

—Co-sharers—Release of rights—Effect of.

The possession of one co-sharer is not adverse to another who is also thereby constructively in possession. Even where a co-sharer's possession is adverse, if he releases his rights to the other, all the adverseness of the possession is wiped off. (Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.) CHHOTAY LAL v. HANUMAN SING.

1 O. W. N. 496 :
80 I. C. 619 : 10 O. & A. L. R. 924 :
11 O. L. J. 735.

—Co-tenants—Possession of property under claim of co-tenancy.

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

The plaintiff, a son of a member of a joint Hindu family, was in actual joint possession with his father of an undivided half share in the whole of the property. That was reduced to a third share on the birth of his half-brother. Of that third share he had been in possession since his birth, a great deal more than twelve years ago, along with his father, and later his half-brother also, but in derogation of their title to possess the whole that is to say, adversely to them. Even therefore if the property could be regarded as the self-acquired property of the father the plaintiff would still have been in adverse possession as a tenant-in-common of an undivided third share in the property for more than the statutory period and he is entitled to claim partition of that share. (Baker, J. C. and Hallifax, A. J. C.) JAGESHWAR v. PANDURANG.

7 N. L. J. 82 : 78 I. C. 840 :
1924 Nag. 73.

———Delivery of actual possession under decree—Effect.

Delivery of actual possession under a decree interrupts adverse possession and gives a fresh starting point of limitation. (Daniels, J.) HARPAL KURMI v. MOHAN KURMI.

79 I. C. 1047 : 1924 All. 844.

———Easement—Permanent tenancy—Prescription by one tenant against another.

1924 Cal. 363.

———Entry in revenue record that tenant has higher rights than those of cultivator—Decision of Revenue Court to the same effect—Title whether can be deemed adverse from the date of such entry or decision—Suit for declaration by landlord—Burden of proof.

It is now settled law that an entry in the village record or even the opinion of a Revenue Court that a person cultivating land has rights higher than those of a tenant will not start adverse title of an under-proprietor in the cultivator and not compel the landlord to seek a declaration in the Civil Court at the risk of losing his right if he did not do so within six years of the final order in litigation.

In a suit for declaration by the landlord that the defendants are tenants and not under-proprietors the burden lies on the defendants to prove that they are under-proprietors and not on the landlord.

Where a person sets up a claim to property on the basis of a grant and fails to prove it, he cannot turn round and start the theory of adversity of title which can only commence if he did not lay claim to any title whatsoever for the commencement of his possession. (Dalal, J. C.) SULTAN KHAN v. HARDWARI. 1 O. W. N. 768.

———Formal possession with another—Effect.

77 I. C. 509.

———Hindu widow—Possession of joint family property—Intention of the parties.

Where the widow of a person who died as an undivided member of a joint Hindu family took possession of the family properties recorded in her deceased husband's name and dealt with the properties as her own for over the statutory period, held that she must be held to have prescribed for an absolute estate in the absence of proof that her claim was limited to a widow's estate. Where adverse possession commenced on the death of her husband while the property legally vested in the next surviving male co-parcener, the death of such survivor does not interrupt the running of adverse possession. 22 A. L. J. 304, Dist. 42 A. 152 ; 41 A. 729 ; 22 C. 445, Ref. and Fol. (Daniels and Neave, JJ.) KALI CHARAN v. PEARE.

46 A. 769 : 22 A. L. J. 725 :
L. R. 5 A. 677 : 1924 A. 740 (2).

———Invalid title—Effect on.

Possession for twelve years or any other period prescribed by the law on an invalid title cannot perfect anything but that title. (Hallifax, A. J. C.) DINA SINGH v. JAMAL SINGH. 78 I. C. 446.

———Landlord and tenant—Encroachment on adjoining land—Possession of landlord.

If the person encroaching upon other land is not a tenant, then the mere fact of his open and continuous encroachment would prima facie be possession adverse to the fullest extent against the landlord. Because he is a tenant it is presumed in the landlord's favour that the possession is only under a claim of a limited right. If the possession is under a claim which is adverse to the landlord though only to a limited extent then for the purpose of the right which the tenant is claiming the possession of the tenant is no longer the possession of the landlord. (Rankin and Ghose, JJ.) NEKJANNESSA BIBI v. ABBAS MOLLA. 40 C. L. J. 160.

———Landlord and tenant.

75 I. C. 325 : 1924 Cal. 168.

———Landlord and tenant—Non-payment of rent—Possession—Nature of.

Where a person entered into possession as tenant, the onus is on him to prove the relationship came to an end and his possession began to be adverse. Mere non-payment of rent or carrying out of repairs will not amount to adverse possession. But where he openly disclaims to hold as tenant, pays rent to nobody, has his name entered in the municipal register, etc., his possession is adverse. It is not necessary that he should first give up possession and then only claim adversely. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) MAHOMED FARUQ v. SIDIK. 79 I. C. 59.

———License—Long possession does not create title.

A licensee cannot claim title only from possession however long, unless it is proved that the possession was adverse to that of the licensor, to his knowledge and with his acquiescence. (Mr. Amcer Ali.) KODOTH AMBU NAIR v. SECY. OF STATE. 47 Mad. 572 : (1924) M. W. N. 572 : 26 Bom. L. R. 639 : 20 L. W. 49 : 80 I. C. 835 : 35 M. L. T. (P.C.) 128 : (1924) P. C. 150 : 47 M. L. ADVERSE POSSESSION.

Limited interest.

There can be in law adverse possession of a limited interest. (Baker, J. C.) MR. KASTURI v. BALIRAM. 79 I. C. 117 : 1924 Nag. 222.

Mortgagee—Intention to transfer.

The equity of redemption may be acquired by a mortgagee by adverse possession, when there was a subsequent intention of the parties to sell the equity of redemption, but a valid deed of transfer was not executed. (Kendall and Pullan, A. J. Cs.) SITLA SAHAI v. DHUM SINGH.

77 I. C. 125 : 1924 Oudh 40.

—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Mortgage void—Mortgagee in possession under—Sale void in favour of—Possession held under for 12 years—Effect—Rights of parties.

The first defendant was admitted into possession of immoveable property in 1893 under a mortgage executed by a person who was not the guardian of the plaintiffs, then minors, i.e. under a void mortgage. While the 1st defendant was so in possession, the same person acting on behalf of the plaintiffs sold the property to the 1st defendant in 1900. This sale was, like the mortgage void.

Held, that the effect of the sale was to alter the nature of the possession which 1st defendant had in the property, viz. from that of a mortgagee to that of an absolute owner, and that after 12 years from 1900 1st defendant acquired absolute ownership by adverse possession. —Mortgagor and mortgagee—Rival mortgagors.

The possession of a mortgagee is not adverse to his mortgagor. But where there are rival mortgagors, the possession of their respective mortgagees must be held to be mutually adverse. (Kendall, A. J. C.) RAM CHHOR BAKSH v. RAM SURAT.

AGRA TENANCY ACT (II OF 1901).

Where a widow took possession of certain sir plots of land and a house, set up her own independent title, sold part of property jointly with her deceased husband's brother declaring that her defence in a previous foreclosure suit that she had no interest in the property was false, was continuously shown in the village records a Sir holder, realized rents and made unhindered transfers of property.

Held, on a suit by the widow's deceased husband's brother, that the possession of the widow was adverse ever since she took possession.

Held further, that under certain circumstances the possession of a widow may be adverse to the extent of a widow's estate but it is not so, where the widow has no right to a widow's estate when she takes possession and no allegation is made in the plaint that she was holding a widow's estate in the transfer made by her.

—Ss. 14 (1) (d) and 58—"Same landholder"—Meaning of—Co-sharers of a patti or mahal—Private partition—Effect of.

The defendant held during the years 1314 Fasli to 1321 Fasli a minimum area of 4 bighas, 8 biswas, 7 dhurs in a joint patti. Towards the end of 1321 Fasli the co-sharers in the patti arranged a private partition. Of the area held by the defendant, 1 bigha 8 biswas 9 dhurs fell into plaintiff's share. The remainder of the defendant's holding fell into the share of other co-sharers who took the land into their own cultivation or let it to other tenants. To make up for this in 1320 Fasli the plaintiff gave the defendant new plots of area which was 2 bighas, 4 biswas, 5 dhurs. The question arose whether the defendant was entitled to count this area as having been given him in exchange for that of which he has been deprived by the other co-sharers. Held that where the co-sharers of a joint patti had divided it so that the tenant's holding was split up and portions were allotted to different co-sharers in the patti, the landholder before and after the partition should be considered to be the same for the purpose of Section 14.

The new plots were given at the beginning of 1322 Fasli by the plaintiff in lieu of the plots which the other co-sharers had taken away from the defendant and the plaintiff could not be considered "the same landholder" under Section 14.

The term 'landholder' is defined in the Act as 'the person to whom rent is payable' and it has been frequently held that in the case of private partition between co-sharers of an undivided mahal the co-sharer in whose share the tenant's holding lies is the person to whom rent is payable. Consequently he has authority to eject without joining other co-sharers.

—Ss. 24 and 28, 58—Scope of—Suit in ejectment—Maintainability—Sub-lease from a non-occupancy tenant.

Where a sub-lease was granted by a female non-occupancy tenant in her own right the Zamindar filed an ejectment suit against the sub-lessees after her death, which was opposed by the lessees. Held, the sub-tenant is liable to be ejected, on the ground, that under S. 58 of the Act, a non-occupancy tenant or sub-tenant is liable to be ejected before 12 years, and the contention that under S. 28, the Zamindar is bound by the leases granted by the tenant-in-chief, during his lifetime would mean a serious invasion of his rights. Held further, the provision in S. 28 which preserved sub-leases after the interest of the tenant-in-chief has been extinguished is subject to the proviso in S. 24, viz. a tenant by sub-letting cannot be relieved from any of his liabilities to the landlord. A non-occupancy tenant cannot make a valid transfer of interest exceeding those which he has himself. (Fremantle, S. M. and Burn, J. M.) MURLIDAR v. JABBU LAL AND OTHERS.

The taking of a premium on admission to tenancy does not ordinarily imply a contract for an indefinite or even a very long term and very seldom does it imply a term long enough to ensure the acquisition of the status of any occupancy tenant. The test to be applied is whether in all the circumstances the term of occupation is reasonably long, the implied agreement being seldom capable of satisfactory proof.

In cases where there is no proof of any agreement not to eject for a definite term the circumstances must be considered. If the amount of the premium had been large with reference to the size of the holding it might have been found that there was an implied agreement not to eject for a term sufficient to allow occupancy rights to grow up. On the death of a tenant the Zamindar granted a registered agricultural lease of the holding in favour of the defendant, but the Lambardar acknowledged the plaintiff who was the heir of the deceased tenant, as a non-occupancy tenant and recovered rents from him. More than a year after the lease, the defendant dispossessed the plaintiff and cut and carried away his crops. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for recovery of possession, damages, and injunction within six months of the dispossession without impleading the Zamindar as a party. The suit was filed in the Civil Court and it was objected that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction. Held, that there was no ejectment by the Zamindar, the defendant being merely a trespasser and that the suit as against him was maintainable in the Civil Court. —S. 79—Ejectment—Landlord and tenant—Limitation.

In a suit in ejectment the Court found that plffs. were occupancy tenants, that there was no relation of landlord and tenant between the parties and that the deft. was one of the co-sharers in the patti where the suit land was situate and that he had been in possession for 16 years without the consent of the plaintiffs. The defendant pleaded that he was a co-sharer and holding the land as kudka-ht. The suit having been decreed, the defendant appealed. Held, that the case was one to which S. 79 or the shorter period of limitation prescribed by the Act applied. The decree was therefore correct. To make S. 79 applicable ejectment of a tenant must be by the whole body of co-sharers or by the lambardar. (Mukerji, J.) RANI v. EDAL SINGH

—S. 165—Lambardar—Powers of—Right to sue co-sharers for profits.

A lambardar is not merely a co-sharer but the agent of the other co-sharers and can represent them in transactions relating to the estate. He can bring a suit for rent not only against tenants but also against other co-sharers who hold sir and khudkhasht in excess of their shares for the extra profits realised. In a suit brought in the Revenue Court for profits under S. 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act, by two co-sharers, a Thekadar of the lambardar was impleaded as a party defendant along with others on the allegation that he had been making collections for the lambardar. Held, that the Thekadar was not a co-sharer, or a legal representative or assignee of the co-sharers and no suit could under S. 165 of A. 78 I. C. 1008 : 1924 A. 609.

—S. 167—Ejectment decree—Revenue Court—Subsequent declaratory suit in Civil Court—Maintainability of.

The Civil Courts will not entertain a suit the object of which is to reverse a decision of a Revenue Court in a matter which is under S. 167 within the Revenue Court's exclusive jurisdiction and if this is the substantial object of the civil suit it is immaterial that the plaintiff may have framed his relief in a form in which it could not have been granted by the Revenue Court. The Courts will look to the substance of the matter and not to the form. Plaintiff sued in the Civil Court for a declaration that he was a joint tenant with the defendant with the object of setting aside the Revenue Court's decree for ejectment. Held, that the suit in the Civil Court was not maintainable. The plaintiff could have substantially obtained the same relief which he was seeking in the Civil Court by bringing a declaratory suit under S. 95 of the Tenancy Act against the landholder and making the defendants a party to it. The fact that since the institution of the civil suit the plaintiff had been able to get from the Revenue Court a pronouncement that he was not liable to ejectment as sub-tenant is irrelevant. To see whether the suit is maintainable the Court has to look to the date when it was instituted. (Daniels, J.) GOBIND v. AMMAR. 78 I. C. 628 : L. R. 5 A. 138 (Rev.).

—S. 167—Ejectment suit in Revenue Court—Decree—Subsequent suit in Civil Court—Maintainability of.

Plaintiff cannot by merely changing the form of his relief evade the provisions of S. 167 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Defendant ejected the plaintiff in a suit brought under the Act and decided ex parte. An application by the plaintiff to get the ex parte decree set aside, on the ground that no notice was served on him was dismissed by the Revenue Court. Plaintiff then brought a suit in the Civil Court alleging that the decree in the Revenue Court had been fraudulently obtained and should therefore be cancelled and for a declaration that the plaintiff was a grove-holder. Held, that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to grant the relief. The ejectment suit being before the Revenue Court, that Court had jurisdiction to decide whether the defendants in the Civil Court were agricultural tenants or not. It decided against them and its decision was under S. 167 a bar to a civil suit on the same matter. (Daniels and Dalal, JJ.) KUNDAN LAL v. PRASAD. 46 A. 570 : 22 A. L. J. 466 :

—S. 167—Lease by Hindu father—Suit by sons in Revenue Court to eject lessee—Revenue Court leaving validity of the lease to the Civil Court—Declaratory suit in Civil Court—No bar.

AGRA TENANCY, ACT S. 177.

The father of the plaintiffs granted a perpetual lease of certain agricultural land forming part of their joint family property in favour of the defendant. The plaintiffs sued after the father's death to eject the defendant in the Revenue Court which refused to do so until the decision of a Civil Court had been obtained on the validity of the lease. Subsequently the plaintiffs sued in the Civil Court for a declaration that the lease granted by the father was not binding upon them.

Held, that that suit was maintainable in the Civil Court. Where the decision of the Revenue Court refusing to eject the defendant unless and until the validity of the lease had been adjudicated upon by the Civil Court was right or wrong, it was binding upon the parties to it and could not be challenged by them. AGRA TENANCY ACT, S. 177.

The defendant in a civil suit was directed to sue in the Revenue Court under S. 202 of the Tenancy Act and the suit was accordingly instituted in the Court of the Assistant Collector. Held, that an appeal from the decision of the Assistant Collector lay to the Commissioner and not to the Dt. Judge. (Mukerji, J.) HIRDEY NARAIN RAI v. JAGDISH NARAIN RAI, 22 A. L. J. 909; 82 I. C. 317; L. R. 5 A. 276 (Rev.).

—S. 177 (e)—Ejectment—Suit for—Defence of co-tenancy and proprietary title—Jurisdiction—Appeal—Civil or Revenue Court.

The defendants in an ejectment suit pleaded by way of defence that they were either co-sharers, with the last occupancy tenant, or were holders of land by virtue of their position as mortgagees of proprietary rights in the patti. The Assistant Collector decided on the first point of defence and did not decide regarding khudkasht. The Commissioner on appeal decided both questions. Held, the Collector overlooked the provisions of S. 177 (e) of the Tenancy Act, and that the memo. of appeal should be returned to the appellant with orders to present it to the Civil Court. The plff. sued two persons as non-occupancy tenants. They alleged that their own brother had proprietary rights and was holding as khudkasht. The Asst. Collector having found that the defendants' brother had obtained a decree conferring proprietary rights during the pendency of the suit dismissed the suit. The Collector found that the decree was obtained subsequent to the filing of the present suit, and proceeded to decide on the merits.

Held, on appeal, that the defendants' claim was not entirely frivolous and that the Collector had no locus standi to hear the appeal. (Fremantle, S. M. and Burn, J. M.) MULA v. KIRPA RAM, L. R. 5 A. 319 (Rev.).

—S. 193—Scope of—Shares of profits assigned—Insolvency of sharer—Suit for profits by assignee—Pro. Ins. Act, S. 28.

S. 193 must be construed in the sense and for the purpose for which it was intended, namely, the regulation of procedure in the Revenue Courts and it cannot be extended so as to withdraw from the cognizance and determination of these Courts pleas which do not go to procedure but substantive legal rights. Where therefore an assignee of profits from a co-sharer who had been adjudged an insolvent prior to the assignment sued the lambardar in a Revenue Court for profits accrued and the lambardar questioned the plaintiff's right to sue on the ground that his assignor had no title to convey after his insolvency. Held by Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ. (Kanhaiya Lal, J. dissenting) that the plea was not one relating to procedure but of a substantive legal right and the Revenue Court had jurisdiction to decide it. A lambardar sued a tenant for recovery of rent or for ejectment. The defendant pleaded that the lambardar had no authority to realise the rent in the mahal in suit and that the co-sharers had each collected his own share of the rent. Held, that though the presumption was that the lambardar was appointed as agent to act on behalf of all the co-sharers it was open to the tenant to prove an arrangement among the co-sharers of a particular mahal under which each co-sharer was to collect his own share of the rent. In respect of such mahal the lambardar is not an agent of the co-sharers. (Dalal, J.) SYED SIDDIQ ALI v. CHANDA, L. R. 5 A. 271 (Rev.).

When there is an arrangement in a village that each co-sharer should collect his own rent, the lambardar cannot be held to be the agent of all the co-sharers. Where in a suit in ejectment brought by one of the co-sharers, it was found that though there were other co-sharers in the proprietary right, the land was let to the defendants by the plaintiff alone and the plaintiff had let other holdings similarly. Held, that there was evidence from which a special contract could be inferred within S. 194 (2) of the Act and the suit was not bad for non-joinder of parties. A mortgagee, having been unable or unwilling to obtain possession of the mortgaged property by occupation himself leased the mortgaged property to the mortgagor for a term of seven years and during those seven years remained in possession by the receipt of the rents. Since those 7 years expired the mortgagor has continued to remain in possession. The mortgagee took no active steps to turn him out. Held, that the ordinary presumption was that the mortgagor had remained in possession with the mortgagee's consent without an express agreement. The mortgagee could not be said to have been dispossessed in any shape or form and he was entitled to sue the lambardar for profits.

Per Piggott, J.—The usufructuary mortgagee of a co-sharer in possession of the share is entitled to maintain a suit against the lambardar for profits. Mere non-payment by a lambardar to any co-sharer of the said co-sharer's proper quota of the annual divisible profits of the mahal does not in the absence of evidence to the contrary constitute an ouster of the said co-sharer from possession. of the said share. As a matter of fact a portion of the mortgage had been redeemed and the piff. was really in possession as mortgagee over a share of 8 biswas only. The defendant was a co-sharer in possession of the remainder. Held, that the possession of the plaintiff was that of a co-sharer not recorded as having the particular proprietary right which would entitle him to maintain the suit brought by him. In reality his case fell under the first and not under the third clause of S. 201. (Mears, C. J. and Piggott, J.) JWALA PRASAD v. IRSHAD MAHOMED KHAN. L. R. 5 A. 146 (Rev.) : 46 A. 512.

It is with great hesitation that an appeal Court differs with the trial Court on its estimate of witnesses whom the trial Court has had an opportunity of seeing; but where the opinion of the trial Court depends not upon the honesty of the witness but upon reasons which the appeal Court cannot accept, it is obviously the duty of the appeal Court to record its disagreement with the trial Court and to set aside the findings of fact arrived at by it. Where a case tried by a Judge without a jury comes to the Court of Appeal, the presumption is that the decision of the Court below on the facts was right, and that presumption must be displaced by the appellant. If he satisfactorily makes out that the Judge below was wrong, then inasmuch as the appeal is in the nature of a rehearing the decision should be reversed; if the case is left in doubt, it is clearly the duty of the Court of Appeal not to disturb the decision of the Court below. —Award—Decree—Executability of—Declaration of liability.

In a suit for partition and possession of immoveable properties a decree was passed on an award providing that in a case of the loss of any properties owing to defect of title, both parties to the award should bear the loss equally and accounts should be taken in certain manner in the event of certain contingencies. One of the parties applied to execute the decree and recover certain sums alleged to be due on account of loss of some of the properties and on adjustment of other accounts.

Held, that the award merely declared the basis upon which certain disputes should be settled leaving it to the parties themselves to do so if they agreed and if they could not agree, it could be done in a regular suit and that the claim was not one which could be gone into in execution. (Chandrasekhara Aiyar, C. J. and Subbanna, J.) SHAMA RAO v. VENKATAPPA. 2 Mys. L. J. 62.

—Award—Ex parte award—When set aside.

An award passed ex parte can be set aside by Court if the party convinces the Court that he had sufficient cause for his non-appearance. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) TRUSTEES OF THE FIRM MOTHARAM DOWLATRAM v. FIRM OF MAYADAS DOWLATRAM. 78 I. C. 521.

—Award—Family settlement—Rejection as partly invalid—If ceases to be enforceable as a family arrangement.

Where one party to the award led another to believe to his prejudice that he is going to abide by the award he is estopped from contesting it. The fact that he signed the award does not however by itself render it more binding on him. 6 C.P.L.R. 95, Foll. It has always been the policy ——— Award—Legality of—Misconduct—Arbitrators not acting together. 28 O. C. 350.

——— Award—Legality of—Arbitrators accepting compromise suggested by parties and making an award in accordance therewith—Propriety of.

Where a reference had been made to arbitration in a pending suit, the arbitrators embodied a compromise of the parties themselves in the award and made their award accordingly. Held, that there was no reason why arbitrators should not accept a compromise of the parties before them and set out their award in terms thereof. Such a proceeding is as much an adjudication of the case as is a decree of Court founded on a compromise. To admit that an award may be challenged on the ground that the arbitrators had not themselves independently considered and decided the matter would be contrary to the principle laid down in para. 15 of the second schedule to the C. P. Code. (Wallace, J.) LEKKALA RAMU NAIDU v. VETCHALAPU NAYANAPPA. 19 L. W. 562 : (1924) M. W. N. 356 : 80 I. C. 571 : 1925 Mad. 56.

——— Award—Error—What amounts to.

Courts cannot investigate beyond the award of arbitrators and the documents actually incorporated therein and where no error is patent on these, the Court cannot go into the proceedings of the arbitrator. ——— Award—Error on the face of the award, meaning of—Sale of goods—Objection to quality—Burden of proof—Award made without surveying goods as provided by the rules of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce—Legality of.

In a suit by the plaintiffs against the defendants for a declaration that an award made by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce was invalid and inoperative, the grounds on which the claim was based were first that the award was bad on the face of it and secondly, that the arbitrators had no jurisdiction to make the award. In the contract for the sale and purchase of goods between the plaintiffs and the defendants it had been agreed that in the event of any dispute arising as to inferiority of quality, defects or differences in the goods, the same should be referred to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. The dispute having arisen as regards the quality of the goods tendered, the parties referred the same to arbitration. The award was as follows :—"Complaint—Inferior quality and other defects as per buyers' statement, dated 1st March, 1921. Award :—We have considered the papers and as the buyers are unwilling to produce the bales required for inspection their claim cannot be upheld and we award that they pay for and take delivery of the goods in terms of the contract." Held (1) that the buyers having failed to produce the goods for inspection before the arbitrators could not rely on the abstract doctrine of burden of proof and seek to invalidate the award as being erroneous on the face of it; and (2) that it was not a proper or legitimate inference from the terms of the award that the arbitrators had decided against the buyer relying upon the mere fact of their omission to produce the goods, inasmuch as the award itself stated that the arbitrators had considered the documentary evidence in the case. Though the rules of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce contemplated the making of the survey, the award of the arbitrators made without such a survey is not invalid because it was only one mode of settling the dispute and it was not contemplated that that should be the only means of settling the dispute. (Sanderson, C. J. and Walmsley, J.) S. & C. NORDLINGER v. CHANDMULL MULCHAND. 28 C. W. N. 888 : 82 I. C. 341 : 1924 Cal. 1051.

——— Award—Error on the face of the award—Damage granted in Pounds—Exchange rate not specified—Award not uncertain—Civil Procedure Code, Sch. II, para. 14.

An error in law on the face of the award must be distinctly collected from the face of the award or from any paper so connected with the award as to form any part of it. Where, in an arbitration the arbitrator had awarded the amount claimed in pounds sterling and the rate of exchange for payment was not specified, Held that the award was not bad for uncertainty. (Raymond, A. J. C.) MESSRS. BEITH STEVENSON CO., LTD. v. FIRM OF NAROOMAL KHEMCHAND. 80 I. C. 1009 : 17 S. L. R. 86 : 1924 S. 117.

——— Award—"Error of law on the face of award"—Meaning of—When arbitrator can be examined as witness—Courts if can interfere with his construction.

So long as an arbitrator acts within jurisdiction and without fraud or misconduct, an award cannot be set aside unless there is an error of law which appears on the face of the award or in some document so closely connected that it must be regarded as part of the award. The expression means some legal proposition which is the basis of the award and which can be said to be erroneous.

An arbitrator is a competent witness and may be examined as such where his award is attacked on the ground of want of jurisdiction or misconduct. But he cannot be examined nor his evidence used to scrutinise his decision on a matter within his jurisdiction.

On a question of construction being referred to arbitration, his award cannot be set aside merely because the Court itself would have come to a different conclusion unless he has proceeded illegally, e. g., on inadmissible evidence. ARBITRATION—Award.

—Award—Error on the face of the award
—Illegality—Arbitration by Bengal Chamber of Commerce—Sale of goods—Breach of contract—
Damages—Award without inspection of goods.

The parties to a contract for the sale of goods entered into an agreement containing terms under which they would conduct business with each other, and amongst other terms the second provided that "in the event of any dispute arising as to inferiority of quality, defects or differences in the goods, the same shall be referred within 90 days of the arrival of the goods in Calcutta to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and no claim would be entertained if made after 90 days from date of arrival of the goods." The latter part of the same clause provided that "the Chamber shall arrange for survey in accordance with its rules, that surveys shall be held on the actual goods and not on shipment samples, and that all survey reports, accompanied by samples, signed and sealed by the surveyors, showing the basis on which their award has been made must be forwarded to the sellers whenever the award has been given against them. A dispute having arisen as regards the quality of goods supplied, the arbitrators passed an award to the following effect:—"We have considered the papers and as the buyers Messrs. C. & M. are unwilling to produce the bales required for inspection their claim cannot be upheld and we award that they pay and take delivery of the goods in terms of the contract." In a suit by the buyers to set aside the award on the ground of an error apparent on the face of the award. Held, that in a dispute as to the quality of the goods contracted for, it is the duty of the seller to prove that the goods are of the quality contracted for and that the award was erroneous in law on the face of it and liable to be set aside. —Award in favour of person not party to reference—Family settlement—Binding nature of.

The heirs of a deceased man submitted their disputes to arbitration and one of them wanted his share to be given to his minor son. —Award—Validity—Objection to award—Appeal—Revision.

There was a reference to arbitration and an award was made. Objections were taken to the validity of the award. One of the grounds taken was that there was no valid reference to arbitration as one of the defendants in the case did not at all join in the reference. The objections to the award taken by the plaintiffs were not properly heard. There was no necessity for any evidence to be adduced and the objections were not frivolous. Held, that though no appeal lay from the order of the Lower Court passing a decree on the award, still the High Court could interfere in revision. —Award—Validity of—Arbitrator first cousin of one of the parties—Relationship not known to the other—Effect.

Where the parties to an arbitration appoint a person as arbitrator, but he happens to be a first cousin of one of the parties which fact is not known to the other, the award is bad. It is not necessary for the latter to prove actual bias or partiality on the part of the arbitrator. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) TRUSTEES OF THE FIRM MOTHARAM DOWLATRAM v. FIRM OF MAYADAS DOWLATRAM. 78 I. C. 521.

—Award—Validity of—Award given after the expiry of the time prescribed—Effect of—Contract subject to rules of Association—Reference of disputes to arbitration—Umpire—Reference to.

The petitioner purchased on 11-9-1922 600 bales of cotton from the respondent for September 1922 delivery. The contract was made subject to the rules of the East India Cotton Association, Limited. The respondents' contention was, that the petitioner was not a member of the Association. Among the rules of the Association one ran thus:—

All questions in disputes (other than those of quality) arising out of, or in relation to (a) contracts (whether forwards or "ready"), made subject to those Rules, or (b) the rights and responsibilities of Commission Agents, muckadams and brokers, shall be referred to arbitration of two disinterested members, one to be chosen by each disputant, the arbitrators having power to call in an umpire who must also be a member.

The arbitrators shall come to a decision within fifteen days of their appointment unless the Chairman, Vice Chairman or General Manager shall when nominating arbitrators (in the manner prescribed below) or upon subsequent application of the arbitrators grant an extension of this period.

If the two arbitrators cannot agree upon an award they shall appoint an umpire within fifteen days of the date on which the two arbitrators were originally appointed, or within such extended period as may be allowed by the Chairman, Deputy Chairman, or General Manager.

ARBITRATION—Award.

Upon application of either disputant the Chairman, Deputy Chairman or General Manager shall nominate two arbitrators having power to appoint an umpire, in any of the following cases :—

(a) If after one party has appointed an arbitrator the other party refuses or neglects to appoint a second arbitrator within 24 hours after service of written notice of that appointment.

(b) If from any cause the umpire fails to make his award within 10 days from the date of his appointment.

The arbitrators must in all cases be members or authorised representatives of members.

Disputes arose between the parties and the respondent appointed an arbitrator and called on the petitioner to appoint his. The petitioner failed to do so whereupon the Chairman of the Association, in the instance of the respondent, nominated C. and M. as arbitrators. The arbitrators differed and appointed an umpire on 21st December 1922 who was not a member of the Association but a partner of a firm which was a member. The umpire, without hearing the parties and further evidence, made an award on 5.1.1923. An appeal by the petitioner to the Appeal Committee of the Association was unsuccessful. Thereupon he applied to the High Court for a declaration that the award was invalid, that the appointment of the umpire was void, that not being a member of the Association he could not act as umpire, that the umpire gave his award without giving any opportunity to the petitioner to be heard and that the award was not made within 10 days from the date of his appointment. Held, the award not having been made within 10 days by the umpire was invalid and that the other grounds urged against the validity of the award were untenable. (Shah, A.C.J. and Crump, J.) CHATURBHUI BHAGWANDAS v. DEO KARAN NANJI. 26 Bom. L. R. 84 : 79 I. C. 769 : 1924 Bom. 370.

—Award when vitiated—Error of law.

Where a specific question of law is referred to arbitration, even if a wrong decision of law is arrived at and is apparent on the face of the award it cannot be challenged. Where however a specific question of law is not so referred, an erroneous decision of law may be attacked provided such error appears on the face of the award itself, or any document so closely connected as to form part of the award. —Award—Secret enquiries of arbitrators—Court's decision apart from award—If revisable. See C. P. CODE, S. 115.

—Award—Suit pending in Court—Private reference—Validity of award.

Per Kennedy, J.C. and Madgavkar, A.J.C.—While a suit is pending disposal the parties are competent to refer the matter without leave of Court to arbitration. But the Court cannot file the award as an award or pass a decree thereon under the C. P. Code or Arbitration Act, but can only treat it as an adjustment under O. 23, R. 3. In such a case the Arbitration Act does not apply and the reference is not illegal or invalid.

ARBITRATION—Jurisdiction.

Per Aston, A.J.C.—The Court has power to file the award and pass a decree under para. 21, Schedule II, C. P. Code, or file it under Ss. 11 and 15, Arbitration Act, as a decree of Court or record it as an adjustment under O. 23, R. 3 and pass a decree in accordance therewith if the award recorded is an adjustment in the strict sense. —Court's power to limit time for objections—Waiver and estoppel.

76 I. C. 33 : 1924 Oudh 344.

—Death of one of referring parties—Effect of.

The death of one of the parties to an arbitration before the award is made operates as a revocation of the authority of the arbitrator and an award made subsequently is not binding on his legal representatives. But if the hearing is completed by that time and nothing remains except the delivery of the award and the intention of the parties was that their heirs also should be bound, the award would be binding. (Moti Sagar, J.) TEGHA v. RAM SINGH.

79 I. C. 67 : 1924 Lah. 725.

—Differences—Failure to pay claim—If amounts to—Plurality of references.

Where parties agree that all differences that may arise between them should be settled by arbitration, a failure to pay a claim arising out of the contract amounts to a difference which falls within the agreement. There can be as many awards as there are disputes and the mere fact that one award has issued does not exhaust the powers under the agreement. (Raymond, A.J.C.) TAYABALLY ABDUL HUSSAIN v. JAMES FINLAY & Co. 80 I. C. 969.

—Filing of suit to set aside award—Effect on pending proceedings.

The filing of a suit for declaring an arbitration invalid does not render the arbitrators functi officio or the award void. (Raymond, A.J.C.) TAYABALLY ABDUL HUSSAIN v. JAMES FINLAY & Co. 80 I. C. 969.

—Jurisdiction—C. I. F. Contract.

Where sellers had fulfilled their part of the contract by tendering the documents of title to buyers which was done at Amritsar and no part of the cause of action arose at Karachi, Held, the fact of the goods lying at Karachi was immaterial so far as the seller's cause of action was concerned and the Karachi Court has no jurisdiction to file an award of arbitrators. (Raymond, A.J.C.) MEHTA & Co. v. MESSRS. PARMESHARDAS PARSHOTAMDAS.

80 I. C. 303 : 1924 S. 4.

ARBITRATION.

—Mode of publishing award—Stamp—If necessary.

An award is valid as soon as the arbitrator signs it. There is nothing making its publication necessary nor is it the arbitrator's duty to stamp it. His only duty is to acquaint the parties with the fact that he has completed the award. (Kinkhede, A. J. C.) LALA ANANTRAM v. MURLIDHAR, 78 I. C. 194 : 1924 Nag. 204.

—Nomination "without prejudice"—Effect—Signature to reference—Absence of.

The nomination of an arbitrator "without prejudice" is not a proper compliance with the terms of an agreement to refer disputes to arbitration each party nominating one arbitrator. It is not clear and unequivocal and if as a result the other party nominates an arbitrator for the defaulter, the latter cannot exercise his right again. The fact that thereafter the reference is signed only by the first party does not vitiate the award, (Aston, A. J. C.) RAMJIBHAI & CO. v. YUSUF ALI MAHOMED ALI & BROTHERS.

76 I. C. 261 : 1925 S. 12.

—Parties asking Court to inspect locality and decide—If appealable—Duty of appellate Court.

The parties to a suit instead of leading evidence asked the Judge to have a local inspection and decide on the basis of that. The Judge did accordingly and passed a decree. The aggrieved party appealed. Held, the proceedings before the Judge were not extra cursum curiae and as there was no agreement by the parties to treat his decision as final, he was not in the position of an arbitrator. Hence there was a right of appeal. In disposing of the appeal, the appellate Judge has to decide on such materials as were before him and could not order a remand and allow fresh evidence to be taken. (Kennedy, J. C. and Raymond, A. J. C.) TILLOOMAL JESSOMMAL v. HARBHAGWANDAS, 76 I. C. 309 : 1924 S. 134.

—Pleader—Power to refer disputes.

Unless the vakalatnama executed in favour of a pleader specially empowers him to refer the matter in the suit to arbitration, he cannot bind his client by such a course. In such cases, the court has to see whether such a power is to be found within the four corners of the instrument either in express terms or by necessary implication. (Kinkhede, A. J. C.) HUSSAINBHAI BHORA v. BANSILAL, 79 I. C. 48 : 1924 Nag. 338.

—Position of—Witness—Commission to examine.

An arbitrator is not in the position of an ordinary witness and a Judge should not allow him to be examined on commission. The Judge ought to exercise the severest possible control and circumspection over the examination of an arbitrator. He can be examined only on the course of procedure adopted and not on what led him to decide in a particular way. The Court, when an award is sought to be filed, does not sit in judgment on the decision of the arbitrators. (Walsh, A. C. J. and Ryves, J.) KHUB LAL v. BISHAMBHAR SAHAI, 22 A. L. J. 919 : 82 I. C. 219 : L. R. 5 A. 649.

ARBITRATION.

—Powers of arbitrator—Error of law—Effect.

An arbitrator cannot pass what he considers an equitable arrangement but must make an award confined to what is referred to him. If the reasons he gives are contrary to law and erroneous, the award is illegal on the face of it and can be set aside. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) FIRM OF MAHOMED ALI KARIMJI & SONS v. CHARATSINGH BUDSINGH, 80 I. C. 596.

—Provision for decision of other matter. MANSA RAM v. KARTA RAM, 76 I. C. 1007.

—Reference—Omission to answer referred points—Effect.

Where with the consent of parties, an arbitrator undertakes to decide a number of matters, but for some reason or other omits to decide some material issues, it vitiates the whole award. The arbitrators derive their authority from the consent of parties and hence cannot go outside that consent. (Walsh, A. C. J. and Ryves, J.) KHUB LAL v. BISHAMBHAR SAHAI, 22 A. L. J. 919 : 82 I. C. 219 : L. R. 5 A. 649.

—Reference to—Guardianship proceedings—Not to be the subject of reference to arbitration and decision by arbitrators without exercise of discretion by Court. 46 M. L. J. 179.

—Reference to—If should be in writing—Duty of arbitrator.

A reference to arbitration need not be in writing. Where both parties appeared before the arbitrator and conducted their case, an award cannot be set aside on the ground that reference was not in writing. Parties who refer disputes to arbitration cannot expect a technically perfect award couched in strictly legal form. (Pullan, A. J. C.) WALIULLAH v. BHAGGAN, 11 O. L. J. 570 : 80 I. C. 7 : 1 O. W. N. 394 : 10 O. & A. L. R. 761.

—Reference to—Validity—Absence of jurisdiction—Appearance—If amounts to waiver—Claim for moneys due under settlement.

Where the appointment of an arbitrator is without jurisdiction, an appearance before him even without protest and without prejudice does not amount to a waiver of the right to object to jurisdiction.

A reference to arbitration on the basis of an invalid submission is itself invalid. An agreement to submit disputes to arbitration must be in writing, but need not be signed.

In the case of cross-contracts, if there is a clause to settle disputes by arbitration, a claim for moneys due under a settlement can be referred to arbitration. But where the money is entered as paid in the account books and a loan of the same taken then and there, the latter is an answer to a suit on the claim and bars the right to claim arbitration under the cross-contracts. party seeks to enforce his award raise objections to the filing of the same or pursue his common law remedy under S. 9, C.P. Code, by filing a suit to have a declaration that the proceedings are invalid for valid grounds, e.g., fraud. (Raymond, A. J. C.) TAYABALLY ABDUL HUSSAIN v. JAMES FINLAY & Co. 80 I. C. 969.

———Submission if to be in writing.

Where parties have agreed in writing to submit any differences that may arise to arbitration, a subsequent submission to arbitration need not be in writing. (Raymond, A. J. C.) TAYABALLY ABDUL HUSSAIN v. JAMES FINLAY & Co. 80 I. C. 969.

———Submission to—Revocation—Rights of parties.

In giving leave to revoke a submission to arbitration the Court should be satisfied that a substantial miscarriage of justice will take place in the event of its refusal. It would be contrary to justice to give leave to revoke a submission to a party who, as a consideration for a contract, had agreed to submit any disputes, whether of law or fact, which might arise, to arbitration, when he found the case going against him. The exercise of the power of giving leave to revoke is in general limited to cases where the arbitrators are exceeding their jurisdiction, or refusing jurisdiction, or failing to do all that their jurisdiction requires them to do, and the principle underlying the exercise of the power to revoke is, that the parties take the arbitrators for better or for worse, that their decision is final both as to law and fact, that unless a substantial miscarriage of justice may take place, leave ought not to be given, and it is no miscarriage of justice for a party to be injured by bad law which he has agreed to be bound by. ———Payment of money to—If amounts to payment to Court.

ARBITRATION ACT (IX of 1899), Ss. 4 and 9—Appointment of arbitrator—Acceptance—Formal reference—Misconduct—Reading documents in the absence of parties—Duty of.

Where in pursuance of an agreement, both parties appoint an arbitrator each, it is not necessary that there should be a reference in writing or that they should accept the appointment formally in writing. The fact that arbitrators peruse the relevant papers in the absence of parties does not amount to misconduct. They are judges of law and fact and an erroneous decision on a point of law will not justify interference. (Raymond, A. J. C.) JAMES FINLAY & Co. v. GURDAYAL PAHLAJRAI.

———S. 9—Communication of nomination—Effect—Refusal to act—Another arbitrator if can be appointed.

When according to the agreement an arbitrator has been nominated and the same is communicated to the other party in clear and unequivocal language, it ipso facto confers authority to arbitrate. If he refuses to act and the submission does not show that it was intended the vacancy should not be supplied. S. 8 provides for the appointment of another, but the right of the party to nominate is exhausted. (Aston, A. J. C.) RAMJIBHAI AND Co. v. YUSUFALI MAHOMEDALLI & BROTHERS. 76 I. C. 261 : 1925 S. 12.

———S. 8—Does not apply to independent appointment of second arbitrator.

Where the proposal to refer disputes to arbitration and the nomination of first arbitrator were abandoned owing to the assurance of one party to come to an amicable settlement and as the latter proved futile, there was fresh nomination of an arbitrator.

Held, that the nomination was not in the place of first arbitrator but an independent one and S. 8 did not apply. (Kennedy, J. C. and Raymond, A. J. C.) FIRM OF KHALSA BROS. v. HARIRAM SRIRAM & Co. 1924 S. 29.

———S. 9 (b)—Private arbitration—Bengal Chamber of Commerce—Authority to arbitrate.

Plaintiffs were sellers and defendants were buyers of white java sugar. The contract contained an arbitration clause which provided for arbitration under the rules of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce or at the option of the sellers, by two European sugar importers. The sellers exercised their option but did not appoint the arbitrators or take any further steps. The defendants submitted to the arbitration of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and there was an ex parte award. In a suit by plaintiffs to set aside the award, Held, that the election having been made and there being a procedure laid down by the Arbitration Act, which could and should have been followed in the absence of a different intention expressed in the submission, it was not open to the defendants to revert to arbitration by the Tribunal of Arbitration of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce had no authority to arbitrate and the award must be set aside. (Buckland, J.) SUNDERMULL PORSHRAM v. TRIBHUBAN HIRA CHAND & Co. 51 Cal. 657 : 82 I. ———S. 10 (b)—Case stated—Opinion of Court—If binding on arbitrators—Res judicata.

Where arbitrators appointed in a certain dispute state a case for the opinion of the Court, the order obtained thereon is not necessarily binding on them, as they still remain the final judges of fact and law. Nor can such order amount to a judgment or operate as res judicata. Distinction between the English and Indian Acts pointed out. (*Lobo, A. J. ARBITRATION ACT, S. 11.

—S. 11—Award—Writing and signature of arbitrators—Essential.

An award under S. 11 must be in writing and signed. Before reducing their award to writing the arbitrators must no doubt arrive at their decision; but having done so, they are bound to make an award in writing and signing of the award is not a mere formality. (Robinson, C. J. and May Oung, J.) LALJEE JAISING v. S. P. TAWARI, 3 But. L. J. 102 : 82 I. C. 802 : 1924 R. 319.

—S. 11—Scope. MANSA RAM v. KARTA RAM, 76 I. C. 1007.

—S. 12—Extension of time—Discretion—Exercise of.

Where an award is made out of time and the arbitrator applies for extension of time in order to validate it, the Court must take into consideration all the circumstances and decide if the indulgence should be shown. Where the award is open to grave suspicion of partiality and more than what is claimed is awarded, the Court can decline to extend the time. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) TRUSTEES OF THE FIRM MOTHARAM DOWLATRAM v. FIRM OF MAYADAS DOWLATRAM, 78 I. C. 521.

—S. 14—Misconduct—What is—Failure to give reasonable notice to party—Duty of Court.

The failure on the part of an arbitrator to give a reasonable opportunity to one of the parties to appear before him amounts to misconduct. But whether on account of this, the Court should set aside the award or remit it to the arbitrator, is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Court. Misconduct does not necessarily involve any moral turpitude, dishonesty, partiality or bias on the part of the arbitrator. (Raymond, A. J. C.) FIRM OF JAGGI & Co. v. FIRM OF GANGA RAM VISHENDAS, 76 I. C. 275 : 1924 S. 132.

—S. 14—Objections to award—Dismissal—Suit to set aside award on same grounds—Bar.

Where on an award being filed, objections are taken to it but they are dismissed, a suit to set aside the award on the same ground will be barred by res judicata. The arbitration court has exclusive jurisdiction to adjudicate on matters arising under S. 14. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) KHIMJI v. MT. NATHIBAI, 76 I. C. 953.

—S. 14—Objection to award—If can be partly reserved for decision of Civil Court.

It is not open to a party to move a Court to set aside an award only on some of his objections and to reserve other objections falling within the scope of S. 14 for a separate suit. The principle of constructive res judicata in S. 11, Expl. IV, C.P. Code, will apply. (Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.) KHIMJI v. MT. NATHIBAI, 76 I. C. 953.

—S. 14—Party to contract can file suit to set aside award regarding the contract.

A person dissatisfied with an award, made without the intervention of a Court of justice, is entitled to bring an action to set it aside on the ground that no contract providing for a reference to arbitration was made or that the contract if

—S. 19—Duty of Court—Stay of suit.

Where parties have agreed to refer disputes to arbitration there is a prima facie duty cast on courts, when a suit is filed in connection with a dispute, to act on such agreement and to stay the suit and the onus is on the plaintiff to show why he should not be bound by the agreement. The Court is vested with a discretion either to stay or not to stay the suit, but the discretion must be guided by judicial principles. (Raymond and Bilaram, A. J. Cs.) *MESSRS. —S. 19—Stay of suit pending arbitration—Discretion of Court—Charges of fraud.

Under S. 19 the Court has a discretion in the matter of staying actions pending an arbitration, which the Court is bound to exercise judicially and in accordance with certain well-settled rules. The prima facie leaning of the Court is to stay the action and leave the plaintiff to the tribunal to which he has agreed but the Court may, in its discretion, after considering all the circumstances of the case, refuse a stay on the ground that the matters in dispute between the parties involve the investigation of grave charges of fraud and may hold that in such circumstances arbitration is not the most suitable method of determining the questions raised between the parties. Where on the affidavits a prima facie case of fraud is made out, the action will be allowed to proceed, although it is the party alleging fraud that desires a public inquiry. (Ghose, J.) MAHARAJAH SIR MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDY v. H. V. LOW & Co., LTD.

—S. 19—Suit filed before arbitration began—Award come to during suit—Stay of suit not obtained—Award is not invalid but remains suspended till stay application is disposed of.

Where before the arbitration proceedings had begun, a suit had been filed in respect of the same matter and the award was come to during the pendency of the suit before any stay order was obtained. Held, that the mere fact of the suit being filed does not invalidate the arbitration proceedings, and it is for the Court to decide whether it should try the suit or not. It, however, an order under S. 19 of the Act to stay the suit is refused or if the party applying under that Act has by pleading in the suit waived his right of going into arbitration, the arbitration proceedings are invalidated and the Court alone is seized of the dispute. Therefore until the Court has made up its mind under S. 19, the arbitrators are not functi officio. But until that application is disposed of by Court staying the proceedings, the award could not be filed. The award of the arbitrators however is not a nullity and is not bad, but is in suspense. In such cases the correct order is to reject the award and order it to be re-presented after the Court disposes of the application under S. 19 or otherwise ceases to be seized of the case without adjudication on the merits. Per Aston, A. J. C.—It cannot be laid down as a principle that a party who has obtained an award after the institution of the suit and has applied for the stay of the suit, and for the filing of the award, has abandoned his rights under the arbitration, or that a Court which has refused to stay a suit has decided that it alone shall be seized of the dispute. BANKER AND CUSTOMER.

BANKER AND CUSTOMER—Clearing house—Provisional credit—Cheques subsequently dishonoured—Failure of Bank—Liability to refund—Liquidation.

The Imperial Bank of India at its Calcutta branch performed the functions of a clearing house to various other banks in the city and among its constituents were the Chartered Bank and the Alliance Bank. Certain cheques drawn on the Chartered Bank on 27—4—1923 were delivered to the Alliance Bank by some of the customers of the latter to the credit of their account. The cheques were sent to the Chartered Bank and according to the usual practice credits and debits were provisionally made by the Imperial Bank in the accounts of the aforesaid two banks. As a result of this, the Alliance Bank received provisional credit for the cheques delivered and the Chartered Bank was provisionally debited with the amount of the cheques. The cheques were dishonoured by the Chartered Bank and returned on the same day to the Alliance Bank giving sufficient reasons for the dishonour. The Alliance Bank handed to the Chartered Bank debit clearing vouchers in exchange for the cheques. As a result of these operations on 27—4—1923 the Chartered Bank held three debit clearing vouchers on the Alliance Bank amounting to Rs. 8,724. On 27—4—1923 the Alliance Bank suspended payment and consequently the Imperial Bank refused to put the three debit clearing vouchers through the clearing on the next day or to readjust the entries. The liquidator of the Alliance Bank refused to comply with the demand of the Chartered Bank that they should be paid the amount of the said three debit clearing vouchers in full. On an application made to the Court, held, that the cheques drawn on the Chartered Bank in favour of the Alliance Bank were not finally cleared and the moneys payable under the cheques were never in fact collected by the Alliance Bank in such a way as to enable them to claim the said money as part of their general assets. Under the circumstances there was no relationship of debtor and creditor as between the Alliance Bank and the persons who had drawn the cheques in question. Consequently the liquidator of the Alliance Bank was liable to repay the full amount claimed by the Chartered Bank. The position of the Alliance Bank when they received the cheques in question from their customers for credit of their accounts was that of agents for collection, because of the fact that after the dishonour of the cheques in question by the Chartered Bank the Alliance Bank reversed original credit to their constituents' accounts in respect of these very cheques. BANKER AND CUSTOMER.

A letter of credit (sometimes called a bill of credit) is an open letter of request whereby one person (usually a merchant or banker) requests some other person or persons to advance moneys or give credit to a third person named therein for a certain amount and promises that he will repay the same to the person advancing the same or accepts bills drawn upon himself for the like amount. It is called a general letter of credit when it is addressed to all merchants or other persons in general requesting such advance to a third person, and it is called a special letter of credit, when it is addressed to a particular person by name, requesting him to make such advance to a third person. While no set form of words may be necessary, yet a letter of credit as known to the law must contain a request (general or special) to pay the bearer or person named money or sell him some commodity on credit or give him something of value and look to the drawer of the letter for recompense, and it partakes of the nature of a negotiable instrument. The rules governing bills of exchange and negotiable promissory notes are always the same, fixed and determinate; while letters of credit are to be construed with reference to particular and often varying terms in which they may be expressed, the circumstances and intentions of the parties to them and the usages of the particular trade or business contemplated.

Plaintiff, a Calcutta merchant, sold goods to a buyer in England and sued the deft. bank on the strength of a document by the latter in these terms, "We beg to inform you that we are in receipt of advice by wire from our London office that a confirmed irrevocable credit has been opened under which we are authorised to negotiate your bills, as offered on M. G. & Co. (buyers) of London to the extent of 16,875 on the following conditions: "Bills to be drawn three months after sight and to be accompanied by proper shipping documents representing shipment of 2,000 bales of jute of a particular mark from Calcutta to Antwerp during November-December 1920." Among the conditions were: (1) "Please note that this advice does not release you from the liability attaching to the drawers of a bill of exchange," and (2) "under present conditions we can give no undertaking to negotiate bills drawn under this credit." Held, that the purpose of the document was to facilitate negotiation and not to furnish an ultimate guarantee, that the document was not intended to be an ordinary banker's credit and that the plaintiff's claim against the bank was not sustainable. Bankers have a general lien on all security deposited with them by a customer. Unless there be an express or implied contract inconsistent with it they can set off what is due to a customer on one account against what is due from him on another account although the moneys due to him may in fact belong to other persons. But they cannot claim a lien on securities delivered to them

BENAMI—Presumption exists that purchase is for benefit of person providing purchase money—But presumption is strong or weak according to circumstances and is rebuttable—Trusts Act, S. 82.

Where property is acquired in the name of one person but the purchase price is paid by another, a presumption arises that the transaction is one for the benefit of the person providing the money. (6 M. I. A. 53, 42 I. A. 202, 45 I. A. 97, 46 I. A. 1 and 1923 Cal. 228, Ref. to.) But apart from the fact that the presumption is rebuttable, its strength or weakness can only be gauged by reference to all the surrounding circumstances.

Per Mullick, J.—It is true the payment of the consideration money is not everything in a case of Benami. But after all it is a question of fact whether the payment of the money was a gift or a transaction for the benefit of the owner of the money. There is no question of presumption or of onus of proof; the matter is simply one of balance of evidence.

Per Foster, J.—Where the cost of acquisition has a double source and is only in part traceable to the plaintiff, the Court should, in the absence of an unambiguous criterion of ownership, take into consideration the surrounding circumstances, the position of the parties, and their relation to one another, the motives which could govern their actions, and their subsequent conduct including their dealings with or enjoyment of the disputed property. There is no presumption on either side, 1924 Cal. 228; 35 I. A. 104; 30 All. 258 and 14 M. I. A. 433, Folk. (Dawson Miller, C. J., Mullick and Foster, JJ.) HARIHAR PRASAD v. KESHEO PRASAD.

—Persons dealing with benamidar—Notice of real title—Mortgage by benamidars—Money applied for averting sale of property in execution of decree against the real owner—Rights of mortgagee

Where subsequent to the acquisition of the property, both the husband and wife dealt with it jointly and the husband was also occupying a house forning a part of the acquisition and there were disputes in Court where the husband asserted his exclusive title to the acquisition, a person who having notice of these facts takes a mortgage of the property from the wife or her son as her legal representative without reference to the husband and without enquiry into the real state of the title, is not protected by S. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. But where a portion of the money advanced by the mortgagee was deposited in Court under O. 21, R. 89, C. P. Code, to prevent the confirmation of a sale of the property held in execution of a joint decree obtained against the husband, the wife and their son, the mortgagee is to that extent entitled to a charge on the property as against the husband, the real owner and persons claiming title under him. 36 M. 272, 276; 36 M. 426; 17 L. W. 254 referred to

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—Where the property is sold in execution of a decree against the real owner and the benamidar raises money for the purpose of setting aside the sale, it is contrary to all equitable principles to hold that the real owner who took no steps to avert the sale could step in afterwards and claim the property free from any obligation to repay the money borrowed by the benamidar for setting aside the sale. BENAMI TRANSACTION—Burden of proof—Length of time, how far material.

A party cannot be relieved from the burden of proving the benami nature of the transaction by merely showing that a large proportion of the consideration was paid by the real purchaser. —Sale-deed in the name of wife—Presumption of advancement—Indian and English law, difference between—Test—Source of purchase money—Surrounding circumstances.

Benami transactions are by no means unusual in India. Where a transfer has been made ostensibly in favour of a wife or son, there will not, in dealing with Indians, be the same presumption of advancement as there would be in the case of English people.

No doubt the criterion in cases of benami transaction in India is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase is made. But this is subject to the qualification that it is to be accepted as the criterion "in the absence of all other relevant circumstances." 37 A. 557, Ref. to. (Kendall and Pullan, A. J. Cs.) *MT. BENGAL ALLUVION AND DILUVION ACT (IX OF 1847), Ss. 1, 3 and 6—Scope and effect of—Assessment of charland—Suit to set aside—Limitation—Bengal Regulation II of 1819, Ss. 24 and 31.

Act IX of 1847 was framed with a view to substitute, in cases of assessment of alluvial lands a simpler procedure than that embodied in Regn. II of 1819, which was intended to apply in the main to resumption of lands held free of assessment, without the sanction of the proper authorities or under illegal or invalid tenures. The expression "any such new map" in S. 6 of Act IX of 1847 refers to the new map made according to "new survey" as contemplated in S. 3. That section provides for periodical surveys at intervals of not less than ten years after a revenue survey has been completed and approved. The object of the "new survey" is to ascertain the "changes" that may have taken place since the date of the last previous survey by alluvion or dereliction (not changes by possession). S. 6 then imposes upon the revenue authorities the duty to assess what may be called added land, whenever, on inspection of the new map, it appears that land has been added to an estate paying revenue directly to Government. There must consequently be a comparison between two maps made at an interval of not less than 10 years and each showing the revenue paying estate concerned. That estate must accordingly be in existence as a revenue-paying estate, if not before, at least on the date of the first of the two maps taken as the basis for compensation. It is only when on an inspection of the new maps it appears that land has been added, that there is legislative authority for the assessment of additional revenue. The procedure contemplated by Act IX of 1847 is fundamentally different from that provided by Regn. II of 1819. The change had been rendered feasible, chiefly by reason of the progress of the survey operations throughout the province. The survey operations conducted by Major Rennel had not been undertaken for revenue purposes, and it was only during the first half of the 19th century that surveys of different types (Khasra, Thakbust and Revenue) were systematically carried out with a view to define every estate on the Collector's rent roll and to determine the relation of land to jama or revenue by the ascertainment of the areas and boundaries of estates or mahals. The system of assessment inaugurated in 1847 could not have been even contemplated in 1819. Two such systems, so radically distinct, cannot possibly be amalgamated.

A suit was instituted on 29-6-1915 for a declaration that certain land was not "added land" within S. 6 of Act IX of 1847 and that the assessment thereon was ultra vires. The revenue authorities had levied an assessment on the footing that the lands had been gained by alluvion from a river. The assessment was approved by the Board of Revenue on 28-11-1912 and a notice of the date 20-2-1913 was served on the plaintiffs on 15-3-1913 informing them of the assessment. A petition for review put in by the plaintiffs had been rejected on 29-6-1914. It was contended for the defendant (Secretary of State) that S. 24 of Regn. II of 1819 was applicable to the case and that the suit was barred either under that section or under Art. 14 of the Lim. Act. Held, that the suit was not based under either provision, as none of them was applicable to the case. 24 C.W. N. 813 dissented from. (Mookenjee and Rankin, JJ.) PEARY LAL RAY CHOWDHURI v. The proprietor is of course bound by the notice under S. 17 to state the whole area of his estate, and the fact that land is temporarily diluviated does not remove it from the area to be accounted for. On the other hand, the explanation is one that ought to be properly examined, and the assessment made on the facts ascertained. (Morshead, M. C.) KESHO NARAIN SINGH v. EMPEROR. 2 Pat. BENGAL COURT OF WARDS ACT—Manager—Lease for more than ten years—Grant of—Conditional acceptance of rent—Effect of—Subsequent suit by wards for ejectment.

In 1906 the General Manager of the Court of Wards granted a patta in respect of land measuring about 800 bighas in favour of the defendants. Before the grant the Manager wrote to the Collector proposing a settlement for a term of ten years with the defendants on condition that they should pay a progressive rent, construct and maintain embankments at their own expense. On a report made by the Collector, the Commissioner accorded sanction. The patta granted to the defendants by the Manager contained a clause authorising the defendants to acquire a right of occupancy in the land and giving the Court of Wards no power either to dispossess them from the land at will or to enhance the rent thereof without recourse to law. The patta also recited that the rights thereunder would vest in the heirs of the grantees. After the expiry of the term of ten years the General Manager of the Court of Wards, acting as guardian of the Wards, sued in ejectment.

Held, that the lease in so far as it purported to confer permanent rights of occupancy or to create a term exceeding ten years, was void as against the plaintiffs. The Manager had no authority to grant a lease so as to enure for more than ten years and the lease was therefore void in so far as it exceeded that limit. The defendants however were entitled to compensation for the embankments they have constructed and the improvements they had effected. But where nothing is known as to the time of the erection of the embankment, no presumption arises that the embankment stands on a site which was included within the estate of the depts. at the time of the Permanent Settlement. If the Government revenue is payable in June according to the original settlement and kistbandi of the mahal it does not become an arrear of revenue until the 1st of July. The Collector should not put up an estate for sale unless there is an arrear of revenue in respect of that estate and unless the latest date of payment fixed by the Board of Revenue has expired and the default has not been made good. It is impossible to take the view that the 7th June, which is the latest date fixed for payment by the Board of Revenue under S. 3 of the Act, is also the date upon which the kist or instalment was payable for June according to the original settlement and kistbandi of the mahal.

Whenever a person seeks to have a revenue sale set aside on the ground that there was no authority in the Collector to sell an estate having regard to the fact that the latest date fixed for payment by the Board of Revenue had not expired at the date when the property was put up for sale he should, in order to enable the Court to decide the point, give the dates of the revenue kists according to the original settlement and kistbandi. Where a revenue sale has been held contrary to the provisions of Ss. 3 and 6 of the Bengal Revenue Sales Law, no grounds of objection are open to the plaintiff in a suit to set aside the sale which have not been declared and specified in an appeal to the Commissioner.

Where the area in one of the villages sought to be sold was not properly described in the sale notification, the misdescription does not affect the existence of the jurisdiction in the Collector to sell the property but merely affects the exercise of his jurisdiction.

Though the view of the majority of the Judges in 2 Pat. L. J. 462 was erroneous still the Division Bench felt bound to follow the said opinion. (Das and Macpherson, JJ.) JAGDISHWAL NARAYAN v. MD. HAZIQ HUSSAIN. 1924 P. H. C. C. 142 :

S. 34 of the Bengal Rev. Sales Law applies only where a sale held under Act XI of 1859 is annulled by a final decree of a civil court; in other words, where a suit is brought under the provisions of S. 33 of the Act, and a civil court annuls the sale on any of the grounds mentioned in S. 33 of the Act an execution petition must be presented within 6 months after the date of the decree; but where the suit is not one under the provisions of S. 33 or Act XI of 1859, S. 34 has no operation whatever. There is a clear distinction between a case where a sale is annulled and a case where the Court authoritatively recognises that there was no sale at all, and consequently disregards it and proceeds to give a decree for possession to plff. Where the sale is authorised, but there is a direct violation of the statutory possession in conducting the sale, the suit must be one for annulment of the sale, and the Court has complete power to set aside the sale, provided the requirements of S. 33 are complied with. But where the sale is not authorised there is in law, no sale, and there being nothing to annul, all that the Civil Court does is to recognise that there is no sale and to pass a decree for possession in favour of plaintiff. S. 33 applies to a case where the sale is authorised, but is attended with some illegality or irregularity and S. 33 affords a complete protection to such sales, although they have been attended with illegality or irregularity, unless the conditions specified in S. 33 are fulfilled and the procedure indicated in that section is adopted. But where there is no authority whatever for the sale S. 33 has no operation; and the Court in dealing with a case where there is an entire absence of jurisdiction in the Collector to put up the property to sale does not annul the sale but recognises authoritatively that there was no sale at all. MUNSHI RAM v. NAURANGA. 1924 Lah. 176.

—S. 1—Foreclosure proceedings—Action of District Judge if judicial or ministerial.

Though the functions to be exercised by the Dt. Judge under the Regulation (XVII of 1806) are ministerial and not judicial, there can also be no doubt that a District Judge assumes judicial functions when he proceeds to determine whether he has or has not the jurisdiction to issue a notice. Consequently his order issuing a notice overruling an objection to his jurisdiction is open to revision by the High Court. (Moti Sagar, J.) NAND KISHORE v. NARAIN SINGH. 6 Lah. L. J. 137 : 78 I. A patwari who has been registered under Regn. XII of 1817 can recover his dues under the Regulation only and a civil suit for the purpose is barred by S. 34. (Morshead, M. C.) RAMCHANDAR LAL v. MAHABIR ROY. 2 Pat. L. R. 112 (Cr.).

—(XVIII OF 1825), S. 4 (1)—Diara lands—Accretion—Separate suit for rent—Howla tenure.

Land accreted to a rent-free tenure is liable to the payment of rent though the tenure to which it is accreted may be rent free. The rate of rent of land accreted to a rent-paying tenure may not be the same as that of the original tenure having regard to the quality of the land. Where the proprietor of an estate declines to take settlement from the Government, the accreted portion must be settled with some other person and such other person must necessarily bring a separate suit for rent for the accreted land held by the tenant. When the proprietor takes a settlement from the Govt. of the accretion as a separate estate and such estate is sold away to a third person such person would certainly be entitled to maintain a separate suit for rent for the accreted portion. These considerations show the difficulty of affirming a general proposition that in no case can a separate suit for rent be maintained for the accreted lands.

Where the accreted lands were formed subsequent to the creation of the parent howla tenure and they were not only constituted a separate estate between the Government and the proprietor but the diara lands were separated and formed into new tenancies recorded in the settlement khewats and the parties treated the accreted lands as separate tenures by suing for rents separately, Held, that a separate suit for rent for the accreted lands is maintainable. — (XI OF 1832), S. 4—Accretion to be slow and gradual.

An accretion to be gradual, must be an accretion by gradual, slow and imperceptible means. Where a field received by alluvion an area which was considerable in proportion to the area of permanent field and came under cultivation afresh in one year the accretion is not gradual. BENGAL TENANCY ACT (VIII OF 1885)—Applicability—Lease—If for agricultural purpose or not—Test.

To find out the exact nature of a lease, reference should be made to all its terms and the surrounding circumstances. Where though there was no statement that the lands were let out for an agricultural purpose, it recited a progressive increment in rent as more and more lands came under cultivation and there were irrigation facilities provided, the B. T. Act governs the case. (Mookerji, J.) MAHOMED SULAIMAN KHAN v. UMA CHARAN SIL. 79 I. C. 648.

—Suit for rent against common Manager—Sanction of Dt. Court—If necessary.

There is no provision in the B. T. Act which requires the previous sanction of the District Judge to be obtained in order to bring a suit for rent against a common Manager or to execute a decree obtained in such a suit. An execution Court is bound to execute such a decree without going into the question. (Pearson and Graham, JJ.) SARAT CHANDRA GHOSE v. RAJ KUMAR CHAKRAVARTI. 82 I. C. 327.

—S. 3—Applicability of—Homestead—Agricultural land—Sub-tenancy.

In the absence of a local custom or usage, the homestead portion of an agricultural holding is governed by the provisions of the Bengal Ten. Act, precisely in the same manner as the portion under actual cultivation. The question whether a case of this description is governed by the B. T. Act or the T. P. Act depends on the nature of the original tenancy and not on the character of the parcels included in the sub-tenancy. 15 C. L. J. 672; 21 C. L. J. 475, Rel. It is not necessary to investigate the actual origin of the tenancy: it is sufficient if it is established that at the time of the sub-lease, the holding, out of which the sub-tenancy was carved out, was an agricultural holding. The Bengal Ten. Act purports to deal principally with raiyati lands and to deal with the relationship between landlord and tenant. The private lands of the proprietor are wholly outside the scope of the B. T. Act and settlement of those lands are governed not by the B. T. Act but by the T. P. Act. Consequently where tenants have been let into possession of Zerai lands under registered leases for a term of years they cannot acquire occupancy rights in them during the continuance of the lease. After the expiry of the lease they hold over under the same conditions as a lessee holding over by virtue of the provisions of S. 116 of the T. P. Act. They became tenants from year to year. Such tenants cannot acquire occupancy rights and S. 116 of the B. T. Act applies to the case and the tenants are liable to ejectment in a suit brought within 12 years of the expiry of the lease. The entry of certain lands in the Record of Rights as "Zerai qaimi", "Zerai dakhilkar" and "Zerai gair dakhilkar" is to be deemed to be correct until the contrary is proved and the burden is on those impeaching the correctness of the entry. The expression "Zerai gair dakhilkar" would be descriptive of the status of a tenant who has acquired non-occupancy rights in respect of Zerai land. "Qaimi" means a "settled raiyat" and "Zerai" means a proprietor's private lands. The expressions "Zerai qaimi" and "dakhilkar" have been explained as descriptive of the status of a tenant who has acquired occupancy rights in respect of Zerai lands with the following note "as he (the tenant) can have only occupancy and settled rights in respect of such lands, the entry Zerai qaimi is not so correct from a technical point of view as Zerai dakhilkar". —Ss. 5 and 48—Zarpeshgi lease—Rights of lessee—Mortgagor executing a Kabuliyat to lessee—Status of.

A Zarpeshgi is an instrument of mortgage and not a lease. The sum advanced by the Zarpeshgidar is not rent payable in advance for a certain period at the end of which the land was to be delivered up to the lessor. The profits after deducting the proportionate amount of rent payable to the landlord were to be taken as interest on the principal sum and even at the end of the term the Zarpeshgidar was to remain in possession upon the same conditions until the principal sum should be repaid; and the property was hypothecated for repayment of the loan in the event of the Zarpeshgidar being dispossessed. Held, that the Zarpeshgidar was not a tenant of the mortgagor and is not a raiyat within S. 5 (3) of the B. T. Act. If the mortgagor executes a Kabuliyat in favour of the mortgagee the former does not become a tenant holding mediately or immediately under a raiyat within S. 48 of the B. T. Act. 2 C. W. There is nothing in the Land Registration Act to require a mokurraridar to be registered or to prevent him from realising rent pending registration. The bar to realisation of rent imposed by S. 16 does not therefore affect purchasers of a mokurraridar's interest pending commutation proceedings although as a matter of fact they had gone beyond the requirements of the law, and had actually gone through the procedure for service of notice through the Collector, as if they had acquired the tenure by succession. There is no objection on principles why a co-sharer landlord may not in the presence of the other co-sharers who are incompetent to realise their rent sue for his rent and recover it although there had been no separate collection before. The co-sharers may at any time start separate collection of their rent without any reference to the tenants and when a suit is brought for a share of the rent making all the co-sharers parties and the plaintiff's share in the property is established there is no reason why the plaintiffs in a suit properly framed should not get their shares of rent. The word "village" means an area defined, surveyed and recorded as a distinct and separate village in one or other of three ways. The first refers to the general land revenue survey which had been made of the Province of Bengal. The second and third look forward to the future. In order that an occupancy right may be acquired the land must be held in a village for a period of 12 years and if the land has not been comprised in the statutory sense, the condition of acquisition of the occupancy right has not been complied with. Where in respect of lands situated in the Sunderbans no notice was issued by the Collector declaring the area as constituting villages until 1912 and the tenants claimed that they had remained in possession for more than 12 years before the date of suit in 1919, Held, that the tenants had not acquired any right of occupancy

An application for commutation of grain rent into cash was made in March 1922 but it was not until January 1923 that the landlords filed a written statement, and in this there was no reference whatever to the requirements of any idol. The proceedings then went on with various interruptions, but without any contention even in the witnesses' statements, that commutation would affect the service of the idol. The ground was first emphasised and accepted in the Revenue Officer's final order and would appear to have been urged only at the latest stage of the proceedings. Held, that it was not an unreasonable inference that the objection was taken in the last resort, owing to the apprehension that commutation would result in a lower rate of rent than the landlords were willing to accept, and that commutation should be ordered. BENGAL TENANCY ACT, S. 40.

———S. 40—Commutation of rent—Principle to be borne in mind—Cash rents—Actual realisations.

The law prescribes two factors, viz., actual realisations for the past 10 years and comparative cash rents to which the Revenue Officer is to have regard in making the commutation. It does not debar the consideration of other facts but it gives these two an unquestionable prominence. When a landlord has been content for 10 years or so to accept a certain sum, he is not entitled to come forward at the end of the period and say "It is true that I have only been able to collect so much all these years but I might have collected a great deal more had I looked after my interests better, instead of allowing the ryots or my servants to take advantage of me." The landlord must in ordinary cases be held to be bound by his own standard of collection. It does not matter what proportion of holdings is cultivated so long as it is known what the holding actually brought in. Of course the extent of cultivation may be a matter of considerable importance should there be evidence of systematic neglect by the raiyats to cultivate the land properly. (*Morshead, M. ———S. 40—Commutation of rent—Average—Fair rent—How fixed.

Chauraha rents are essentially different from ordinary bhaoli rents. Cash rents and commuted bhaoli rent in the vicinity will be taken into account in commutation cases, but there is no reason why an average between them and the chauraha rents should be taken or indeed that the commuted chauraha rents need be reduced at all in consequence of a comparison. Under S. 40 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the Revenue Officer has not the power of fixing fair rents, but is bound to give the landlord what he thinks is the reasonable equivalent of what he has been receiving in produce rents. The object of the resort to crop cuttings in a commutation case is to estimate in the absence of reliable accounts what the average annual realisations of the landlord during the past 10 years may have been. In using the forecasts regard should be had not to the theoretical normal but to the actual normal of the preceding 10 years. Forecast estimates are of doubtful reliability and must not be rigidly applied. The rate of deduction on account of risk of season and cartage, etc., depend primarily on evidence in the case and a hard and fast rate is not one that can be safely prescribed. (*Morshead, I. C. As regards the question whether commutation should be based on the landlord's actual realisations or whether it should be based on what he might reasonably demand but has not actually realised, Held, that the landlord could not expect to get more than what he has been in the habit of realising unless he can make out some special justification for a higher rate. Rent receipts produced by the tenants and admitted by the landlord supply a fairly substantial basis. The landlord must show some reason beyond his own control for realising less than what he might have realised before he can be entitled to a higher rent. (Morshead, M. C.) RAMPRIT OJHA v. An under-riyati whose tenancy was for an unlimited time and not evidenced by any writing was sought to be ejected. The landlord and the under-riyati compromised the suit, the latter agreeing to pay a sum of Rs. 20 as premium in addition to the annual rent of Rs. 12-8-0 and a premium of Rs. 44 at the end of every nine years. In case of default in payment of the premium the tenant was liable to be ejected. Held, in a subsequent suit by the landlord to eject the tenant on the ground of default in the payment of premium, that the consent decree did not have the effect of transferring the tenancy which at its inception was for an unlimited time into a tenancy for a term governed by a written lease under S. 49 of the B. T. Act; and that the tenant could be ejected only after a notice as contemplated in S. 49 (b) and in execution of a decree. In view of the provisions of S. 178, sub-s (1), cl. (c) of B. T. Act the stipulation in the compromise for ejectment on default of payment of the premium was of no avail and it was not open to the landlord and tenant to contract themselves out of the provisions of S. 49 of the B. T. Act. Where a decree has been made by consent on the basis of a petition for compromise, the contract of the parties is not the less a contract and subject to incidents of a contract, because there is superadded the command of the Judge. BENGAL TENANCY ACT, S. 50 (2).

Settlement Officer directed that the defendants, the tenure holders, should be entered in the record of rights as tenure holders and nothing more. They were so entered and no entry was made as provided in S. 102 as to whether they were permanent tenure holders or not or whether the rent was liable to enhancement during the continuance of the tenancy. The whole question was apparently left open. The particulars referred to in S. 102 were not in fact entered in the record of rights. In the decision which was come to in that dispute under S. 103A the Assistant Settlement Officer stated that there was no evidence of the rent being fixed for ever and under the circumstances he merely ordered the defendants' names to be entered as tenure holders. Held that the decision of the Assistant Settlement Officer could not be regarded as a substantive part of the record of rights and the record of rights could not be read as if it stated that the defendants (tenants) were not in fact tenure-holders at a fixed rate. The presumption arising under S. 50 only ceases to apply by reason of S. 115 when the particulars required by the order of the Local Government directing the survey and record of rights to be prepared have been in fact recorded. It would not be right to presume that the entry in the record of rights meant to record anything more than what was actually recorded and where the question is left open as to whether they are permanent tenure-holders or whether the rent is liable to enhancement or not there is nothing in the record itself to throw light on the matter.

Where for the last 20 years and before the defendants (tenants) have been paying the same rent, it may be presumed that their rent is not liable to enhancement especially where they are recorded as tenure-holders. (Dawson Miller, C. J. and Mullick, J.)

In a suit for enhancement of rent under S. 7 of the B. T. Act, record of rights with regard to the tenancy was finally published on 2-8-5 1918. The record was that it was a Qaimi tenure but not Mokarrari. Held, that having regard to the provisions of S. 115 of the B. T. Act as it had been recorded under Ch. X of the Act, that the tenancy was not Mokarrari, the presumption under S. 50 cannot apply to the tenancy. It cannot be held in a case brought under the B. T. Act that any presumption arises as to the fixity of rent from mere payment of the same rate of rent for a number of years apart from the presumption arising under S. 50 of the Act. To hold otherwise would be to require every landlord to enhance the rent of every tenant under him at certain intervals of time which he might not himself desire to do. Sec. 50, cl. (2) lays down that the presumption under it would arise if it is proved in any suit or other proceeding that a tenant and his predecessor-in-interest have held at a rent or rate of rent which has not been changed during the 20 years immediately before the institution of the suit or proceeding. It is not necessary to prove actual payment of rent provided the tenancy is held at a uniform rent or rate of rent for 20 years before the suit. It is difficult, however, to see how it can be said that a particular rent is payable when that rent is not payable according to custom in the years of flood.

In cases of pure hajabadi tenancies no rent is paid at all in years of flood not because the landlord does not realise it, but according to some custom he cannot realise it. The expression "rent" is defined in the Act as something lawfully payable or deliverable to the landlord for the use and occupation of the land. Under the custom the rent lawfully payable for a particular year in which there is flood is not the full rent but a lesser sum, in respect of the mixed tenancies. The landlord cannot sue the tenant in a Court of law for rent in respect of the hajabadi tenancies nor the full rent of mixed tenancies in the years of flood. Sec. 50, cl. (2) was intended to apply to cases like these where under a custom a tenant gets an abatement of rent from the landlord. (Chatterjee and Pantou, JJ.) BIJOY CHAND MAHATAB v. AKHIL BHUIA.

There was a record of rights of the mouzah in which a tank was situated, under Chap. X. The tank was recorded as within the tenancy of the plaintiffs, but it was also recorded that the defendants would be entitled to rear fishes and use the water of the tank. But the plaintiffs said that the defendants have no right to rear fishes in the tank and the record of rights was erroneous to that extent. The suit has been brought for a declaratory decree as provided in the proviso to Sec. 111-A. The defendant No. 1 contested the suit and he pleaded that he and his predecessors before him were the proprietors of 6-annas share of the tank and another person was the proprietor of the remaining 10-annas share and he further pleaded that he and his ancestors have been exercising possession over the 6 annas share of the tank for the last 50 years by using its water and rearing and catching fishes. The lower Court dismissed the suit entirely, holding against the plaintiffs that they had no cause of action. Held, that the record, if allowed to stand, restricted the absolute ownership of the plaintiffs and disentitled them from excluding the defendants from exercising some acts of possession. They had therefore the right to complain against the entry in the record of rights and this gave them a good cause of action. (Newbould and Ghose, JJ.) CHAND MIA MUNSHI v. TUKAMIA.

The fact that a mortgage suit or any other suit has been instituted by the incumbrancer cannot deprive the auction purchaser of his right to annul the incumbrance under the Bengal Tenancy Act if the application is made within the time prescribed by the section, that is to say, within one year of the date of the sale or the date on which the purchaser first had notice of the incumbrance. Under S. 167 (3) once the Collector has issued the notice the incumbrance must be deemed to have been annulled. This does not mean that the validity of the decree and the consequent annulment of the incumbrance cannot afterwards be called in question. The effect of the section is to cast the burden of proof upon the person questioning the validity of the notice. It is incumbent on the plaintiffs (mortgagees of the occupancy holding) to prove that the landlord had in fact notice of the incumbrance more than 12 months before he made the application to the Collector. The Certificate Officer then acted on the advice given to the Secretary of State. Held, that it was not a judicial proceeding of the nature contemplated in S. 29 of the Act, and was without jurisdiction.

BILL OF LADING—"At merchant's risk"—Meaning of—Exemption from general average contribution—Insertion to be conspicuous.

The object of a bill of lading is to provide for the rights and liabilities of the parties in reference to the contract to carry and it is not concerned with liabilities to contribution in general average. The question whether an exemption clause covers the liability to contribution in general average in a case of proper jettison depends on the intention of the parties. If the shipowner wishes to relieve himself, he must do so in clear words.

The words "At merchant's risk" will not exempt a shipowner from liability to contribution in the case of a proper jettison but would exempt him from liability in the case of an improper jettison. It will also cover a case of loss caused by a collusion or stranding owing to the negligence of master or crew.

If the shipowner wishes to introduce into the Bill of Lading a novel clause exempting him from general average contribution, he must make it clear in words pointed conspicuously so that a person of ordinary capacity and care could not fail to see it. BILL OF LADING.

—Exemption clause—Perils of the sea—Burden of proof—Negligence—What is—Damage by sea water—Liability for.

Where a bill of lading contains the usual exemption clause as regards the liability for acts of God, King's enemies and the perils of the sea, in a suit by the consignee for damages for loss of goods, etc., the defendant ship-owner must plead and prove "perils of the sea" if that is his defence. If he makes out a prima facie case plaintiff can rebut it by proving negligence on the part of the defendant.

In deciding what amounts to negligence, the mere fact that the accident might have been avoided by greater foresight does not make it negligence. If reasonable care is taken, the perils of the sea while not including the effects of mere ordinary wear and tear will include the consequences of any kind of accident ending in damage by sea water. The Municipality, however, granted permission to build the house, but refused permission to erect a privy. Some time thereafter, the applicant put up the privy in question on the site of the old privy. It was found that this was substantially a reconstruction of the privy. The applicant was prosecuted by the Municipality for having committed a breach of bye-law No. 9 of the Municipal Bye-laws, which was in these terms:—"After the completion of the privy the owner shall communicate the same to the Chairman of the Managing Committee and no person shall commence to make use of the privy unless he obtains a written order to that effect from the Chairman of the Managing Committee." Held, that the communication required by the bye-law in question had reference to a privy in respect of which an application had been made under Rule 7 and for which permission had been granted under Rule 8. There was in this case no obligation on the part of the applicant to communicate the fact of the completion of the privy to the Chairman, nor was he under any obligation not to commence to make use of the privy before obtaining the written order to that effect from the Chairman of the Managing Committee. BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT, Ss. 25-A and 26

—Notification altering previous notification not legal.

The Government have no power under Ss. 25 and 26 to call upon A to pay for B as an agent of B. Where plaintiffs were regarded as agents, but the effect of the notification in law was clearly to impose a new tax on the plaintiffs. Held, so long as in substance it is a tax or rate on another class of persons living within the area concerned, it is within the legal authority of the Government. An obligatory provision in the statute cannot be allowed to be ignored without adequate grounds. Where the tax or rate may be legal its recovery by the Collector cannot be illegal. At least where it is partially legal for the Collector to collect, for the rest the direct reference to the Collector is in the nature of an irregularity, which cannot affect the legality of the tax. The express provision as to finality would apparently exclude the application of S. 21 of the General Clauses Act. It is difficult to reconcile this provision as to finality with the idea of the Collector being able to vary it from time to time. S. 25-A does not provide for any enquiry as to orders under S. 25 A (1) (b). The words "after such inquiry as he deems necessary" are to be found in sub-section (1), clause (a) and do not govern clause (b). The omission to hold an inquiry which was only departmentally arranged is not sufficient to vitiate the direction given by him under S. 25 A (1) (b). The provisions of S. 79 of the District Police Act would condone such an irregularity in procedure.

BOM. DT. POLICE ACT, S. 25 A.

With the previous sanction of the Commissioner and subject again to revision by him the District Magistrate may pass a fresh order.

Per Kemp, J.—In effect he thus obtains the revision of the reviewing authority. The scheme of the section is to make the Commissioner and not the Court the reviewing authority. The finality provided for in an order under S. 25-A, clause (4), of Bombay Act IV of 1890 means to give a final effect to the ultimate order that the District Magistrate with the previous assent of the Commissioner may, subject to revision by the Commissioner or in accordance with any such revision, pass. Cl. (4) is not intended to exclude the powers which by S. 21 of the Bombay Act I of 1904 are included in a power to issue an order. S. 25-A does not require the rate for compensation to be assessed on property although the word "rate" would seem to imply the ownership of property. S. 25-A is not intended to permit the Court to enquire into the question of who were the persons really responsible for doing the objectionable acts. (*Shah, A. C. Besides S. 81 provides an additional remedy which the party concerned may follow; but it does not bar a suit which may be otherwise open to the party to file. (*Shah, A. C. BOMBAY KHOTI SETTLEMENT ACT (I OF 1865), Ss. 37 and 38—Khoti tenure—Incidence of—Execution of Kabuliyat to Government—Liability of Khot.

Khoti tenure is a customary tenure which dates back from the time of the 18th century or earlier and its incidence as prescribed by custom are nowhere defined and differ in different villages. The origin of the tenure was probably due to the difficulty experienced by the Government of the time in collecting the revenues of the villages in the Konkan. Consequently the Government entered into agreement with certain persons that they should collect the revenue, and the agreement was to be according to the custom of the country. When the British Government took possession of the Konkan about the year 1818, agreements were entered into between the Government and the farmers or khots with regard to the payment of the assessment by the khot to the Government. At first the agreements merely stated that the khot was responsible for the assessment since the main object of the Government was to secure for themselves the land revenue of the village. Later on in order to provide for the due administration of the village and to protect the tenants against the exactions of the khots, it was found necessary to amplify the terms of the agreement but the fact remained that it became an established custom for each khot to enter into an annual agreement with the Government of Bombay, Act I of 1865, especially Ss. 37 and 38, were particularly applicable to khoti villages. In 1915-16 the Government offered to the plff. a khot of a village in the Kolaba District, a Kabuliyat differing in certain respects from the annual Kabuliyat that had been previously executed. One of the clauses contained in the Kabuliyat tendered by the Government empowered a permanent tenant of Khot nisbat land to compel the khot either to consent to a transfer or to take up the land himself and another clause required the khot to keep the land at the disposal of a dharekari who had deserted. The khot having refused to pass the Kabuliyat in the new form, the Government attached the khoti village. Thereupon the khot sued the Government for a declaration of his right and for mesne profits, held, that the clauses sought to be inserted by the Government in the Kabuliyat were of an objectionable nature and that the attachment of the village for the refusal of the khot to execute such a Kabuliyat was illegal and that the khot was entitled to a declaration of his right and mesne profits. Dharekari lands are in the occupation of tenants having permanent heritable and transferable rights paying to the khot the Government assessment only. Non-Dharekari lands are generally spoken of as Khoti lands which are either Khoti-nisbat or Khoti-khasgi. Khoti-nisbat lands may be held by permanent tenants who have hereditary but not transferable rights, or by non-permanent tenants, all of whom pay to the Khot in addition to the assessment, Fayda which is fixed according to the terms of the application to the Collector, but the orders passed on such applications are neither decrees nor have they the force of a decree. Such an order is purely an executive order, and under S. 87 (4) the party dissatisfied with it can file a suit in the Civil Court not to set aside his order but the superior holder may sue to recover such amount as may be still due to him, and the inferior holder to recover the amount "levied" from him in excess of what was due. The latter's suit therefore becomes one "for the recovery of moneys had and received" and his cause of action arises when a sum in excess of what he contends is due is levied from him. It is only at this stage permissible to him to have recourse to the Civil Courts not for cancelling or amending the order of the Revenue Officer but for the refund of the amount levied from him in excess of what was actually due. Ordinarily a broker for sale is entitled to a percentage on the money which he succeeds in realising for his principal, but where the transaction cannot be completed because the purchaser introduced by the broker could not pay within a reasonable time and the principal realises nothing the broker could not be said to have earned his brokerage. Where a broker had been asked to find a purchaser who would pay ready money on or before a certain date without delay or trouble and the purchaser introduced by the broker was hopelessly unable to pay, the mere fact that subsequently the vendor and purchaser enter into separate arrangement for deferred payment in terms as to furnishing security does not give the broker a right to the commission. BURMA LAND AND REVENUE ACT (II OF 1876), S. 69—Waste land—Rubber trees planted—Subsequent notification declaring land to be grazing land—Order for removal of trees—Conviction.

The applicant applied for the grant of an area of 13 acres of state waste land for rubber cultivation and the application was duly notified. In anticipation of sanction he brought a part of the land under cultivation. Two years after the application had been made the Deputy Commissioner refused the grant and ordered that steps should be taken to reserve the land as a grazing ground. The land was notified as a grazing ground in 1919. In 1920 the applicant objected to the notification on the ground that he had been actually assessed to revenue on his cultivation and had paid revenue to the Government but his objection was overruled. In Sept. 1920 when the applicant applied for a refund of the revenue paid by him, he was informed that he would be paid if he cleared the land of trees and delivered vacant possession. In 1923 the applicant was prosecuted for an offence under R. 69 of the Rules under Act II of 1876. Held, that the conviction was unjustifiable. The mere fact that trees which the applicant had planted before the grazing ground was ever constituted or thought of, remained on the ground after he had been ejected could not possibly constitute occupation of the grazing ground by him. Rule 36 of Chapter X of the Original Side Rules of the Calcutta High Court is perfectly intra vires and the Court has jurisdiction to make such a rule both under Section 129 of the C. P. Code and Clause 37 of the Letters Patent of 1865. The provisions of Section 129 of the C. P. Code should ordinarily be read as referring to the Letters Patent of 1865 which were in force when the new Code was passed. An order of a Judge on the Original Side dismissing a suit for want of prosecution under Rule 36 of the Original Side Rules is a judgment within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable. A Judge in the Original Side may ordinarily rehear and vacate an order made by him before it is drawn up and filed so as to become effective. Under Rule 14 of Chapter XXXVI of the Calcutta Original Side Rules, when a bill is carried on for the purpose of taxation as between party and party it should be lodged for taxation as between party and party and also as between attorney and client. Such taxation is conclusive subject to an application or reference to Court not only as between the parties to the litigation, but also as between attorney and client.

Where attorney pays over money as fees to counsel, with the consent of the client who was expressly told it might not be allowed on taxation, the amount may in a special case be allowed as between attorney and client. (Sanderson, C. J. and Richardson, J.) ROMESH CH. BASU v. JADAB CH. MITRA.

CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1899), Ss. 157 and 557, cl. (d)—Presumption—Applicability of—Acquisition of part of holding—Valuation of building before and after acquisition.

The provisions of S. 557 (d) of Cal. Mun. Act provide for a presumption and advantage could only be taken of that presumption when facts are proved which make that clause applicable. The presumption, however, only applies to holdings which have been acquired. It cannot be applied either to the original holding or the part of it which has not been acquired.

Having regard to the provisions of S. 151 and the legal presumption that official acts are properly performed, the annual valuation made by the municipality must apparently be equivalent to the profit which the owner of the land would obtain from it. Where there is no evidence to show that the difference in the annual value of the land was due to any other cause than the reduction of its area by acquisition of a part of it, the appellant is entitled to the benefit of that inference. CALCUTTA RENT ACT (III OF 1920), Ss. 2, 4 and 15—Applicability of—Furnished premises—Hire of furniture—Powers of rent controller—Standardisation of rent—Contract rate if recoverable.

A flat or house is certainly within the definition of "premises" in the Calcutta Rent Act but furniture is not. A furnished flat or house is not necessarily a distinct, concrete, indivisible thing, though it may be so treated either by statute or by agreement of parties. The contention that no order can be made by the Rent Controller standardising the rent of "premises" where the "premises" are comprised in furnished flat cannot be maintained. This is equally true with regard to the certification by the controller of the standard rent in cases where S. 2 (f) (i) and (2) apply and to cases where he fixes it under S. 15 (3). The Controller has no power to fix the hire of furniture. Though the controller or tribunal may make an order standardising the rent to be paid in respect of premises when such premises have been let at a sum which includes payment for the use of furniture, the parties to the agreement remain under their original liability, whatever effect such order may have as between other parties or in other circumstances. —Ss. 2, 5 and 15—Premises let at low rent owing to want of repairs—Standard rent—Meaning of—Rent not raised since November 1913—Effect of.

Where the Controller of Rents has enquired into the question whether the building was let for residential purposes or for the purposes of a shop or an office, and he has come to the conclusion on ample evidence that the letting was not for the purposes of a factory, the decision must stand. The state of mind of the tenant at the time as to what he intended to try to do in future is by no means conclusive on this point. It is not for the Court to say whether or not the evidence of that witness was fully and effectively appreciated by the President and the High Court is not entitled to revise his decision even if on going through the evidence it should think that he has devoted an insufficient amount of attention or attributed an insufficient importance to one element of a question of fact. In order that it may be a question at large how much the standard rent should be, there has, first of all, to be a finding within one or other of the sub-divisions of cl. (3) of Sec. 15. It is suggested by the language of the second part of the proviso to S. 15 of the Calcutta Rent Act that where rent has not been increased since the 1st day of November 1913, as in the present case, the rent must be unduly low. That, however, is not an enactment but only a suggestion arising out of the provision dealing with the details of the subject and whether that suggestion is well founded in any particular case is purely a question of fact. The legislature has not thereon enacted a presumption which binds the hands of the Controller when considering whether the rent on the 1st November 1918, was or was not unduly low. The test throughout the Act is intended to be the actual rent, that is to say, the rent at which the premises were let in fact on the 1st day of November, 1918. Under cl. (d), the Controller has to ask himself whether that rent at that date was unduly low and the reference there is not to a hypothetical or notional state of normal repairs but to the actual condition of the premises as compared with the actual rent paid or agreed to be paid. The rent at which premises were let on 1st November 1918 cannot be treated as "unduly low" within S. 15 (3) (d) merely on the ground that the premises would have been let at a higher rent on that date if the repairs of the premises had not been pre-

Early in January 1920 petitioner took an agreement of lease of certain premises in the City of Calcutta at a monthly rental of Rs. 400 for a period of 3 years with a covenant for renewal of the lease for a like period. Without executing the lease petitioner entered into possession and though the previous rent of the premises was Rs. 150 petitioner paid rent for same time at the rate of Rs. 400. He then applied to the Rent Controller to fix a standard rent and the latter dismissed the application holding that the lease was for a period of 6 years.

Held, that the lease was only for 3 years and the existence of an option of renewal did not make it a lease for more than 5 years within the meaning of S. 4 (iii) of the Calcutta Rent Act. The rules set forth in Appendix IV, Volume II, of the Indian Army Regulations which regulated the conditions upon which the land in cantonments was granted prior to Cantonment Code of 1892, have no force as law, and cannot invalidate a transfer which is good under the ordinary law. When, however, a person takes a grant of Cantonment land subject to those rules he would be bound by them.

A house was situated within the Cantonment where the Army Regulations were in force under which originally a house could not be sold to a civilian at all. Later on it could be sold only with the sanction of the Commanding Officer,

CARRIER—Liability of.

Held, that it was fair to presume, in the absence of any direct evidence as to the actual terms on which the house was originally occupied, that the permission was subject to the reservation about sanction.

Each subsequent transfer made with the previous assent of the proper military authority amounted merely to the admission of a new licensee upon the conditions prevailing at the time with respect to the transfer of the houses in the Cantonment.

A transfer made without such sanction being in violation of the conditions of the license, was not binding upon the Secretary of State for India and furnished a sufficient cause of action for a declaration to that effect.

Army Regulations relied upon were held to have no statutory authority and not to have the force of law. (Lindsay and Sulaiman, JJ.) RAGHUBAR DAYAL v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA. 46 A. 427 : L. R. 5 A. 242 :

CARRIER—Liability of—Carriage of goods by sea—Requisition by Government—Refund of freight—Liability for—Goods carried by carrier at his expense—Right to recover compensation—Contract Act, S. 70.

The appellants, carriers by sea, agreed to carry certain cargo consigned to the respondents from London to Cochin. The total freight in question was paid as advance freight in England and the goods were put on board one of the steamers of the appellants. The ship duly arrived in the Bombay harbour, but when it arrived there, it was commandeered by the Government of India for purposes of war and consequently the ship's voyage with cargo had to be terminated there and all its cargo was discharged in that port. After some correspondence the appellant carried the cargo and delivered it to the respondent at Cochin on the payment of further freight and other charges from Bombay to Cochin. The bill of lading expressly provided for exemption from liability for omission to carry the goods on account of "the restraints of rulers". In a suit by the respondents against the appellants for recovery of the excess freight, held, (1) that under the terms of the bill of lading the appellants were relieved from all obligation to carry the goods from Bombay to Cochin by reason of the action of the Government in commandeering the ship and that the appellant was not under a liability to refund a proportionate share of the freight from Bombay to Cochin. Even if the appellant had no authority to carry the goods from Bombay to Cochin yet having regard to the correspondence between the parties, the appellant was entitled to compensation under S. 70 of the Contract Act for the services rendered by them for the respondent. as they come and are not at liberty to refuse business. This arises from the public employment in which they are engaged. S. 6—Limitation to liability.

What is required to limit the liability in the case of a person who answers the definition under the Indian Carriers Act, viz., of transporting for hire goods from place to place for all persons indiscriminately, is that the nature of the contract entered into must either have the limitation of the liability under the Indian Carriers Act made expressly and in writing or the facts must be such that for the contract in question the contractor was departing from his usual business and engaging in different type of business from that of common carrier.

The special circumstance that goods were to be carried by a through route does not decategorise carriers from being common carriers under the statute, nor does it relieve them from their legal obligations as such. In order to effect such a result the particular contract would require to come up to this, that quoad that transaction another and different type of business had been entered on. A transfer without the consent of the landlord of a part of an absolute occupancy holding, even though defined and demarcated, will not give the landlord a right of re-entry under Section 41, Tenancy Act, 1898.

Consent of the landlord to the transfer of an entire holding is a fortiori a consent to the transfer of any part of it.

In consenting to the mortgage by conditional sale, the landlord would have to be regarded as having consented to the sale as well as to the mortgage. If the landlord agreed that the mortgagor agreed to make the transfer (through Court), he agreed a fortiori to his doing it voluntarily, as transfer under compulsion is obviously something more than a voluntary transfer, not something less and consent to the latter naturally includes consent to the less. When the rights of a co-sharer and an occupancy or absolute occupancy tenant coalesce in the same person, he is an occupancy or absolute occupancy tenant, according to the nature of the tenancy. The mere fact that the mortgagors described the property as khuakhasht in the mortgage deed and the plaintiff accepted the description would not raise an estoppel inasmuch as the misrepresentation, if any, is of law and there can be no estoppel on a point of law. To this application three respondents were made parties and it was stated that they were the chief archakas. It was found however that there were 21 archakas of the temple who were all in the position of trustees of the temple and that the temple was managed by the vote of the majority of this body of 21. Held, that the order of the lower court granting the prayer of the applicant after notice to three of the trustees and without notice to all the trustees was illegal and should be set aside. Under the Act there is no provision requiring the court to assess the value of the property sought to be sold. There are no rules which require the parties to assess the value of the property sought to be sold. But where a low value is given by the decree-holder in the sale proclamation with the result that the property which was of very great value has been sold for an insignificant sum of money, there is a material irregularity which vitiates the sale. 20 A, 412 Relied on. —S. 26—Scope of.

S. 26 of Act VI of 1908 does not invalidate agreements which were valid at their inception, but was intended to validate agreements in special cases out of such agreements as would otherwise have been invalid owing to the provisions of S. 21 of Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act. CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT, S. 177.

—S. 72—Surrender by raiyat—Effect on prior mortgages—B. T. Act, S. 86—Difference in the land.

The provisions of S. 72 are similar to those contained in S. 86 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, with this difference that the provisions contained in Cl. (6) of the Bengal Tenancy Act do not find place in S. 72.

S. 72 leaves the power of surrender conferred by the section unhampered by the existence of any encumbrances over the property.

Consequently in spite of a prior sale or mortgage by a raiyat he is free to exercise his right of surrender of the holding in favour of the landlord, for under Cl. (2) of S. 46 no transfer by a raiyat of his right in his holding or any portion thereof is binding on the landlord unless it is made with his consent in writing.

The landlord is the owner of the property, and raiyat's interests is carved out of it only for limited purposes and the right of reversion which the landlord undoubtedly has in the land cannot be affected except by express statutory provision. That reversion is recognised in the rights which accrue to the landlord by an abandonment of the holding or by a voluntary surrender by the tenant who willingly yields up to him the limited right which was carved out. There it is immaterial that the transfer is for valuable consideration and the surrender for no consideration at all. No equitable considerations would arise in favour of a transferee of a non-transferable holding who takes knowing the limited interest of the tenant and his unquestionable right under Ss. 72 and 83 of surrender and abandonment. There is no reason why the landlord should be prejudiced unless he is a party to any fraud dishonestly committed by the raiyat in surrendering the holding. (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.) RAM URAON v. DOMAN KALAL. 1924 P. H. C. C. 117.

—S. 74—Scope of—If retrospective.

S. 74 has no retrospective effect as it affects substantive rights of parties. Hence agreements prior to the date of the Act coming into force are not affected by the section. (Ross and Sen, JJ.) BHOLA NATH MAJHI v. SHIVA PRASAD SINHA.

A suit for rent for less than Rs. 100 was filed before a Deputy Collector. The defendants denied plaintiff's title and stated that they paid rents to a third party. Under S. 177 the third party was made a party intervenor who claimed that he was entitled to claim rent and had received rents from defendants and right to the title to the land was gone into. Held, that an appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner and not to the Deputy Commissioner from the decision of the Deputy Collector under Ss. 218 and 224. Where proceedings are taken under S. 177 the Court will not come to a decision as to the respective titles of parties to the suit. But if a question of title or interest in land has been determined by the Deputy Collector in such a proceeding an appeal will lie to the Judicial Commissioner and not to the Deputy Commissioner. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE (V OF 1908)—Whether Judge vested with power to determine issue of law first—O. 14 and R. 2, O. 15, R. 3—Scope of.

The Code of Civil Procedure has vested the judge with power to determine whether issues of law should be tried first. He must decide himself whether circumstances exist in each particular case calling for the exercise of that power. Both O. 14, R. 2 and O. 15, R. 3 give ample power to the Judge to try issue of law first. The power under O. 14, R. 2 can be exercised at the issue stage but O. 15, R. 3 gives power to the judge to proceed to determine issues of law at a stage subsequent to the issue stage. The subordinate Courts should not try piecemeal but it is a matter of judicial discretion. (Das and Adami, JJ.) LACHMI NARAIN v. RUP NARAIN. 2 Pat. L. R. (Civil) 303.

Several persons, including the appellant, applied to be brought on record as the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff. C. and they are subject to the same equities as the decree-holders under S. 49 C. P. Code. Even if the case does not come within the purview of O. 21, R. 18, C. P. —S. 2 (12)—Mesne profits—Calculation of—Cultivating profit—Collection charges.

Where the person dispossessed by a trespasser is himself, ordinarily, a cultivator of the land in dispute, the profits to which he is entitled are those that the wrongful holder might have obtained by cultivation with due diligence. It is not open to a trespasser to dispossess and actually cultivate and then to sublet the land trespassed upon to some third person and claim to compensate the rightful occupant only to the extent of what he may have obtained by the sub-letting. Ordinarily in calculating the amount of profits, payment made by the defendants for rent, revenue or cesses, must be deducted but the court should not allow to the defendants the expenses of collecting the profits, unless they entered on the property in the exercise of a bonafide claim of right. Wrongful possession by the defendant is the very essence of a claim for mesne profits and the very foundation of a decree therefor. It is impossible to hold that during the time the lands remained under attachment by virtue of an order under S. 146, Cr. P. C., the defendants who had no title to the lands, remained in possession. ———S. 2 (12)—Mesne profits—Nature of—Basis of calculation—Burden of proof—Lands in the possession and cultivation of defendant—Allegation of cultivation at a loss for successive seasons—What plaintiff should prove.

When mesne profits are claimed from a person the onus of proving what profits might with diligence have been received in any year lies upon the party claiming mesne profits but the onus of proving what profits the person in wrongful possession actually received lies on the person in possession. Mesne profits are in the nature of compensation or damages. In any case the proper measure to be awarded is to be determined by what the party in possession actually receives or recovers except in cases where it is or can be shown that what is so received or recovered falls below what would have been so recovered or received with due diligence. Where in a suit for mesne profits it was found that the defendant was directly in possession during nine consecutive seasons and suffered considerable loss throughout he cannot be said to be dealing with the lands with due diligence; for, if the lands had been let out they would have fetched some rent, however low it may be. In such a case the person claiming mesne profits must let in some affirmative evidence with regard to the amount for which they might have been reasonably let out. In the absence of such evidence, mesne profits cannot be ascertained. (Spencer and Srinivasa Iyengar, J.J.) MUHAMMAD ABDUL GAFFUR ROWTHER v. MUHAMMAD SAMSUDDIN ROWTHER. 47 M. L. J. 730.

On an application by the defendant for recovery of mesne profits for the period during which he had been dispossessed from his land under the decree of the first court since reversed on appeal, the Court appointed a commissioner to ascertain the amount of mesne profits due from the plaintiff. The Commissioner, in the course of his enquiry directed the plaintiff to adduce her evidence in the first instance. The plaintiff refused to do so, and the defendant let in his evidence and closed his case; thereupon the plaintiff applied to the Commissioner to allow her to adduce her evidence; the Commissioner refused her request and submitted his report based on his local inspection and crop-cutting experiments conducted by him and, on information obtained from persons whose evidence was not recorded by him. Held, that the procedure of the Commissioner was irregular and his report could not be accepted. The defendant was first bound to let in evidence to prove the quantum of profits alleged to have been received by the plaintiff and the plaintiff was entitled thereafter to let in her evidence under O. 18, R. 1, C. P. Code. Though the burden of proving the mesne profits actually received lay on plaintiff under S. 106 of the Evidence Act, yet as regards the amount of mesne profits which might with ordinary diligence have been received by the person in occupation, the onus lay on the person claiming it (i.e.) the defendant. Though the Commissioner could base his report on local inspection and crop cutting experiments conducted by him he could not base it on information obtained by him from persons whose evidence he had not recorded. Such evidence not being legally admissible the Court could not act upon it. (Spencer and Venkatasubba Rao, J.J.) RAMAKKA v. NEGASAM. 47 M. 800.

S. 10 does not bar the institution of a suit but only the trial of it under certain circumstances. A Court cannot dismiss a suit under the section but only postpone its trial. The principle which prevents the same case from being twice litigated is of general application and is not limited by the specific words of the C. P. Code. Plaintiff put in a claim petition which having been dismissed, he brought a suit against the first and second defendants for a declaration of his title. The second defendant alone contested the suit which was dismissed on the ground that the sale by the first defendant in favour of the plaintiff was nominal and sham. The first defendant sold some of the items comprised in the sale to the plaintiff in favour of the third defendant. Ordinarily the doctrine of res judicata does not operate as between co-defendants and the Court applies the doctrine with considerable caution as between co-defendants where there is a conflict of interest as between them, where it is necessary for the court to decide the conflict and where the judgment clearly decides the question as between those co-defendants. Where though no issue is expressly framed as between the co-defendants the basis of the decision as between them is a decision on their title and on foot of that decision, their liability to contribute is determined, the decision operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit for declaration of title and possession. —S. 11—Competent Court—Small Cause suit—Decision of, when res judicata.

A decree for money upon covenant in a small cause suit does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in the Munsif's Court on the regular side. Nor does the decision of the High Court refusing to interfere with the decree of the Small Cause Court operate as res judicata. (Rankin, J. C. and Ghose, J.) *MOHINI MOHAN RAY v. —S. 11—Competent Court—Jurisdiction—Heard and decided—Decision of Revenue Court—Decision on.

The plaintiffs claimed to be the dobladars of the plot in dispute. Previous to this suit the plaintiffs had brought a suit in the Revenue Court against the Defendant alleging that the defendant was their tenant. The Revenue Court held that the defendant was not the plaintiff's tenant at all and directed that the plaintiffs should sue the defendant for possession in the Civil Court. Held that the only point on which the judgment of the Revenue Court was conclusive was that no relation of Landlord and tenant subsisted between the parties. The judgment did not decide as to whether or not plaintiffs were the rent-free grantees. (Sulaiman, J.) CHAUDHRI HAR SARUP v. BRIJNANDAN LAL.

—S. 11—Competent Court—Decision of revenue Court—Subsequent suit in Civil Court—Bar—Fraud vitating decision—What constitutes.

A revenue Court's decision cannot be called in question in a Civil Court by a mere allegation of fraud in the pleading or evidence, when the Judge, after giving full opportunities to the parties to produce their evidence, has decided rightly or wrongly in favour of one set of facts. To avoid a decision on the ground of fraud it must be shown that the plaintiff was prevented from putting his case before the Court or that some trickery or deceit was practised in connection with the proceedings. The mere fact that one of the parties did not admit something which he might in fairness have admitted in the —S. 11—Competent Court—Small Cause Court—Decision in rent suit—Permanent tenancy—Finding if res judicata.

The decision of a Small Cause Court in a suit for rent that the tenant was a permanent tenant does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit on the regular side, even though the Small Cause Judge had jurisdiction to decide the latter suit. —S. 11—Competent Court—Prior suit in Small Cause Court—Damages—Dismissal of—Subsequent suit in regular side—Combining of causes of action.

Plaintiff was the consignor of two parcels by defendant railway. He brought two suits in the Small Cause Court for damages to the goods and they were dismissed. Subsequently plaintiff sued in the original side of the district munsif's Court for damages clubbing the value of the two parcels and bringing the claim above 500 rupees. Held that the subsequent suit was barred both under S. 11 and under O. 2, R. 2, C.P. Code. The joining together of the subject matter of the two previous suits was no more than a device for evading the provisions of S. 11, C. P. Code, and could not be possibly countenanced. A decision cannot be said to be based on a finding unless an appeal can be preferred against that finding. On appeal by the plaintiff the appellate Court upheld the dismissal of the suit on the ground of want of a notice to quit without deciding on the plea of permanent tenancy. In a subsequent suit in ejectment brought by the plaintiff after due notice, the defendant again set up a permanent tenancy. Held that the decision in the prior suit did not operate as res judicata and that the plea of permanent tenancy was open to the defendant in the subsequent suit. —S. 11—Adverse finding—Party against whom suit is dismissed—How far affected by findings—Appealability—Suit for declaration and consequential relief—Form of decree.

Where a point adversely decided against the defendant in a suit is correctly and substantially in issue in the suit and where in other proceedings the matter would be res judicata, he is entitled to appeal against the decision even though the suit was decided in his favour on some other ground. The true test in cases of this kind is to see not merely the forum but the substance of the decree and the judgment. In suits where declaration and consequential relief are sought and the consequential relief is refused, because the court is against the plaintiff's rights which he seeks to declare, it would be better if the decree formally embodied the result of the declaration but even if it does not do so but simply dismisses the suit, the decree in substance is one where the declaration is refused.

—S. 11—Heard and finally decided—Decree on mortgage—Decree not drawn up in accordance with law—Second suit to redeem mortgage if barred.

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage the decree provided for redemption on payment of a particular sum within two months from the date of the decree. The decree went on to say that the plff. was to make up the court-fees. It was provided that on his failure to pay the money and the court-fees within the prescribed period the decree could not be executed. The decree was not drawn up in the manner prescribed by Order 34, R. 7 of the C. P. Code and did not contain any clause that if payment was not made on or before the date fixed by the Court the plaintiff should be debarred from all rights to redeem or that the mortgaged property should be sold. The plaintiff defaulted to pay the money within the time and brought a suit again for redemption. Held, that the second suit for redemption was not barred by res judicata or by S. 47 of the C. P. Code. (Scott-Smith and Fforde, JJ.) ARURA v. BUR SINGH. 5 Lah. 371: 1925 Lah. 31.

—S. 11—Heard and finally decided—Issue not framed—Decision binding as res judicata.

C. P. CODE (1908), S. 11.

Held, that the question was necessary for the decision of the suit and therefore the decision thereon operated as res judicata. The parties to the suit were Mahomedans. The plaintiffs' father sued for possession of certain lands from his brother. On defendant taking an oath, as agreed the suit was dismissed. The sister's daughter of the defendant brought a suit for a share of the lands against the defendant but that suit was dismissed on the ground that the land belonged to the plaintiffs' father. On the death of their father the plaintiffs brought the present suit for recovery of their share of the properties alleging that in the suit by the representatives of his sister, the defendant had wrongly alleged that the properties were exclusively his own. Held that the decision in the prior suit by the plaintiff's father was res judicata and that the plaintiffs could not in the face of that decision treat the defendant as a trespasser, or dispute his title to the suit lands.

The alternative claim of the plaintiffs that the plaintiffs' father was entitled to a share of the property and not the whole ought to have been put forward in the prior suit and not having been so put forward, the plaintiffs were estopped from claiming the same in the present. The decision in the suit filed by the sister's representatives against the defendant did not wipe off the effect of the decision in the suit by the plaintiff's father as in that suit the plaintiffs' father and the defendant were both co-defendants. 34 M. Where in a suit for rent against certain tenants the defendants pleaded that there had been a division of the tenancy with the knowledge and consent of the landlords, but the plaintiffs produced two ex parte decrees for rent, after the period of the alleged division, jointly against all the defendants. Held, that the defendants were barred from setting up the case of a separate tenancy.

There is no hard and fast rule as to what questions should be regarded as questions that ought to have been raised in the previous suit. But there are several tests which have been applied from time to time when such questions have come up for decision. One of the tests is whether by raising the question the decree which was passed in the previous suit could have been defeated varied or in any way affected. If the question is of such a nature it must be deemed to be a question which ought to have been raised in the previous suit. The decision in a previous suit for rent, whether ex parte or inter partes operate as res judicata in —Ss. 11 (Expln. IV) and 47—Execution proceedings—Res judicata—Execution sale by revenue authorities—Application to mamlatdar to set aside sale on deposit—C.P. Code, O. 21, R. 89.

A decree was transferred for execution to the Collector who sold the property on 9—6—1914. The judgment-debtor applied under O. 21, R. 89, C.P.C. within one month of the sale to set it aside on deposit of the required amount with the mamlatdar. The Mamlatdar remitted the deposit to the Civil Court and directed the judgment-debtor to appear before that Court on 8—8—1914. The judgment-debtor renewed his application before the Court and the auction-purchaser also agreed to the sale being set aside but the application was eventually dismissed on other grounds. On appeal the district Court ordered the lower Court to proceed with the application to set aside the sale. On further appeal the High Court confirmed the order of the District Court. Subsequently the execution sale was set aside by the Court. On appeal by the auction-purchaser the District Court allowed the appeal holding that the application made by the mamlatdar was ineffectual and that made to the Civil Court was barred by limitation. On a second appeal to the High Court by the judgment-debtor, Held, that the order of the Court below was appealable having regard to the prior proceedings and that the prior decision of the District Court and the High Court having proceeded on the footing that the application of the judgment-debtor was within time, it

The question was whether the plaintiff's claim was barred by res judicata by reason of the decision of the High Court in a prior Second Appeal. Both the courts below held that the decision in the Second Appeal was not binding upon the plaintiff inasmuch as he was a minor at the time, and his guardian, the Court of Wards, was guilty of negligence.

No evidence was adduced to show that the manager under the Court of Wards or any of the other persons responsible for the conduct of the previous litigation was either negligent or that he did not conduct it with due care and diligence. The courts below came to the conclusion that there was negligence merely on the fact that a previous judgment between the parties had not been relied on in the previous litigation for the purpose of raising the plea of res judicata.

Held, that the courts below erred in holding that there was gross negligence or such negligence as would be sufficient to vitiate the decision in the Second Appeal and that the same therefore operated as res judicata against the plaintiff.

Held, further that what was gross negligence was a question of mixed law and fact and that it was competent to the High Court in Second Appeal to interfere with the finding of the courts below on such a question. (Danadoss, J.) SITHAM-RAJU ANANDA RAO v. APPA RAO. 47 M. L. J. 700.

C. P. CODE (1903), S. 11.

The question whether or not a person appointed as guardian ad litem of a minor defendant consented to his being so appointed is a question of fact in each case. The consent of the guardian referred to in O. 32, R. 4 (iii) C. P. Code need not be expressed in writing but may be implied from the circumstances of the case. 43 All. 104 fol.

A guardian of a minor defendant is not bound to waste the minor's money in contesting a suit to which there is no good defence. Unless it is proved that the minor has been in any way prejudiced by the course the proceedings took or that there has been any fraud or gross negligence on the part of the guardian, the minor would be bound by the decree.

In a suit by a minor to set aside a decree and a sale in execution on the ground that the minor was not represented in the suit, it was found that the minor had previously sued through his next friend to set aside the execution sale and had failed in the previous suit. Held that the ground on which the present suit was based viz., that the minor was not properly represented in suit in which the decree was passed, was a ground that might and ought to have been put forward in the previous suit, and that not having been done, the decision in the previous suit constituted res judicata under Explan. 4 to S. 11 of the C. A mortgage decree-holder applied for a personal decree under O. 34, R. 6. of the C.P. Code. The judgment-debtor objected that the application was barred by limitation and that the accounts furnished by the decree holder were incorrect. The application was dismissed as barred by limitation. On appeal the appellate Court was of the contrary opinion and remanded the application for disposal on the merits. The judgment-debtor subsequently raised other objections to the maintainability of the application for personal decree.

C. P. CODE (1908), S. 11.

Held that as the application to which the latter objections were taken was the same as that to which the previous objections were taken, the rule of res judicata did not apply to the case and the judgment-debtor was not debarred from taking the subsequent objections. The plaintiff was a trader in grain at Bilsli in the district of Budaun in the United Provinces. The defendant was a commission agent at Bombay of the pakka adatia type corresponding to what is known in England as del credere agent that is to say, an agent or factor who, being entrusted with the goods of his principal to dispose of to the best advantage, is in lawful possession of them with a general power to deal with them without reference to his principal but guaranteeing the solvency of the sub-purchasers, and while entitled to charge against his principal his expenses and entitled also to an indemnity from his principal against all losses resulting from carrying out his duty, is under an obligation to pay to the plaintiff, his principal, the amount due after the accounts have been properly settled. The plaintiff brought a suit in Budaun for recovery of money alleged to be due from the defendant commission agent on account of profits on sales improperly retained by the defendant. Held, that the mere fact that payments had been made by post and statements of account sent by post to Budaun was not conclusive of the question of where payment ought, under the contract, to be made. The contract of agency having been made by correspondence and the defendant having agreed to act as plaintiff's agent by a letter sent from Bombay, the Budaun Court had no jurisdiction.

Unless the contract clearly indicated the contrary, an agent of this kind who became a factor entrusted with the goods of his principal with wide powers has an eventual liability to account to his principal but the accounting must necessarily be done at the place where all the business is transacted. The plaintiff, a permanent resident of a place within the jurisdiction of the District Munsif's Court of M, went to Madras where he and the defendant talked and settled about the commission to be paid to him. He told defendant in Madras that he would consign goods directly to him or to others who would be directed to deliver to him. Plaintiff sent goods to a firm at Madras with instructions to deliver them to the defendant. He also wrote to the defendant asking him to sell them and send the amount. The firm delivered the goods to the defendant, who wrote to the plaintiff stating that he would send the amount after selling the goods.

In a suit instituted by the plaintiff in the Munsif's Court of M, to recover the price of the goods delivered to defendant as commission agent on behalf of plaintiff, held that the money was intended to be paid to the plaintiff at his native place, that part of the cause of action therefore arose within the jurisdiction of Court M, and that that court had jurisdiction to try the suit.

Plaintiff a firm of merchants carrying on business in Madras purchased goods from the defendants at Calcutta firm. The arrangement as regards payment of the price was that the money was to be paid by means of hundis drawn by the defendants on the plaintiffs. The hundis were to be presented at Madras along with the railway receipts for the goods. In the course of their dealings, the defendants drew a hundi in their favour for price of goods sold and endorsed it to a hundi broker in Calcutta. The hundi was eventually presented to the plaintiffs in Madras and paid off. The plaintiffs then sued the defendant at Madras for recovery of a sum of money alleged to have been overpaid by means of the hundi. On a question arising as to whether the Madras Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, held, that a part of the cause of action arose in Madras as the payment was made in Madras and that under S. 20 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code the suit was maintainable in the Court in which it was brought.

Where a person outside Madras draws hundis, on a firm in Madras which under the contract, the Madras firm has to honour and pay when presented to them in Madras, the payment cannot be considered to be made when the hundi is negotiated by the drawer outside Madras but only when the payment is actually made by the firm in Madras on the hundi. In a suit brought to set aside the decree on the ground that the decree was void for want of jurisdiction. Held, the mortgage decree was valid and binding on the parties.

Per Phillips, J.—The jurisdiction of a court consists in its power to entertain suits and when once a suit has been properly entertained, its jurisdiction to try it to its conclusion is not removed unless it is specifically so done by the order of a competent authority.

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—Where the parties to a suit invoked the jurisdiction of a court to pass a decree, they cannot afterwards impeach the decree on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The principle underlying S. 21, Civil procedure Code, is that the plea of want of territorial jurisdiction may be waived. Though in terms it disallows objections in an appellate or revisional court, the principle is of general application and it in appeal or in revision the decree cannot be impeached, it is equally reasonable that in a collateral proceeding it should not be allowed to be attacked. The section applies where there is want of jurisdiction not merely at the institution of the suit but at any stage during the progress of it. —S. 21—Transfer of territorial jurisdiction—Effect on pending proceedings—Objection—Waiver—Appeal.

In a suit on a mortgage an application for the appointment of a Receiver pendente lite was made. Issues were framed in the case and afterwards the application for a receiver was heard. Before delivery of judgment on the application, the territorial jurisdiction of the Court was transferred by a notification of the Government and vested in another court. In spite of this the former court proceeded to deliver judgment appointing a Receiver, without any objection to its jurisdiction being taken by the parties. The defendants appealed against the order appointing a Receiver on the ground, inter alia, that the Court ceased to have jurisdiction over the cause at the time when the order was made. Held, that S. 21, C.P. Code, governed all cases of want of territorial jurisdiction and that the appellants not having taken objection to the passing of the lower court's order must be held to have waived objection on the ground of want of jurisdiction and could not raise the same objection on appeal especially as there had been no failure of justice. —Ss. 21 and 37—Execution proceedings—Order for delivery of immovable property after transfer of territorial jurisdiction—Objection to jurisdiction not raised in the first Court, if can be allowed on appeal.

Pending an application for execution by delivery of possession of the properties decreed, the territorial jurisdiction of the court over the properties was taken away and vested in another Court. Notwithstanding this the court passed an order for delivery of the properties without any objection by any of the parties. Subsequently on appeal from the order of the court it was contended that the court had no jurisdiction to order delivery. Held that the judgment-debtor having waived all objection to territorial jurisdiction in the lower court could not be allowed to raise it on appeal. The objection being one of form and not of substance, the appellate court would not allow it to be taken for the first time. 43 M. 675 (F. B.) (ref. (Spencer and D-vadoss, JJ.)) *MANAVIKRAMAN v. A decree-holder is not entitled in execution proceedings to interest by way of restitution under S. 144, C. P. —S. 39 (1) (d)—Execution of decree—Court's power to transfer to another Court—decree-holder's right to execute his decree, whether liable to be limited.

The powers of a Court to transfer a decree passed by it to another Court for execution are not limited by the fact that there is not sufficient property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of that Court to satisfy the decree. A Court has no power to take away the decree-holder's legal right to execute his decree in such manner as he chooses, having regard to his own facilities and convenience.

Quære.—Does an order of a Court transferring a decree passed by it to another Court for execution fall within the provisions of section 47 (1) C. P. The Court of Wards took charge of the estate of a judgment-debtor which was situated at Aligarh. On the application of the decree-holder the Collector as manager of the estate under the Court of Wards was brought on the record and the decree was transferred for execution to the Court of Aligarh without any objections taken by the Collector who had been given notice of the application. Subsequently when execution was applied for in the Aligarh Court the Collector raised an objection on the ground that as the decree-holder had failed to notify his claim under S. 17 of U. P. Court of Wards Act, his demand must be deemed to have been satisfied under S. 18. The decree-holder contended that the question not having been raised at the time when the Collector was impleaded as a party representing the Court of Wards or at the time when the decree was transferred for execution, it could not now be raised. Held, that the judgment-debtor was justified in taking the plea before the Court at Aligarh as neither the impleading of the Collector as a party nor the order transferring the decree for execution amounted to a decision of the question whether the decree-holder's demand must be deemed to have been satisfied under S. 11 of U. Where in execution of a decree the decree holder purchases the property and an application is put in to set aside the sale ostensibly under O. 21, R. 90, but which states the sale was illegal, the application also falls under S. 47 and any order passed therein amounts to a decree from which a second appeal lies. —S. 47 and O. 21, R. 90—Appeal—Execution sale—Application to set aside—Limitation—Order overruling—Appealability.

Every order in proceedings under S. 47, C. P. Code, is not appealable. Orders dealing with mere matters of procedure such as those directing the production of documents, or the summoning of witnesses although in a wide sense they may be said to be orders relating to the execution can hardly be said to be the determination of any question within S. 47, C. P. Code, read with in S. 2. The questions for determination there referred to must be those which the parties are asking the court to decide as to their rights or liabilities and not merely interlocutory questions of procedure which incidentally arise for determination in the course of the proceedings. When the rights or liabilities of the parties as to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree are determined by the order, then the order is appealable as a decree. The judgment-debtor applied to set aside an execution sale on the ground of material irregularity and fraud in conducting the sale and also on the ground that execution had been barred.

The Court below held that by reason of a prior order in execution it must be held to have been impliedly decided that execution was not barred. Held that the question whether or not execution was barred was a question within S. 47, C. P. Code, arising between parties to the suit and that the order of the Court below was appealable. In execution of a decree against a judgment debtor certain property was attached by the Munsiff's Court. Subsequently the same property was attached before judgment by a Court of the Subordinate Judge which after the passing of the decree became an attachment in execution. The property however was sold in execution by the Munsiff's Court and purchased by the appellant. The decree-holder in the Sub Court applied to the Court to sell the property in execution of his own decree. The appellant applied to that Court that the property should not be sold inasmuch as by the execution sale in the Munsiff's Court it had become the property of the appellant and ceased to be the property of the judgment-debtor. The Sub-Court rejected the application. On appeal held that the appellant was the representative of the judgment-debtor and that his appeal was maintainable. It also applies to parties, who are opposed to each other in the course of execution proceedings, and when an order is passed under S. 47 in execution of the decree passed therein no separate suit is maintainable by one of them, to rescin the same. Where the final decree in a partition suit awards an excess share to one party by mistake, it can be amended in execution proceedings, the language of S. 47 being wide enough to cover the case. ———S. 47—Question relating to execution—Simple mortgage—Acquisition of equity of redemption—Sale in execution of decree—Suit for possession.

In 1906 two simple mortgages were executed over the suit property, one in favour of plaintiff and the other in favour of one Bagirath. The defendant acquired the right of Bagirath and brought the property to sale under his mortgage.

C. P. CODE (1908), s. 47.

The plaintiff was made a party to the suit and he had also acquired the equity of redemption from the original mortgagor and was in possession of the property in that capacity. The decree in the defendant's suit was for sale of the property subject to the prior lien of the plaintiff. On the property being brought to sale the defendant purchased it himself. He thereupon obtained possession through the Court as against the plaintiff. Subsequently the plff. brought a suit not for recovery of his mortgage money but to be restored to possession of the property. Held, (1) that the plff. was not entitled to possession as mortgagee because the mortgage in his favour was a simple mortgage; he was not entitled to possession as owner because the equity of redemption had been sold and purchased by the defendant and his only right, if any, under the decree was to bring the property to sale for the enforcement of his prior lien. Held, also that the suit was barred under S. 47, C. P. Code. The plaintiff was a party to the decree. He had been dispossessed under the terms of the decree and his remedy for recovery of possession was by application to the execution Court. S. 47—Question relating to execution—Stay order—Appeal.

An order staying or refusing to stay execution of a decree by the Court is a determination of a question relating to execution within the meaning of S. 47, C. P. Code. Though a stay order falls within S. 47, C. P. Code it is not a decree because it is not a determination which has attaching to it the characteristics required by S. 2, C. P. Code, to be attached to a determination, whether in a suit or in execution, if it is to amount to a decree. A stay order is therefore not appealable as a decree and no special appeal being given against such an order, no appeal lies. Cases reviewed. (Daniels and Boys, JJ.) HUSAIN BHAI v. S. 47—Question relating to execution—Exonerated defendant—Objection to execution of decree against property in his hands—Appeal.

One of the defendants in a suit for sale on a mortgage was exonerated by the plaintiff and no decree was passed against him or the properties in his hands. Subsequently the plaintiff brought to sale in execution certain property which the exonerated defendant claimed to be his own.

Held, that the objection raised by the defendant to the sale of the property in his hands was one relating to the satisfaction of the decree and that the exonerated defendant was a party to the suit within S. 47, C. P. Code consequently the objection was one that should be decided by the executing Court. (Stuart and Mukerjee, JJ.) MT. MAHADEVI v. JAGANNATH DAS. L. R. 5 A. 91 : 78 I. C. 225 : 1924 A. 313.

S. 47—Question relating to execution—Objection by legal representative that decree is fraudulent—Remedy by suit.

If a judgment-debtor or a legal representative objects to the execution of a decree on the ground that the decree is not valid, because it is collusive, the question as to the validity of the decree is not one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree and cannot therefore be tried in execution under S. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. Of course, the burden is on the legal representative to show that he has utilised the assets that have come into his hands, in the proper administration of the estate; otherwise, he will make himself personally liable for the debts of the deceased to the extent of the assets shown to have been left by the deceased and presumed to have passed into his hands. ——— Ss. 55 (4) and 145—Assets of judgment-debtor in execution—Surety for production of Judgment-debtor and for his application in insolvency—Failure to produce Judgment debtor—Execution against surety.

The appellant executed a surety bond, as a result of which, the judgment-debtor who was arrested in execution of a decree against him, was released.

On the dismissal of the application of the judgment-debtor to be declared insolvent, the decree-holder applied to the Court for directing the appellant to produce the judgment-debtor who was released on his surety. Notice of this application was served upon the appellant and he was directed to produce the judgment debtor. The appellant failed to produce the judgment-debtor; even he himself did not appear in Court. The execution was dismissed.

The decree-holder now enforced the terms of the security bond executed by the appellant and proceeded to realise the decretal amount from the appellant.

Held that the liability of a surety under S. 55, C. P. Code enures for the benefit of the Court as well as for the decree-holder. The Court accepting the security may enforce it, failing which the decree-holder is equally entitled to enforce same in any way that may be open to him, for he is the ultimate beneficiary under the security bond. No doubt, under the Old Code of Civil Procedure sometimes it used to be contended that the remedy of the decree-holder against the surety was only by means of a regular suit. In order to save the decree-holder from trouble, inconvenience and expense of bringing a suit to enforce the security bond the present Code under S. 145 gives him a right and opportunity to enforce the bond, in execution proceedings. Therefore if the appellant as surety in the present case made himself liable for the performance of the decree or any part thereof, the decree-holder is entitled to enforce the bond by executing the decree against him in execution proceedings. The execution proceedings referred to therein, are not in any way connected with the execution proceedings in which the surety bond was filed but it may be any execution proceedings. The appellant's liability, therefore, arose on account of the failure of the judgment-debtor to appear in Court after the insolvency petition was dismissed and he was called upon to appear. Where the judgment-debtor failed to apply within time to be declared an insolvent, on his release on offering a surety for Rs. 500 and the Court suo motu issued warrant of arrest but the judgment creditor prayed for calling upon the surety to pay the amount of the decree and praying that no warrant be issued.

Held, that execution for the amount of the decree should be allowed against the surety notwithstanding the fact that judgment-debtor had died after the order of arrest, because the surety's liability came into existence on the failure of the judgment-debtor. When a judgment-debtor was arrested in execution of his decree the respondent stood surety for him and executed a bond undertaking liability for the decretal amount in case the judgment-debtor failed to appear in Court on any hearing till the final decision of the case. On the date of the hearing the judgment-debtor appeared and expressed his intention of applying to be declared an insolvent. The hearing was adjourned and no fresh security was taken, nor was the surety released. The judgment-debtor failed to appear on the adjourned hearing and the decree-holder applied to realise the decree amount by attachment of the surety's properties. Held, that the surety was liable in execution under S. 145, C. P. C. and that his properties could be attached and sold for the decree-debt. (Moti Sagar, J.) FIRM OF SHIV DAYAL RAM DITTA MAL v. MAHOMED KHAN.

—S. 60—House of agriculturist—If exempted from sale under mortgage decree—Simple money-decree—Destination.

Per Walsh and Mukerjee, JJ. On a proper construction of S. 60 of the Civil Procedure Code, the sale of an agriculturist's house (the expression is used for the sake of brevity), not in execution of a simple money decree in which the previous attachment is necessary, but in execution of a mortgage-decree, which has been passed on foot of a contract of mortgage specifically making the property a security for the debt, is not prohibited.

An agriculturist may make a valid mortgage of his house, there being nothing in section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code to the contrary, and after a decree for the sale of it has been made on foot of a mortgage, it may be sold in execution of the decree and the judgment-debtor is not entitled to raise the point in the execution proceedings. —S. 62—Meaning of—Intention of the legislature.

For purposes of jurisdiction the true meaning of the word 'residing' in S. 62 should be understood. A man may have several residences and may be residing in more than one place. The word 'ordinarily' is used by the legislature to get over that difficulty when it desires to specify one place, only for service or for establishing jurisdiction. It is sufficient if the person has a residence within the jurisdiction of the court, although he may not be staying there at the time of the institution of the proceedings. (*Walsh, A. C. Where property attached by a court of a higher grade is subsequently attached by a court of a lower grade and is sold by the latter court in execution of its decree, the sale is under S. 63 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code valid and passes title to the purchaser. Where, subsequent to the sale by the Munsif, the decree holder in the suit in the Sub Court applied for the sale of the property in execution of his own decree, held, that the purchaser in execution of the Munsif's decree was entitled, under S. 47, Civil Procedure Code, to apply to the Sub Court to stop the sale on the ground that the title to the property has passed to him and that it has ceased to be the property of the judgment debtor. The purchaser in execution of the Munsif's decree is a representative of the judgment-debtor, and the matter is one relating to execution. Held further, that on such an application it would be open to the court to inquire whether the decree of the Munsif was vitiated by fraud or on any other ground. ———S. 68—Transfer of decree to Collector for execution—Sale—Purchase by decree-holder—Discovery of encumbrances by purchaser—Re-sale—Powers of Collector—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

A decree-holder who had obtained a mortgage decree made an enquiry in the Sub-Registrar's Office and declared that the property to be sold in execution was ancestral and free from encumbrances. The decree was thereafter transferred to the collector for execution with a note that there were no encumbrances over the property.

The property was sold by the Collector and purchased by the decree-holder himself. He gave a certificate of satisfaction of his own decree and had under the rules to pay the balance. He then discovered that there was heavy encumbrance over the property, the date of which being more than twelve years prior to the date of the sale was not shown in the Sub Registrar's certificate for twelve years. The decree holder did not put in the balance of the purchase money and asked the Collector to re-sell the property declaring the encumbrance which he discovered. The Assistant Collector, who was in charge of sale, refused to hear him, being of opinion that he could not go behind the orders of the Civil Court. Held that the order of the Court below was erroneous because the decree having been sent to the Collector for execution proceedings, in spite of the sale having taken place, it was for the Collector to decide whether he would resell the property or not in order to realise the balance of the purchase money. Per Shah, Ag. C. J.—The words "in respect of any act purporting to be done" in S. 80 C. P. Code apply to the 'Public Officer' only and not to the Secretary of State for India in Council. But the principle underlying the decisions in 35 B. 662 and 40 B. 372 is independent of these words and is applicable to suits against the Secretary of State for India as well as to suits against public officers. The rule contained in S. 80 is a rule of procedure and does not effect in any way the cause of action or the rights of the parties. If the cause of action requires an immediate remedy by way of injunction, and if S. 80 is literally applied the party aggrieved would have no remedy. In a case where a class of persons is taxed heavily it would not be fair to treat the position as one of ordinary pecuniary liability of an individual only.

Where at the date of the suit a situation had arisen which was calculated to cause serious apprehension in the minds of the plaintiffs that irreparable damage might be caused to their business as dealers in saris unless the enforcement of the orders were stopped at once.

Per Keshm, J.—No suit may be instituted against the Secretary of State until the expiration of the two months notice required by the section. The terms of the section are imperative and make no exception in the case of suits for an injunction and a Court of law is not entitled to graft on to the plain wording of the section, a qualifying clause excepting suits for an injunction, a kind of relief which must have been in the contemplation of the framers of the Code when the section was drafted and redrafted. Nor does it make any difference that the injury apprehended is immediate or irreparable. A suit in respect of something which a public officer is going to do, not in respect of something he has done, but in respect of the further acts threatened lies without notice. No notice is necessary in a suit for injunction to prevent a threatened act against the public officer. (Shah, A. C. J. and Kemp, JJ.) BHAGCHAND DAGADUSHA V. —S. 80—Notice under—Necessity for—Act done in official capacity.

It is not the law that S. 80 C. P. Code has no application unless the act complained of was done in good faith. The section does not require that the act should have been done in good faith; it merely requires that it should purport to be done by the officer in his official capacity. If the act was one such as is ordinarily done by the Officer in the course of his Official duties and he considered himself to be acting as a public Officer and desired other persons to consider that he was so acting, the act clearly purports to be done in his official capacity within the meaning of S. 80 C. The recitals in the Inam register are the more of greater evidentiary value than the entries in the Inam Statement.

piece of evidence that the inam in connection with which the word is used is a public endowment.

Held, on the evidence, that the institution in question was a mosque.

Where, in a suit for framing a scheme for a mosque and for removal of the defendants from their trusteeship, it appeared that the defendants had not applied the inam granted for the mosque in the proper manner and that they had denied the title of the mosque to the inam, held that the defendants ought not to be allowed to continue to manage in the same way as before and that it was necessary to frame a scheme for the management of the trust.

S. 92—Right to sue—Suit under—Maintainability—Plaintiffs having no interest in trust—Advocate-General's sanction to institution of suit—Effect—Object of the legislature—Trustee—Appointment of—Validity of.

The consent in writing of the Advocate-General to the institution of a suit will not bring the suit within the meaning of S. 92 of Civil Procedure Code of 1908 unless the plaintiffs have an interest in the trust in respect of which the suit is instituted. Descendants, although only in female lines of the founder of a chatram dedicated to the public with a trust created for public purposes of a charitable nature have an interest in the proper administration of the trust sufficient to enable them to maintain a suit under S. 92, C. P. C., although they themselves may never find it necessary to use the chatram as a rest house or to obtain food there. Public Hindu temples are prima facie to be taken to be dedicated for the use of all Hindus resorting to them. To hold that the bare possibility, however remote that a Hindu might desire to resort to a particular temple gives him an interest in the trust will defeat the object with which the Legislature inserted those words in the section. Mahomedans who worship regularly in the mosque of a village have a direct interest in the trust relating to the mosque.

C. P. CODE (1908), S. 92.

The object of the Legislature in inserting the words "Persons having an interest in the trust" in S. 92 was to prevent people interfering by virtue of the section in the administration of charitable trusts merely in the interests of others and without any real interest of their own.

Semble: The last survivor of the descendants in the male line of the founder of a chatram charity has a right to appoint a trustee of the charity. Where such last survivor appointed a manager of the charity properties falsely alleging them to belong to himself as proprietor, and did not purport to appoint him as a trustee of properties which were already trust properties, held, that the manager had not been properly appointed a trustee of the chatram. Worshippers at a temple are persons having an interest in the religious trust and one entitled to sue under S. 92 C. P. Code. A mahant is a trustee and it is competent to a court in a suit under S. 92, C. P. The plaintiffs alleged that they and defendants 11 and 12 were really the Hukdars or some of the Hukdars in the income of a Hindu temple and that defendants Nos. 1 to 10 had been managing wrongfully and appropriating the proceeds of the temple. After referring to their Huk to appropriate the proceeds of the temple they claimed a declaration that they and defendants Nos. 11 and 12 were Hukdars of the temple, an account of the income received by defendants Nos. 1 to 10 and an order that the defendants should make over the income received by them to the plaintiffs. Held, that the suit involved an enquiry into and the taking of the accounts of the public trust and that it was not maintainable without the sanction referred to in S. 92 (*Shah, O. Where the question was whether a certain land was granted a Hindu temple as an endowment or to certain Archakas (who were also its trustees) burdened with the service of maintaining the worship of the temple, held, that having regard to the inam title deed describing the lands as "Devadavam" and the other documentary evidence in the case, the lands were granted to the deity as an endowment and not to the Archakas. The evidence of user and enjoyment, however long, uninterrupted and unquestioned, would be evidence of the grant only in the absence of any reliable or cogent evidence with regard to the terms of the grant itself or in case of any ambiguity in the grant. The fact that during a long period of time the Archakas dealt with the properties as if they were their own, and partitioned them amongst themselves is not of much evidentiary value in the absence of any parties or persons interested in setting up the rights of the temple as distinguished from the Archakas. A scheme framed under S. 92 of Civil Procedure Code for a Hindu temple provided inter alia for vacancies in the office of trusteeship being filled up by the court, for the appointment of an auditor by the court annually, and for the court sanctioning mortgages or leases of temple properties and a further clause gave general liberty to

Where there has been a preliminary and a final decree and the dates permit the appellant to challenge both in time it is unreasonable to allow the appellant to avoid the provisions of the Court Fees Act and obtain a reversal of the final decree by a circuitous method when the direct method was open of appealing against both. Ordinarily the question as to the amount of damages is a question of fact and the finding as to amount of damages arrived at by the lower appellate Court is binding on the High Court, but when the amount is fixed arbitrarily, it cannot be taken as an amount arrived at on a finding which is binding on the High Court. (Sulaiman, J.) JUGAL KISHORE v. RAM NARAIN. 1923 All. 199.

— S. 100—Finding as to custom—When open to attack on second appeal—Scope of the enquiry.

The decision of the lower appellate Court on a point of custom is liable to attack on second appeal on the ground that in the determination of the question in controversy, illegal principles or tests have been erroneously applied, for instance, that the Court has not correctly appreciated the essential attributes of a custom or usage. Consequently, the question whether the facts found in any given instance prove the existence of the essential attributes of a custom or usage is a question of law, which may be discussed in second appeal.

It is clear that on second appeal an enquiry must be made whether all the attributes of a local custom have been established or not by the evidence which is accepted by the Lower Court. (Dalal, J. C.) MANNA LAL v. THAKUR JAI INDR BAHADUR SINGH. 26 O. C. 386 : 76 I. C. 774 : 1924 Oudh 157.

—S. 100—Finding of fact—Gross or inexcusable error—Omission to consider evidence—Interference on second appeal.

An erroneous finding of fact, however, gross or inexcusable the error may be, cannot be made the basis of a Second Appeal. The High Court would be precluded from disturbing the findings of fact in the judgment of the Lower Appellate Court, however, strongly it may think they were opposed to any really sane view of the evidence, provided the facts found were relevant and the findings were based on evidence proper for consideration. It is not necessary that the whole of the evidence given in the case should have been considered in the Lower Appellate Court and still less that every part of it should have been mentioned in the judgment; interference is not justified by an apparent omission to consider some material part or even the main part of it. The provisions in sub-S. 2 of S. 104 deal with internal appeals within the limits of British India. The application to file an award may be made in the Court of the Subordinate Judge ; if any dispute arises, and the amount at stake is below a certain figure, the appeal would lie from him to the District Judge. If it were above that figure, it would lie to the High Court. The provision is intended to prevent any appeal beyond the District Judge where the sum in dispute is small. In this respect it runs parallel with S. 100, which limits second appeals from

'final order' within the meaning of S. 109 (a). C. P. C. Held, on a reference to the Full Bench Sir Shadi Lal, C. J. Broadway and Harrison, JJ.—Refusing application for leave to appeal under S. 107 (a), C. P. C.—that the principle deduced from the judgment in Rahimbhoy Nabhoy v. S. A. Turner (15 Bom. 155 P. C.) Saiyad Muzhag Hussain v. Mussamat Bodha Bibi, (17 All. 112) and Ramchand v. Goverdhandhas, 47 C. 918 is to the effect, that an order comprising the decision of the High Court upon a cardinal issue in a suit and which while that decision stands cannot be disputed again is a final order for purpose of appeal to Privy Council. Held, further that a matter of procedure can never be treated as a cardinal point in the suit and that an order of remand in this case is not a final order and the test of finality is a whether the order as made finally disposes of the rights of the parties.

Per Broadway, J.—It is the nature of the order sought to be appealed against that determines the right to appeal, and that an order is a final order, only, if it puts an end to the litigation between the parties or disposes of substantially the matter in issue so as to leave merely subordinate matter for decision (*Sir Shadi Lal, C. An order appointing or refusing to appoint a Receiver is not a final order within the meaning of S. 109 (a) as it is in no way finally determines the rights of the parties (Miller, C.J. and Foster, J.) MAGNI RAM BUNGAR v. SRIDHAR CHOUDHURY, 82 I. C. 178.

————S. 109 (c)—Considerations governing.

Where the value involved in the case is very large and the decision of the High Court was based on findings of fact which reversed the findings of the Trial Court and the High Court acted on evidence which was not at all before the Trial Court and there was a question of procedure of a somewhat unusual character upon which a higher tribunal was likely to take a different view, the combined effect of these matters made the matter a fit one for certification under S. 109 (c), though the powers under the sub-section are to be used sparingly. In an appeal the High Court though it affirmed the decision of the Court below, reversed many of the findings arrived at by the trial court. Held, even in the absence of concurrent findings, the decision of the High Court is not affirming decision for the purposes of S. 110, C. P. C. It is not necessary that a judgment of affirmance should be based upon precisely the same reasons as those given by the Court below. When the Courts in India have held that a custom of pre-emption claimed in a suit had been established by overwhelming evidence and there was not a single instance where a claim of pre-emption had not been allowed, there is no substantial question of law justifying the grant of leave to appeal to the Privy Council. —S. 115—Jurisdiction—Misconstruction of law—Interference.

Where the decision of a Court is the very basis and foundation of jurisdiction, the case falls within S. 115, C. P. Code. Where a Court by misconstruction of the provisions of law holds that a person is not entitled to maintain an application under O. 21, R. 100, it declines a jurisdiction vested in it by law and the matter is revisable. (Das, J.) RAM KISHUN SINGH v. DAMODAR PRASAD. 5 Pat. L. T. 107 : 75 I. C. 856 : 1924 P. 506.

—S. 115—Jurisdiction—Return of plaint for presentation to proper Court—Appeal—Revision.

In an application for revision the High Court is not confined to an enquiry as to the jurisdiction exercised by the lower appellate Court alone. The High Court has power to enquire whether the Court of first instance has failed to exercise jurisdiction in returning a plaint presented to it. (Dalal, J. C.) ABDULLA v. MAHOMED NAZIR. 80 I. C. 694 (2) : 10 O. & A. L. R. 19.

—S. 115—Jurisdiction—Section to be interpreted liberally—Refusal to stay suit pending arbitration—Interference.

Where a court refused to stay a suit under S. 19 Arbitration Act on the sole ground that there was a breach of warranty on the part of one of the contracting parties it is an irregular exercise of jurisdiction and the party has no remedy, if the High Court does not interfere in revision. The powers of the High Court should receive a liberal rather than a narrow interpretation when the applicant has no other remedy. (*Raymond and Bilaram, A. J. —S. 115—Jurisdiction—Allowing suit to be withdrawn—Conditions of O. 23, R. 1 not satisfied—Effect.

If an order under O. 23, R. 1 is passed without the conditions required by the section being complied with, the order is without jurisdiction and can be set aside in revision. The case is different from interfering with the exercise of a judicial discretion. (Daniels, J. C.) DAULA v. DWARKA PAL. 78 I. C. 121.

Where a court of Small Causes disposes of a suit on the merits though it has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, but neither of the parties objected to it or brought it to the notice of the court, the High Court will not interfere in revision. (Boys, J.) RAGHURAJ SINGH v. MT. SHAM DEI.

—S. 115—Order without jurisdiction—Interference—Suit after setting aside ex parte decree tried on merits—Effect.

If an ex parte decree is set aside without jurisdiction, the High Court can interfere in revision. The fact that after the ex parte decree was set aside, the suit had been decided on the merits and a decree was passed which was again the subject of an appeal, does not matter. —S. 115—Local investigation—Commission for—Interference in revision by High Court.

Where the issue of a commission for local investigation by the lower court would lead to the determination of the rights of the parties on an improper basis and would inevitably and unnecessarily prolong a litigation and cause irreparable loss and expense to the parties, the High Court would interfere in revision and set aside the order. —S. 115—Material irregularity—Refusal to set aside ex parte decree.

Where a court refuses to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground that no sufficient cause was shown for failure to appear, there is no illegal or irregular exercise of jurisdiction justifying interference in revision. (Mullick and Bucknill, JJ.) BHAI CHAND FUL CHAND v. DAWOOD AYUB.

—S. 115—Material irregularity—Reversing decision of trial court on new point—Absence of material for decision.

Where on the death of the plaintiff in a suit, his minor widow applied to be brought on record as legal representative without being represented by a next friend and the court rejected the application on the analogy of O. 32, R. 2 C. P. Code it cannot be held to have acted irregularly in the exercise of its jurisdiction.

On the death of a party, two persons applied to be impleaded as legal representatives. The court dismissed the application of one on the ground she was a minor and was not represented by a next friend and allowed the other petition without determining the question of rival claims on the merits and without notice to the minor claimant. Held the mere fact of being a minor is no ground for not considering the claim of the minor and the order is revisable under S. 115, there being no right of appeal against the same. The High Court does not interfere in revision when the applicant has, by suit or otherwise, another remedy open.

The ordinary rule is that where an applicant has other remedies by way of suit or otherwise the intervention of the High Court under Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code is not called for. Where a Court's order is based on the merits of the case, though in the exercise of a jurisdiction wrongly assumed and where it is not shown how the party aggrieved will be unfairly prejudiced by being made to resort to a suit, the High Court will refuse to interfere in revision. —S. 115—Other remedy open—Rejection of plaint—Non-payment of additional court fee—Application to continue suit in forma pauperis rejected—Revision

Where there is another remedy open to the aggrieved party, the High Court will not interfere in revision.

The plaintiff in a suit was asked to pay additional court fee, when he applied to continue the suit in forma pauperis—This was rejected and later as he did not pay the court fee, the plaint was rejected. The plaintiff then filed a revision petition against the order refusing to allow him to sue in forma pauperis. A decree was obtained against the minor with costs and an appeal preferred by the minor against the decree was also dismissed with costs. Subsequently the minor sued to set aside the decree and obtained a declaration that it was null and void against him. Thereupon the minor applied under S. 144, C. P. — S. 144—Applicability—No properly taken out of applicant's possession—Act of Court.

The appellant applied for letters of administration to the estate of one M and the respondent set up a will of the deceased. The moveable properties in dispute were at that time in the possession of the respondent. An inventory was made by the Commissioner appointed by Court and the properties were locked up in a room under seal. Letters were granted to the appellant and probate was refused to the respondent. This decision being reversed on appeal to the High Court the respondent applied for removal of the seals and for delivery of the properties to her, and the District Judge made an order accordingly. The order of the High Court granting probate was, however, reversed by His Majesty in Council. The Letters of Administration to the appellant were thereupon restored, and the appellant applied for restitution of the properties to him.

Held, that the properties were never in the possession of the appellant, they were not taken out of his possession and made over to the respondent under any decree or order of Court, and therefore, S. 144 had no application. The defendant now applied for mesne profits and interest for the period during which the properties and sale proceeds remained in the possession of the plaintiffs and asked for the refund of the commission paid to the auctioneer.

Held, that the defendant was entitled to restitution of mesne profits, interest and commission paid to the auctioneer. (Moti Sagar, J.) RALYA SINGH V. TUNIA MAL

On appeal the order of confirmation was set aside and the application under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. On 19-9-1919 upon an application to the Court the Munsif allowed one week's time to pay the deficiency in the court-fee. On 23-9-1919 before the expiry of the week the Court closed for the vacation and reopened again on 27-10-1919 when the deficiency ought to have been made good. It was not, however, tendered in Court until 29-10-1919. The Court fee was accepted on that day without further order and subsequently in November the plaint was ordered to be registered. Sometime between the 11th September and the date when the deficit fee was paid the claim to the first year's rent became barred. Held, that as the court did not reject the plaint under O. 7, R. 11, C. The notices issued to the defendants (mortgagors) were notices to show cause why a final decree for sale should not be passed. Finally an ex parte final decree for foreclosure was passed. The defendants subsequently applied to set aside the ex parte final decree on the ground that the notices had not been served and that the preliminary decree for foreclosure not being in accordance with the judgment, all subsequent proceedings were void. The court below rejected the application. Held, on appeal that the applicants (defendants) had no proper notice of the proceedings for drawing up the final decree inasmuch as the notices were misleading documents having no relevance to the real proceeding which were contemplated and having no reference to the order eventually passed. Where the Code of Civil Procedure is silent it is possible and frequently desirable to apply the provisions of S. 151. But the following qualification should always be applied. S. 151 cannot be applied where the rule of procedure is already laid down, and where owing to the appellant's laxity they waited until it was too late to apply under that rule, and endeavour to obtain the relief they desire by ignoring the specific provisions of the law. Held by the High Court that there is no inherent jurisdiction in the Court to set aside its own decree under S. 151 and the proper procedure was for the plaintiff to apply under O. 47, R. 1 and that the High Court ought not to exercise revisional powers in such cases. In a suit for partition by a younger brother against his elder brother, the defence was that the property was impartible. An issue was raised as to the sufficiency of the court fee and the subordinate judge before whom this suit originally came, decided this issue in favour of the plaintiffs holding that the suit was one for partition only. No appeal was made against this order. In the meantime the elder brother died and his sons were substituted in his place as his representatives. The plaintiffs moreover sold a portion of the property to other persons who were added as plaintiffs. The suit then came before another subordinate judge who took up the question as to the sufficiency of the court-fee again and decided that the plaintiff was bound to pay an ad valorem court-fee. Held, that the order of the prior subordinate Judge was a judgment and could not be altered save as provided by S. 152 or on review. S. 151, C. P.C., cannot confer jurisdiction on the Court to do what is prohibited by positive law. S. 152, C. P. Code refers merely to clerical or arithmetical mistakes and was of no assistance in the case. The devolution of interest pending the suit could make no difference in the court-fee to be paid. The instances given in O. 7, R. 11, C. P. Code empowering the Court to reject a plaint are not exhaustive and they do not limit the powers of a Court. It is made obligatory on the court, if there is any variance between judgment and decree to bring them into conformity. The word "may" in S. 152 does not make it discretionary with the court to order the correction but merely enlarges the powers of the court by providing that such correction can be done at any time; or in other words, the section simply emphasises that no lapse of time would disentitle the court to make the correction. That is not a reason for refusing to correct a mistake; otherwise there should be no object in the legislature giving the Courts jurisdiction to correct mistakes. He instituted a second suit, with a view to get over the plea of res judicata, for recovery of possession of the house from the tenant which was also dismissed. The District Judge on appeal, allowed the appeal, decreeing the suit on the ground that S. 11 of C. P. Code was no bar. The plaintiff, describing himself as a creditor of a person who had been adjudicated an insolvent, and whose estate was represented by the Official Assignee of Rangoon, sued for a declaration that a sale-deed executed by the Official Assignee in favour of the defendant was null and void. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not a creditor of the insolvent and had no locus standi to maintain the suit.

When the trial was about to commence, one K. who had all along represented the plaintiff, applied to be added as a plaintiff to obviate the technical objection raised by the defendant.

Held, that if the plaintiff was not a creditor of the insolvent, the application was not sustainable under O. 1, R. 8, Civil Procedure Code ; that, if the plaintiff was a creditor, the assumed necessity for the application did not exist and it equally failed ; and that the application could not be allowed under O. 1, R. 10, as there was no allegation even that the suit was instituted originally in the name of a wrong person through a bona fide mistake.

O. 1, R. 8, Civil Procedure Code, presupposes the existence of a right of suit in the plaintiff who instituted the suit, and the community of interest between him and the others of the class is the prerequisite necessary to enable him to represent the class. If the plaintiff turns out not to be a member of the class on whose behalf he professed to institute the suit, the suit is not a representative suit and no member of the class is constructively a party to it.

Quære :—Whether O. 1, R. 10, Civil Procedure Code, applies to cases falling within O. 1, R. 8.

On the same date on which the abovementioned application was made, another application was made by the original plaintiff for leave to amend his plaint by saying that the defendant was a benamidar for the insolvent and that the agent of the Official Assignee who conducted the sale on his behalf made a pretence of selling the property by public auction but really sold the property by private contract to the insolvent, the defendant being merely a benamidar for the insolvent. The materials, if any, which substantiated the allegations of fraud, thus sought to be added were not referred to in the affidavits filed in support of the application.

Held, that in the circumstances and in view of the great delay in making the application from which want of bona fides might be inferred, the Court below was right in rejecting the application. (Venkatasubba Rao, J.) KRISHNA AIYAR v. PACHAIYAPPA CHETTI. 1924 M. W. N. 522 : 82 I. C. 492 : 1924 Mad. 883 : 47 M. L. J. 540.

Under O. 1, R. 10 (1), C. P. Code the Court has power to substitute or add parties in cases where there has been a bona fide mistake as to the person in whose name the suit has been instituted. The condition of such substitution or addition is that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute to do so. When the matter in dispute cannot be determined without the joinder or substitution of some other person as plaintiff, this may be ordered; but where the joinder or substitution is sought not for this purpose but merely as an occasion or pretence for altering the character or scope of the real matter in dispute, by introducing fresh matters of dispute then the Court ought not to grant permission. The existence or otherwise of a good cause of action or of any cause of action at all is, no doubt, a point touching the merits, with which the Court is not at that particular stage directly concerned; but the rule in question is not intended, and ought not to be used to enable a person who has no right of action to introduce another person in whom there is a right of action as plaintiff along with or in lieu of himself, as this would be entirely altering the character and scope of the matter in dispute and virtually converting the suit instituted by one person into a new suit by another person. 1 M 383; 6 C. 370; 6 C. 827; 6 B. 538; 6 B. 672 Rel. the Court to make the necessary correction without any regard to lapse of time, for in a case of misdescription the Court will not have any diffi culty in coming to the conclusion that the defend ant had been substantially sued though under a wrong name. But there is a great difference be tween misdescribing a party intended to be sued and suing a wrong party. Where in the suit as laid a personal decree was sought for against the Agent, East Indian Railway Co. and there was no suggestion in the plaint that it was sought to bind the Railway Company by any decree that the plaintiff might obtain against the defendant, an application to bring on record the Railway Co. as represented by the agent is in substance one for the addition of a new party and the East Indian Ry. Co. would be entitled to set up the plea of limitation.

When there are two known persons in existence and the plaintiff brings the suit against one of them and afterwards applies to have the other brought on record as a defendant on the ground that he all along intended to sue the other and that in substance he sued the other and no ques tion of representation arises in the case it is im possible to maintain the view that the case is one of misdescription. A cause of action for a suit is the bundle of essential facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to succeed.

In judging whether the causes of action in two suits are identical, the criterion is to see whether the same evidence will maintain both actions. 40 B. 351 referred to.

In the case of usufructuary mortgage where possession is not delivered in pursuance to the mortgage contract, the mortgagee has a right to sue for either of two reliefs (1) recovery of pos session (2) recovery of mortgage money and in both suits he will be entitled to the reliefs on proof of the same facts, viz. (1) execution of mort gage, (2) failure to deliver possession.

Consequently where a mortgagee sued merely for possession and on the dismissal of the suit filed a suit for recovery of money.

Held, that the cause of action in the two suits being the same, viz. failure of the mortgagee to —O. 2, R. 2 and S. 11—Dismissal of suit—Misdescription—First suit—Bar.

Where a suit is dismissed on the ground the properties are wrongly described, there is no bar to the filing of a fresh suit either under S. 11 or under O. 2, R. 2, C. P. C. (Scott Smith, J.) BIKA v. BALANDA. 78 I. C. 579.

—O. 2, R. 2—Distinct causes of action—Plaintiff if bound to unite in one suit—Bar.

G. P. CODE (1908) O. 2, R. 2.

Where there are perfectly different causes of action, though it might be open to a plaintiff to join them in one suit he is not bound to do so and the failure to do it will not be a bar under O. 2, R. 2. (Baker, O. J. C.) LALLU PRASAD v. BABU LAL. 76 I. C. 218.

—O. 2, R. 2—Hindu widow—Alienation—Setting aside—Successive suit by reversioners.

A Hindu widow in possession of her husband's estate made several alienations of it in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff, a reversioner, brought a suit for recovery of some of the properties so alienated but omitted to sue for the remaining items. In a subsequent suit for possession of the items so omitted, Held, that the subsequent suit was barred by O. 2, R. 2, C.P. Code. (Mukerji and Dalal, JJ.) DARBARI LAL v. GOBIND SARAN. 22 A. L. —O. 2, R. 2 and O. 23, R. 1—Omission to sue for a portion of the claim—Withdrawal of suits with liberty to bring a fresh suit—Subsequent suit including claim previously omitted.

The plaintiff who had omitted to sue for a portion of his claim withdrew the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit under the provisions of O. 23, R. 1, C.P. Code. Later on he brought a suit including the portion of the claim so omitted in the prior suit. Held, that effect of withdrawal under O. 23, R. 1 was to leave the parties in the same position as if no such suit had been instituted and that O. 2, R. 2, did not deprive the plaintiff's right to include the omitted portion of his claim in the subsequent suit. 10 M. 160. 18 All. 53 followed. —O. 2, R. 2—Payment under decree—Suit for declaration of right—Subsequent payment—Fresh suit—No bar.

Defendant obtained a decree on a mortgage and the judgment-debtor paid half the decree amount into court. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for a declaration that he was entitled to a moiety of the amount paid into court and obtained a decree. Subsequently the judgment-debtor paid the remaining decree amount into court and thereupon the plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of his right to a moiety of that amount. Held, that the plaintiff's right to a moiety of the amount was conclusively decided by the prior suit and that the subsequent suit was not barred by O. 2, R. 2, C.P. C. inasmuch as the plaintiff could not have sued for a share of further payments which might or might not be made. (Rullan, A. J. C.) LALTOO v. BAJRANGI LAL. 10 O. & A. L. R. 574.

C. P. CODE (1908) 2, R. 2.

— O 2, R. 2—Suit for partition—First suit against members of the family—Second suit against alienees—No bar.

Although O. 2, R. 2, of the Civil Procedure Code requires that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action, still that rule does not require that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff may have against the defendant. Where the former suit was a suit for partition of certain moveable and immoveable property by one member against another member of the family, the plaintiff was not bound to join in that suit his distinct cause of action against the stranger purchaser. Cases are possible where the mere fact that the partition has been effected does not by itself, in the absence of an agreement to that effect, bar the right of partition of property still undivided and in respect of which the member may retain his share in the undivided estate. The whole village or a particular community may have joint property in a common pasturage or a forest, and such common enjoyment may continue even after there has been a private partition among the members of any one or more of the component families. No intention to relinquish a part of the claim can be inferred by the mere non inclusion of such a common claim in a family partition suit. (Kinkhede, O. A. J. C.) SONBA v BABYA. 20 N. L. — O 2, R. 2—Suit for possession—Subsequent suit for mesne profits.

The law provides for the awarding of mesne profits upon the date of obtaining possession and it is open to the plaintiff not only to have asked for mesne profits up to the date the decree was passed but up to the date that he obtained possession and his omission to have done so tells against him not only up to the date that the decree was passed but up to the date that he obtained possession. A subsequent suit would be barred. (Stuart, J.) GIRWAR SINGH v MT. RAM PIARI KUNWAR. L. R. 5 A. 223 : 78 I. C. 326 (1) : 1924 All. 909.

— O 2, R. 2—Suit by vendee for possession—Claim for refund of purchase money—Suit for—If lies

As a general rule in mortgage suits, all questions except those between mortgagor and mortgagee are to be excluded. The vendee purchased four plots of land from different owners at different prices. The plaintiff as pre-emptor brought a single suit in respect of all the sales impleading the vendee and also the various vendors of the four sales. Held, that the suit was not defective by reason of misjoinder of defendants and causes of action. If the trial Court did not think fit under O. 2, R. 6, of the C. P. —O. 5, R. 1 and O. 9, R. 3—No date fixed for appearance of defendant—Dismissal for default—Property.

Where no date has been fixed for the appearance of the defendant within the meaning of O. 5, R. 1 but a date is fixed for the plaintiff to attend and find out what date had been fixed for the appearance of the defendant, the Court has no power to dismiss the suit for default, merely because plaintiff did not appear on that day. The proper course would be to fix a day for the defendant to appear and if on that day plff. did not appear, to proceed under O. 9, R. 3. (Moti Sagar, J.) ISHAR SINGH v. SHARAF 73 I. C. 15.

Under O. 5, R. 17, C. P. C. the service, if possible, should be personal unless there is an agent empowered to accept service and it is only if personal service cannot be effected that there is any justification for proceeding in accordance with 82 I. C. 703 : 40 C. L. J. 154.

—O. 5, R. 17—Service of summons—Summons received but endorsement not made—Affixature—Necessity for.

The summons in a case was served by delivering a copy of the summons together with a copy of the plaint to the defendant personally (the defendant being personally known to the peon). The defendant refused to grant a receipt therefor, but retained the summons and the copy of the plaint. When the defendant took the summons and the plaint, the peon had no other copy to affix upon the outer door or other conspicuous part of the house. He therefore did not affix it to the house. If the defendant had refused to take the summons and to sign the acknowledgment, in that case the peon would have a copy of the plaint and the summons to be affixed upon the house of the defendant. Held, that defendant by his conduct rendered it impossible to have the copies affixed on the house and he cannot be permitted to take advantage of his own wrong and to plead that the omission rendered the service invalid. The defendant was in this house and copies of the summons and the plaint were given to and left with him in his hands. Therefore the requirements of O. 5, R. 17 were complied with. —O. 5, R. 17—Service of process—Affixature—Temporary absence of party.

Where the process server's report was to the effect that, on reaching the village, he was informed that the tenant had gone to another district, and so he served the notice by affixation. Held, that the affixature did not invalidate the notice.

The object of that rule is to make certain that the person who is to be served receives notice, whereas, in the present case, he actually received it. The question whether affixation was really justified is of less importance.

In the circumstances of the present case, affixation does not invalidate the notice (Fremantle, S. M. and Burn, J. M.) ABDULLAH KHAN v. MAHANT KESHO RAM. L R. 50 43 :

—O. 5, R. 17—Personal service—When can be dispensed with—Peon affixing notice at entrance of party's house—Service if valid.

Personal service of notice should not be dispensed with unless it is unavoidable to do so or unless there is an agent empowered to accept service. Where the notice was sent for service at the place mentioned in the plaint as the plaintiff's residence but the peon on arriving there did not find the plaintiffs or any male member of the family, but found there a servant of the plaintiffs and was told that the plaintiffs were at that time living at their own bari at a village some two or three miles distant :

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 5, R. 17.

Held, that the affixing of the notice at the entrance of the plaintiffs' house was not good service as the peon did not use due and reasonable diligence. (Greaves and Graham, JJ.) DINA NATH PATI v. UPENDRA NANDAN DAS MAHAPATRA.

O. 6, R. 2 of the C. P. Code does not on the face of it exclude the pleading of inconsistent facts. All that it requires is a statement of material facts on which a party relies. It is a general rule of law that an admission made by the opposite party in his pleadings of a fact necessary for the decision of a case dispenses with its proof. But an admission must be taken as a whole and not piecemeal. The principle upon which the latter rule is grounded is that if a party makes a qualified statement, that statement cannot be used as against him apart from that qualification. An unfair use is not to be made of a party's statement by trying to convert into a particular admission by him, that which he never intended to be such an admission. Where the defendant admits the affixing of his thumb impression in a blank paper, that does not amount to admission of execution of a promissory note which had been brought into existence over his thumb impression. Plaintiff sued the defendants for the price of a ship's mast despatched by the former. The defendants contended that they never got the mast and that owing to plaintiff's negligence they had sustained heavy damages for which they reserved to themselves liberty to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently the defendants in the course of the trial, changed their mind and wanted to plead a set off and counter claim in respect of the damages. The court below refused to allow the defendants to plead set off. Held that though the defendants could not by reason of their former attitude plead a counter claim they should have been allowed to plead a set off. — O. 8, R. 6—Set off—Plea of payment—Distinction between—Small Cause Court, Rangoon—Pecuniary Jurisdiction.

It is necessary to distinguish between a plea of payment and a defendant's plea of set-off. In the case of a plea of payment, the allegation in effect means that the debt or amount of the demand alleged to be due to the plaintiff (or in the case of a partial payment, the amount of the debt or demand pro tanto, paid off) had ceased to be due by reason of the alleged payment and that consequently, it was not a just demand validly in existence at the time of the institution of the suit or at the time of the written statement as the case may be. This plea is quite different in its nature from a plea of set-off raised by the defendant under the C. P. Code, which is in effect a request that the debt or amount found to be due to the plaintiff shall thereafter be treated as extinguished or satisfied in whole or pro tanto by being set off against the debt or ascertained sum due to the defendant. In short, a payment refers to a satisfaction or extinguishment effected prior to the raising of the defence of payment whilst a defendant's plea of set-off prays for a satisfaction or extinguishment commencing in the future after the date of the plea.

In cases of set-off the proper test to be applied in order to ascertain whether the set off is within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court, is to see whether the ascertained sum or the aggregate of the ascertained sums which the defendant seeks to set-off, does not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of court. On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit the plaintiff's vakil who had previously filed a vakalat in the ordinary form, appeared in court asked, for an adjournment, and stated that, if that adjournment was not granted, he had no further instructions to go on with the case. He also took the plaint which he had drawn and signed and endorsed on it as follows: "I have no instruction except to apply for an adjournment."

Held, that the pleader could not be deemed to have appeared. O. 3, R. 4 Sub-r. 2 of Civil Procedure Code does not require the writing containing the withdrawal by the pleader of his vakalat to be in any specified form, and that which the plaintiff's pleader had endorsed on the back of the plaint would be perfectly good written withdrawal from his duties and obligations under the vakalat.

No formality is necessary about the leave of the court required for the withdrawal of the pleader and in the circumstances of the case the court ought to be presumed to have given its consent to the withdrawal of the plaintiff's vakil within the meaning of O. 3, R. 4 (2), Civil Procedure Code. —O. 9, R. 9—Dismissal of suit for default—Application for Restoration—Noncontesting defendants—Compromise by some of the parties—Effect of.

Several Plaintiffs brought a suit for setting aside a decree in a partition suit and other incidental reliefs. Some of the plaintiffs compromised the case. The remaining plaintiffs applied for an adjournment of the case and the application was rejected and the suit was dismissed for the default both against the petitioners, who were the contesting defendants and other defendants who remained ex parte. An application for restoration of the case was refused and on an appeal against the order of refusal to which the non-contesting defendants were not made parties, the appellate court directed the suit to be restored between the plaintiffs and the contesting as well as the non-contesting defendants. On an application to revise the order of the Lower Appellate Court held that its order was wrong in so far as it purported to put the non-appearing defendants back on the record. Under O. 9, C. P. Code an application for restoration should be made so as to bring the suit back as regards parties to the exact position in which it was when the suit was dismissed. After that, it is competent no doubt for a particular plaintiff or plaintiffs to apply to be dismissed from the suit or withdraw the suit and such an application can be made. There was no justification for letting out any plaintiff until first of all the costs of the present petitioners up to the date of the dismissal of the suit had been paid to them by those plaintiffs who proposed to continue the suit. Secondly, if the suit is to proceed by those plaintiffs only against the petitioners, it must be distinctly on the terms that any objections arising out of that new state of things must be capable of being raised by the present petitioners by an additional written statement if they so desire and must be dealt with in the course of the case. — O. 9, R. 13—Final decree ex parte—Partition suit—Decree passed without notice to defendant—Setting aside. 77 I. C. 91.

— O. 9, R. 13—Application to set aside ex parte decree—Dismissal for default—Application for restoration dismissed—Appeal—If lies.

Under the C. P. Code there is no appeal provided for from an order dismissing an application which is for restoring an application for setting aside an ex parte decree. When O. 43 makes no provision for an appeal S. 151 cannot be resorted to as conferring a right of appeal. (Sulaiman, J.) CHANDRA SAHAI v. DURGA PRASAD. 79 I. C. 323.

— O. 9, R. 13—Application to set aside ex parte decree—Limitation—Delay—Power to excuse—Limitation Act, S. 5.

The High Court has power under the combined effect of S. 5 of the Limitation Act and S. 122 C. P. Code to apply the provisions of S. 5 of the Limitation Act to applications to set aside ex parte decrees. Consequently the rule framed by the High Court applying S. 5 of the Limitation Act to such applications is intra vires. (Coutts Trotter, C. J. Ramesam and Wallace, JJ.) *KRISHNA-MACHARIAR v. — O. 9, R. 13—Ex parte cases—Duty of Court to require proof from plaintiff.

Where an ex parte decree against a large number of defendants was set aside and the suits restored at the instance of a few of the tenants and the order of restoration is challenged by way of revision all the original defendants must be impleaded. — O. 9, R. 13—Ex parte decree—Application to set aside—Appeal by another—Jurisdiction to hear application—Successor-in office if can declare predecessor's order as being without jurisdiction.

A suit for partition was instituted on 20-12-1918 against several defendants, among whom the present appellant was No. 4. Two of the defendants contested the suit, and on 22-2-1919 a preliminary decree for partition was made on contest against two of the defendants and ex parte against the others. The present appellant did not appear at all in the first Court, and he was one of those against whom the decree was made ex-parte. On 17-12-1919 the first defendant alone preferred an appeal against the decree to the High Court and three days later i.e., 20-12-1919 the appellant presented an application to the trial Court under O. 9, R. 13, C. P. C. The application was kept pending until after the disposal of the appeal preferred by 1st defendant. The appeal in the High Court was dismissed on 5-1-1922 as having abated by reason of the omission of the appellant to implead the legal representatives of one of the deceased respondents. The record was returned to the lower Court and on 8-4-1922 a petition of compromise between the plaintiff and the appellant was presented and in accordance therewith the court ordered that the suit should be restored to its original number as against defendant No. 4 in regard to three of the items in the suit. In making this order the Court proceeded on the compromise alone without any enquiry as to the causes which prevented defendant No. 4 from appearing at the trial. In July 1922 a different Judge succeeded and on 7-7-1922 he passed an order to the effect that the order of 8-4-1922 was made without jurisdiction because there was no longer any ex parte decree over which the Court had any control; that the order was a nullity and utterly void so that no proceedings to set it aside were necessary, and that the fact of its being made on contest as against the plaintiff could not convert it into a valid order. Held that the appellant had the right to make an application under O. 9, R. 13 at the time when he did make it, although an appeal had been preferred by another defendant; that the result of the appeal could not have been to rob the Court of its jurisdiction to make an order on the application of the appellant; that the order of the High Court dismissing the appeal as having abated was not a decree in which that of the lower Court was merged; that the order of the 8th April 1922 was an order within the jurisdiction of the Judge to make whether it was legal or otherwise; that the order must stand until proper steps were taken by the parties affected thereby to have it set aside; and that the subsequent order of 7-7-1922 should be set aside and the suit remanded for trial.

Per Mukerji, J. :—Where a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed applied under O. 9, R. 13 to set it aside and at the same time prefers an appeal from it, the original Court may proceed with the application not with standing the pendency of the appeal. When the ex parte decree has been confirmed or otherwise disposed of on appeal, the Court which passed the ex parte decree has no longer any power to entertain the application to set it aside even though the application was made before the appeal was filed. The same principle will hold good, even if the appeal has been preferred by a party other than the defendant against whom the decree was passed ex parte, provided the decree was one and indivisible. Where a suit is disposed of ex parte on account of the absence of the party or pleader at the time of hearing but later on the pleader turns up in the course of the same day, the court should after notice to the other party, restore the suit to file after imposing such conditions on the defaulting party as might meet the justice of the case. Where the Small Cause Court Bench clerk gave a wrong date to the petitioner (defendant) as that on which the case was fixed for hearing and an ex parte decree was passed in consequence.

Held, that the procedure in the Small Cause Court under which the clerk fixed date for cases which are ripe for hearing lends itself to such a misunderstanding as was alleged by petitioner and the ex parte decree should have been set aside and the High Court accordingly set aside the decree and ordered a re-hearing. —O. 11, R. 14—Inspection of adversary's documents—Order permitting—Propriety—Condition—Notice to opposite party—Necessity—Partnership—Declaration of right as partner and taking of partnership accounts—Suit for—Inspection by plaintiff of alleged partnership accounts—Order permitting before commencement of trial—Inspection by employee in defendant's firm who had been won over by plaintiff—Revision—Interlocutory orders of court below—Interference with—Conditions.

Inspection by a party of his adversary's documents is not a matter of routine, but is to be permitted or refused only after a judicial decision not only as to the right to inspection itself but with reference also to the stage of the case at which such right is to be permitted and the right must be exercised so as to result in as little harm as possible to parties who are entitled to have the protection of the court in carrying on their lawful pursuits. In a suit in which the two main contentions were (1) whether plaintiff was really a partner in 1st defendant's firm and trade and (2) whether he was therefore entitled to a taking of the partnership accounts, the defendant filed various lists of documents and produced various documents with an affidavit praying that the court should not allow inspection of any document by plaintiff without specific orders and without notice to him. Before the trial of the suit had begun the Court made an order without notice to the defendant allowing the plaintiff to inspect a number of documents produced by the defendant.

Held, in revision against the order of the Court below, that plff. could not be allowed unless and until he had established that he was a partner, to inspect any document which did not bear on the question of partnership, and that as regards documents which did bear upon it the court below must hear the defendant's objection before it passed its order.

Following on the order referred to above, the court below passed a further order permitting M, who had obtained a power of attorney from plaintiff, to inspect all the defendant's documents. M was employed in the defendant's firm for at least 20 years writing up and keeping the firm's accounts; he had left defendant and he actively reverted to plaintiff's side in the dispute between plaintiff and defendant; and he actively supported plaintiff and was ill-disposed towards defendant. M. was employed by the plaintiff for the purposes of inspection because of his exclusive and intimate acquaintance with the firm's business.

Held, in revision against the said order, that unless and until the plaintiff established his plea of partnership, inspection on his behalf by M could not be permitted and that such inspection as the lower court permitted must be by some one else. There would be no objection to an inspection, by M. after plaintiff established his plea of partnership.

Interference by the court in revision with proceedings of the lower court during the pendency of a suit are to be deprecated unless strong reasons are made out.

Interference in the present case was based partly on the ground that the lower court had not properly understood the provisions of O. 11, R. 14, Civil Procedure Code, and partly on the ground that the result of the orders of the Court below might be wholly unnecessary and irreparable damage to the defendant's business interests. —O. 11, R. 18 and 21—Order of inspection—When to grant.

Under O. 11, R. 18 when a party applies to inspect documents in the pleadings or in a previous affidavit of documents and makes an affidavit for that purpose the Court ought not to make an order for inspection without giving the other side an opportunity of replying to the affidavit. In such a case, dismissal of suit for non-compliance with the terms of the order is not proper. (Walsh and Ryves, JJ.) FIRM OF KEDAR NATH DURGA PRASAD v. FIRM OF BISHWANATH LAKSHMI CHAND. L. —O. 11, R. 21—Order for discovery—Non-compliance—When suit to be dismissed.

O. 11, R. 21, contemplates two orders being made : first, an order for the answer to the interrogatories or for the discovery or inspection of documents within a specified time ; and secondly, upon the failure to comply with such an order a further order dismissing the suit. The latter part of the order should not ordinarily be made unless the court is satisfied that the plaintiff is endeavouring to avoid giving a fair and proper discovery. (*Sanderson, C. —O. 11, R. 21—Striking of defence—Order when to be passed.

No order should be passed against a party without allowing him a reasonable opportunity of being heard and adducing evidence in his favour. A suit for partition was taken up for hearing on 12-4-1923 after several prior adjournments granted at the instance of one or other of the parties. On that date the defendant was absent and the plaintiff being ill applied for one month's time. The Court on that date passed an order as follows: "Put up on 14-4-1923 for disposal ex parte" The defendants appeared on the 14th April and proved that they should be allowed to defend the suit. The Court rejected their prayer examined the plaintiff and passed an ex parte preliminary decree. Held that the Court erred in making an order on 12th of April 1923 depriving the defendant of his right to defend the suit. The Court had no statutory authority to take such a disciplinary measure and there was no question of exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the Court. O. 13, R. 1, C. P. Code makes it obligatory on the parties to produce all their documentary evidence at the first hearing of the suit. Code for ascertainment of those profits, held that the same was not barred by res judicata by reason of the fact that the plaintiff had previously filed execution petitions for ascertainment of those profits under the erroneous impression that they were to be ascertained in execution and that that those petitions were dismissed either because of plaintiff's laches or because he did not press that relief.

After the passing of a preliminary decree the dismissal of an application not on the merits, but owing to say, non-appearance of the plaintiff or laches on his part, cannot result in the dismissal of the suit itself. — O. 21, R. 2—Certificate of payment—Statement of payment in execution petition—Sufficiency of—Limitation.

A statement in an execution application of money having been paid by the judgment-debtor is not such a certificate of payment as is contemplated by O. 21, R. 2, C. P. Code, and has not the effect of saving limitation for execution. O. 21, R. 2, C. P. Code, clearly contemplates a formal proceeding consisting of two steps, first an application by the decree-holder informing the Court of the payment, and secondly, a formal order of the Court recording the payment. This proceeding must be separate from and prior to the execution proceeding in which it is desired that the payment should be recognised. Though no period of limitation has been prescribed for an application by the decree-holder to certify, the intention of the law appears to be that the payment should be certified within a reasonable time of its being made. It is primarily the decree-holder's duty to certify. If he fails to do so, O. 21, R. 2 (2) allows the judgment-debtor to inform the Court of the payment within 90 days. Payment to one of several joint decree-holders will not be a satisfaction of the decree, even in part, unless the payee is an agent of the others entitled in law to receive the whole amount on their behalf or the distinct share of each of the joint decree-holders was determined and known. 31 M. Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of the manager of a joint Hindu family and certain minor co-parceners represented by the manager as next friend, a payment to the manager, although made and certified, cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree unless leave of the Court had been obtained for such payment under O. 32, R. 6. A judgment-debtor promised to discharge some debts of the decree-holder and thereupon the latter gave a receipt that the decree had been cancelled. O. 21, R. 2 (3) is intended to exclude recognition of any payment or adjustment of a decree out of court if there has been an omission to certify the payment. The rule only raises a presumption to start with that what is not certified has not been paid. But it is still open to the judgment-debtor to assert and prove that the claim

An assignment of a decree not by operation of law, to be valid must be in writing and a transferee under an oral assignment has no locus standi to execute the decree. Transferees by operation of law ordinarily would be legal representatives of the deceased decree-holder or the official assignee in the case of insolvent debtor or the purchaser of a decree at a court sale or a minor succeeding to the estate which was in the hands of an executor and other instances where there is a vesting of interest by operation of the statute. A person to whom a party agrees to transfer a decree that may be passed in a suit is not a transferee within O. 21, R. 16, C. P. Code. A transfer of the property during the pendency of the suit does not entitle the purchaser to apply for the execution of the decree, unless he has taken steps to have his name substituted in the suit in the place of his vendor and O. 21, R. 16, does not apply to such a case. An assignment of properties with all its back or future rents does not enable the assignee to execute a decree for rent subsequently obtained by the landlord when the decree itself has not been assigned. In certain proceedings for realisation of a takavi loan advanced to a tenant, certain rent alleged to be due to the tenant from his sub-tenant was attached by court. The sub-tenant objected to the attachment on the ground that the rent had already been paid and there was nothing due to the tenant, but his objection was dismissed for default. The arrear of rent was then sold by auction and purchased by the plaintiff. In a suit by the plaintiff against the sub-tenant for recovery of the rent, the sub-tenant again pleaded that he had already paid up the rents and nothing was due. Held that there was no warranty of title in the sale held by the government for arrears of takavi, that the dismissal of the sub-tenant's objection did not operate as res judicata

The judgment-debtor was interested along with several others in a fixed deposit of Rs. 6,000 held by a Bank. The interest of the judgment-debtor was attached under O. 21, R. 46, C. P. C. and the Bank was ordered to pay into Court the amount due under the decree, viz., Rs. 1,142 It was represented on behalf of the Bank that the money could not be paid until the fixed deposit receipt was produced; and further that the share of the judgment-debtor had not been ascertained. The Munsif however, overruled those objections and directed the Bank to pay the money due and on the Bank's failing to comply, the Court issued a goods warrant for distress of that Bank's moveable property. There had been no determination of the respective shares of the persons interested in the fixed deposit with the Bank. Held, that the Court should, in the first instance, have satisfied itself as to the actual amount of the share of the judgment-debtor. The next step would be to appoint a Receiver to recover the debt either by production of the fixed deposit receipt or by suit against the Bank if the deposit receipt were not forthcoming. There is no authority in law for the action of the Munsif in directing the Bank to pay the decretal amount into Court in the circumstances as set forth. There is similarly no legal warrant for the order of distraint. (Barton, R. M.) THE IMPERIAL BANK OF INDIA v. CHIN-NASAMI NAIDU.

(1) of sub-rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into court and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same. The wording a debtor "may" pay is quite clear and unambiguous and leaves no manner of doubt as to the meaning of the Legislature. It does not clothe the executing Court with any power to compel the garnishee to deposit the debt into Court if he denies it and informs the Court to that effect. An executing court is not bound to satisfy itself as to the existence of the debt. It can still cause it to be sold or appoint a receiver with garnishee to recover the debt from him. 13 W. C. P. CODE, (1908) O. 21, R. 57.

The provisions of O. 21, R. 57 apply to attachment before judgment which become converted into attachment in execution when application is made to execute the decree passed in the suit.

An attachment before judgment becomes an attachment in execution when an application for executing the decree is made and admitted. 42 M. 1 : overruled. 44 M. 902 : 41 M. L. J. 256 followed.

Held by Schwabe, C. J. and Wallace, J. : The provisions of O. 21, R. 57 do not apply to cases of attachments before judgment.

Per Wallace, J. An attachment before judgment under O. 38 of the Civil Procedure Code only comes to an end by a formal order withdrawing it. (Schwabe, C. J. Coutts Trotter, Ramesam, Wallace and Walter, JJ.) MEYYAPPA CHETTIAR v. CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR. 46 M. L. J. 415 :

Cases can be conceived when the court might rightly consider that the value of the property as stated by both parties should be mentioned though it is generally desirable that the Court should attempt to arrive at a fairly accurate value of the property to be mentioned in the sale proclamation in order to enable bidders to judge of the nature and value of the property.

A Court is justified in stating both values instead of attempting itself to value the property when the property was one that it was most difficult to value accurately and to hold an enquiry would have further delayed proceedings which the Judgment-debtors were obviously attempting to obstruct by every means in their power. When there is no evidence that any one was misled or deterred from bidding by the insertion of a low valuation in the sale proclamation the applicants could not have sustained substantial injury by reason of the alleged irregularity. C P CODE (1908), O. 21, R. 72.

Where in Court auction a property is sold, the auction-purchaser is one party to the contract, but the other party to the contract is not the judgment debtor or the decree holder, but the Court itself. In selling property in Court auction the Court acts under the statutory powers conferred on it by the Code and not as the agent of any party, and the contract that is made when the bid is accepted and confirmed by the Court is one between the Court on one side, and the auction-purchaser whose bid is accepted on the other.

A person, therefore, who bids at a Court-auction without informing the Court or its officer conducting the sale that he does so only as the agent of a principal, makes himself personally liable for the deficit caused by him in not completing the sale by depositing 25 per cent. of the purchase-money. The fact that the judgment-debtor knew that the person bidding was only bidding as an agent of a principal is quite immaterial. In such a case O. 21, R. 71 of the Code gives the Court power, at the instance of the judgment-debtor, to collect in a summary manner by way of execution the deficit that has been caused from the person bidding.

Under O. 21, R. 71, the bidder who makes default is not liable for interest on the deficit amount from the date of the order directing him to pay the amount. He is, however, liable for interest after that date. (Krishnan and Waller, JJ.) GANGABATTULA KANTHAMMA v. MANCHIRAJU REDDIPANTULU. 19 I. W. 197 : (1924) M. W. N. 122 : 34 M. L. T. 359 (H. —O. 21, R. 72—Execution of decree—Leave to bid to decree-holder—Fixing of heavy upset price—Effect of.

A decree holder applied for execution of his decree by sale of ginning factory belonging to judgment-debtor. On the day of sale the bids did not go up beyond Rs. 5,000. The property had been valued by a panch at Rs. 40,000. Shortly after this first bid the judgment debtor made an application to the court stating that the property was worth Rs. 60,000. Subsequently the decree-holder made an application for leave to bid offering to buy up the property for Rs. 20,000. The Court ordered that if the decree-holder was prepared to pay Rs. 40,000, his offer would be accepted. The decree-holder did not raise his bid to that amount and ultimately the court disposed of the execution application on the ground there were no bidders. Held, that the court should have granted the decree-holder leave to bid and made a further attempt for sale of the property. The order disposing of the execution application was set aside and the application was ordered to be restored to the file of the lower court. (Chah, A. C. J. and Rawcett, J.) MOTILAL PARSHARAM v. Against an order of Court appointing a particular person as guardian of a minor, the minor's paternal uncle who opposed the appointment in the lower Court, preferred an appeal. On the death of the appellant pending the appeal, his son sought to continue the appeal. Objection was taken that the right to sue did not survive and the appeal abated. Held that the appeal did not abate and could be prosecuted by the son of the deceased appellant.

The abatement of an appeal gives a very important right to the person or his heirs against whom the appeal abates and it is not without sufficient reason that the court should set aside an abatement. Held (1) O. 22 requires legal representatives of parties to be brought on record in the case of the death of any one of them, irrespective of whether the deceased was joint or separate from the other members.

(2) The fact that one of the Legal Representatives is already on the record does not relieve the plff. from making an application under O. 22, R. 4 and that the appeal did abate before the application for substitution was made.

Plaintiffs who were tenants-in-common sued to recover possession of certain property and pending the suit one of them died and his widow was added as his legal representative. The suit was decreed and while an appeal was pending at the instance of the defendants, the widow who had been impleaded as a respondent died. For merely a year and a half the appellant did not bring on record the legal representative of the deceased widow. The Court below dismissed the whole appeal as having abated. Held, that though the appeal abated as against the widow and her legal representatives, it did not abate as against the other tenant-in-common. —O. 22, R. 6—Applicability—Defendant dying after hearing but representative brought on record before decree.

Where after the hearing of suit a defendant died and his representative was brought on record before the decree was passed.

Held, that R. 6 has no application as the decree as passed was not against a dead man but against a living person. O. 22, R. 6, prevents abatement when death takes place between conclusion of the hearing and the pronouncement of the judgment and the decree is passed against a dead man; this provision of law covers cases where the Court is unaware of the death of a party and proceeds on the supposition that the parties are alive. The rule deals with a decree against a dead man and not with one against living persons. It indicates how a decree against a dead man is to be construed and can have no reference to a decree, passed against living person. (Mukerji and Dalat, JJ.) MT. CHAMBI v. —O. 22, R. 9 and 4—Abatement Setting aside—Sufficient Cause—Technical objections—Weight due to—Substantial justice.

In a suit on a mortgage the defendant was dead at the time of passing the preliminary decree. The Court was ignorant of the judgment debtor's death at the time. The plaintiffs without seeking to bring the legal representatives on record in time applied for a final decree under O. 34, R. 5, C. P. Code, mentioning the fact of the judgment debtor's death and entering his widow as the defendant in that petition. That application was not granted. The plaintiff did not take steps till a considerable time later when he applied to set aside the abatement and to pass a final decree. The court below held that the former application may be treated as one for setting aside abatement. There was no appeal from the former application but the above order was passed in the subsequent application only.

Held, the lower Court was not seized of the former application and it had no jurisdiction to set aside the abatement purporting to act on such an application. Further that application not having contained any prayer to set aside the abatement it was really not an application under O. 22, R. 9.

The second application was filed too late and having regard to the circumstances and the conduct of the plaintiff the indulgence of the court would not be extended to him. No doubt in the interest of justice if it is necessary to brush aside technicalities the Court will not be too scrupulous in enforcing them but if the merits of the case are against the petitioner, the Court will not go out of the way to clear the plaintiff's path of technical obstacles. —O. 22, R. 9—Applicability—Abatement—Order refusing to set aside—When appealable.

O. 22, R. 9 (2) is confined to cases in which abatement takes place by reason of an application not having been made within time to implead the legal representatives of the deceased party and it has no application to cases in which the suit has abated on account of some other cause, e.g., when the Court holds that the right to sue does not survive or that the death of one of several plaintiffs causes an abatement in toto. In the latter class of cases, the orders of the Court are decrees and as such are appealable. (Moti Sagar, J.) THE GENERAL TRADING COMPANY, KAHUTA v. NIHAL SINGH. 78 I. C. 22.

—O. 22, R. 9—Death of respondent pending appeal—Abatement—Application to set aside—Delay—Sufficient cause—Setting aside—Abatement of the whole appeal.

The fact that the parties lived in different districts and that their residences were about 200 miles apart one from the other, is not a sufficient reason in itself for failing to make an application to bring on record the legal representatives of a deceased respondent for a period of even 3 years in one case and nearly 9 months in another. The delay amounted to grave negligence on the part of the appellants who for so long a period failed to make any enquiries whatever as to the whereabouts of the most important respondents in the appeal. Where the decree appealed against is a joint decree, the appeal having abated against some of the respondents, must be dismissed against the rest. (Broadway and Fforde, JJ.) *MUNSHI RAM v. —O. 22, R. 9 (2)—Legal representative—Addition of after expiry of period of limitation without objection by opposite party—Abatement—Setting aside.

An application for bringing on record the heirs of a deceased petitioner in proceedings to set aside a sale was allowed after the period of limitation without any objection. On appeal from the final order in the case, on the objection of the opposite side the appellate Court set aside the order for substitution and dismissed the case held in revision that on a proper application under O. 22, R. 9 (2), C. P. C., and on showing sufficient cause, the abatement could have been set aside. The first Court having ordered substitution without objection having been taken by the opposite party at any stage of the proceedings, the petitioners were deprived of an opportunity to make an application under O. 22, R. 9 (2), C. P. C. and they were misled by the course of the proceedings that were adopted. The order for substitution made in the case should therefore be treated as being one setting aside the abatement. In respect of goods sold and delivered before a certain date plaintiff had instituted two suits for their price. Later on apprehending that the second suit would be barred by O. 2, R. 2, C. P. Code plaintiff before the framing of issues, applied for leave to withdraw them with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the price of the whole quantity of goods.

Held that the plaintiff should be granted leave to withdraw with liberty to sue for the consolidated claim, inasmuch as his mistake was a bona fide one.

Lintaigne, J.—The expression "formal defects" must be given a very wide and liberal meaning and presumably as connoting defects of various kinds which are not defects affecting the merits of the case on substantial questions (including equities and estoppels) reasonably arising between the parties. It is impossible to lay down any exhaustive definition of what are sufficient grounds within the meaning of O. 23, R. 1, C. P. C.

Amendments of pleadings should equally be allowed in suitable cases in order to overcome the effects of bona fide mistakes whether of law or of fact, and it does not matter whether the assertions or omissions caused by such mistakes were deliberately made or not. If the Court is satisfied that there is a reasonable apprehension that the suit must fail if the permission to withdraw is not granted, the plaintiff is entitled to be given leave to withdraw.

Decisions to the effect that an appellate court had not legally granted the permission to withdraw on a particular ground would not amount to an authority to the effect that such ground would not have been a proper ground for the granting of such relief if applied for at an early stage of the suit in the trial court. — O. 23, R. 1 Cl. 2—Leave to withdraw suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit—Leave granted on condition of payment of costs—Institution of fresh suit without payment of costs—Effect of.

Where the Court granted the plaintiff leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit on payment of costs of the first suit and the plaintiff filed a second suit without paying the costs as directed held, that the plaintiff having failed to comply with the condition laid upon him as to the payment of costs before he could bring a fresh suit the first suit cannot be held to be pending until costs were paid therein. 33 M. 258; 2 C. O. 23, R. 1 is not meant to apply to a case where plaintiff fearing that he would fail on the case set up by him desires to withdraw it in order to bring a fresh suit on entirely different allegations for in such a case the suit would fail not by reason of some formal defect but on the merits. C. P. CODE (1903), O. 23, R. 1.

A suit for partition brought by a member of a joint Hindu family was allowed to be withdrawn with liberty to sue again on payment of cost to the defendants. After the withdrawal of the suit the plaintiff continued in a state of jointness with the other members of the family. Eventually he again sued for partition but without payment of the costs directed to be paid under the order granting leave to withdraw the former suit. Held that the second suit was not in respect of the same subject-matter as the first suit and that the second suit was maintainable even though the costs directed to be paid had not in fact been paid by the plaintiff. —O. 23, R. 1—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to sue again—Grounds for—Revision—Interference by High Court.

An order under O. 23, R. 1, C. P. Code granting a plaintiff liberty to withdraw a suit with permission to institute a fresh suit must be founded on one or other of the grounds mentioned in the rule. The expression "other sufficient ground" in O. 23, R. 1, clause (2) would not cover any ground dissimilar to the formal defect specified in the section. A suit which must fail by reason of the cause of action on which it is founded not being substantiated by evidence cannot be said to fail by reason of some formal defect. Where the Lower Court made an order giving leave to the plaintiff to withdraw his suit in the absence of any of the grounds specified in O. 23, R. 1, C. P. Code, its order is one made in disregard of the rules of procedure under which the jurisdiction to pass the order could be exercised and such an order must be taken to have been passed with material irregularity, if not illegally so as to justify interference by the High Court under Section 115, C. P. Code. (Wazir Hasan, J. C.) MAHOMED EJAZ RASUL KHAN v. MUBARAK HUSAIN.

Held, that it is most improper to reject an application for amendment of a plaint merely on the ground of delay as the loss if any, occasioned by such delay to the opposite party can be compensated by an order for costs in his favour.

Held further, that where an order under O. 23, R. 1, C. P. Code granting a plaintiff permission to withdraw his suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit is not founded on one or other of the grounds

Held also, that O. 23, R. 1 (2) (b), C. P. Code merely adds grounds Ejusdem generis with some formal defect.

The words "other sufficient grounds" used therein would not cover any ground wholly dissimilar to some formal defect and admit of the same interpretation as "other sufficient reason" in O. 47, R. 1 (1) (c) in connection with an application for review of judgment, which means "sufficient of a kind analogous to the two already specified". 3 Lah. 127 ; 13 M. Under O. 43, R. 1 (m) C. P. Code, an appeal is competent from an order under O. 23, R. 3, C.P.C., recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction. The mere fact that an order recording a compromise or refusing to record a compromise has been followed by a decree does not deprive a party of his statutory right to prefer an appeal against such an order. A court should accept or reject a compromise as a whole and it has no power to accept a part of it only and pass a decree thereon. (Moti Sager, J.) *THE SHOP OF MEGH R. J. TEJ BHAN v. — O. 26, R. 4—Examination of witnesses on Commission—Duty of Court—Discretion.

Where an application is made for the examination of witnesses on commission and is opposed, it resolves into a question as to whether a court can be said to have acted with jurisdiction in taking away from a litigant the rights which he undoubtedly has under the law of having witnesses brought before the court and examined before the court in accordance with the normal procedure ; in other words whether the circumstances disclosed in the case gave the court jurisdiction to depart from the usual course prescribed by law. If the plaintiff insists on the attendance of his witnesses in court and the witnesses apply for their examination on commission, the court undoubtedly will have to take into consideration the grounds upon which the commission is applied for, but at the same time it cannot lose sight of the prejudice that might be caused to the plaintiff by reason of such commission being issued. If sickness or infirmity is alleged, the character and gravity of that sickness or infirmity have got to be assessed and the risk consequent upon a refusal to issue a commission will have to be taken into consideration. At the same time the importance of having the witnesses present before the court the advantages that would follow from their examination and cross-examination in the presence of the court and the emergency which might arise of having them confronted or identified should not be altogether lost sight of. If all these matters are duly considered and an order is passed, then and only then can it be said that the order has been passed in the exercise of a judicial discretion. (Mukerjee, J.) No irregularity by way of an omission to send a notice as required by O. 32, R 3 (5) of the C. P. be expressed. Consent is a question of fact; it is a question to be decided upon evidence whether there was consent by the person proposed that he would act as guardian.

Held by Phillips J. (Venkatasubba Rao, J. dissenting): The absence of consent on the part of a proposed guardian ad litem does not render the decree a nullity, but is merely an irregularity which would vitiate the decree only if it has affected the merits of the case.

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.: A decree passed against a minor where there is no consent on the part of the guardian ad litem to act as such is a nullity and it is unnecessary to set it aside in 2 separate proceedings. It is binding on all the parties except the minor and the only person who can call it in question is the minor himself. If the minor does not elect to avoid the decree, it will be binding all round. A person who is named in a mortgage deed as a mortgagee although in fact merely a benamidar for those beneficially interested can institute a suit in his own name, either for sale or foreclosure and the suit should not be dismissed merely because the beneficial owner is not added as a party. In 1899, the mortgagee in the exercise of his rights under a mortgage executed in 1892, obtained the usual decree for sale of the mortgaged property (the village Jainagar). In 1910, on the application of the judgment-debtors and with the consent of the mortgagee (decree-holder) the Court appointed a Receiver of the properties of the judgment-debtors. After various subsequent proceedings the Receiver and the judgment-debtors instituted proceedings against the mortgagee for an account of his receipts from the mortgaged property, and for delivery of possession of the said village. The Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad decided that the Receiver was not entitled to possession, but only to debit the mortgagee in the account with the sum of Rs. 1,471-3-5 per annum (instead of Rs. 1,600 as previously), for sums received from the property. The 5th defendant, a mortgagee of certain properties from the 1st defendant and the father of defendants 2 and 3, sued upon his mortgage and obtained a decree for sale. In execution of that decree all the mortgage properties were sold and purchased by the plaintiff being sufficient to discharge the mortgage-debt. The 4th defendant was an auction purchaser of one-half of the mortgaged properties at a sale held, subsequent to the mortgage (in favour of the 5th defendant) but prior to the sale at which plaintiff became purchaser, in execution of a money-decree obtained against the father of defendants 2 and 3. He (4th defendant) was not made a party to the suit by the 5th defendant, though the latter had notice of his (4th defendant's) rights.

In a suit brought by the plaintiff against defendants 1 to 5 for the recovery from the 4th defendant of the mortgage-debt and interest from the date of the mortgage up to the date of the plaintiff's sale together with future interest and for a sale of the properties in his possession in default of payment, held, that plaintiff as the assignee in law of the original mortgagee's rights by virtue of his purchase in Court sale, was entitled to institute a second suit for sale on the mortgage as against persons who were not parties to the prior suit, that the only right of the 4th defendant was to redeem the mortgage, that the amount payable by him as a condition of redemption was the amount of the decree in execution of which the property was purchased by the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to future interest as he had been in possession of one half of the properties purchased by him and the whole difficulty arose out of the default to make the 4th defendant a party to the original mortgage suit.

The effect of the omission in O. 34, R. 5 of the present C. P. Code, of the words "and thereupon" (on an order absolute being passed) "the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished" is that the mortgage is kept alive for all purposes as regards persons having an interest but not made parties to the mortgage suit. — O. 34, R. 7 — Redemption suit — Decree for possession on payment of money—If executable.

A redemption decree provided that on payment of a certain sum of money within a certain time possession of the lands was to be given—Held, it was not a preliminary decree under O. 34, R. 7 and could be executed. (Moti Sagar, J.) MAHABIR PARSAD v. KARTAR SINGH. 1924 Lah. 635.

— O. 34, R. 7—Redemption decree—Rights of parties—Failure to apply for sale—Effect.

A mortgagee in possession against whom a redemption decree is passed can remain in possession until the amount due to him is fully paid. If the mortgagee dispossesses him without paying the money it is a violation of the redemption decree and the mortgagee can sue to get back his rights. Where within the period fixed the money is not paid, the mortgagee gets the right to apply for sale under O. 34, R. 8. But this does not take away the right to redeem which remains open to the mortgagor even after sale under O. 21, R. 89. (Wazir Hasan, A.J.C.) MOHAMMAD BAQAR KHAN v. — O. 34, Rr. 7 and 8—Scope of—Second suit for redemption whether barred by res judicata, if the previous decree of redemption is not executed within time—Framing a final decree under O. 34, R. 7.

The plaintiffs filed a suit for redemption, and was given a preliminary decree by the trial court, which he failed to execute within the time prescribed by the Court. But the decree was not in the manner laid down under O. 34, R. 7 and did not contain a clause that the plaintiff would be debarred from all right to redeem for non-payment on the fixed date. A second suit for redemption was filed and the lower appellate court dismissed it on the ground that it was barred by the rule of res judicata.

Held, on appeal, that the doctrine of res judicata will not apply. "That if the original decree had been framed properly under O. 34, R. 7 and the decree-holder had committed default the defendant by an application for final decree under O. 34, R. 8 could prevent the plaintiffs from redeeming the lands and where no such final decree was passed, plaintiff could not be deprived of the right of redemption under R. 7 (d)." *Ramdas v. — O. 34, R. 14 Contravention of—Effect of—Sale in execution of money decree—Purchase. 76 I. C. 241.

— O. 34, R. 14—Object of.

The object of O. 34, R. 14, C. P. Code is to prevent mortgagees from suing their mortgagors on the mortgage debt as such and in execution selling the mere equity of redemption depriving the mortgagor of the right of redemption that would be given to him by the decree for sale (Raymond and Madgavkar, A J C.) MURAN v. DAYARAM. 78 I. C. 49.

— O. 34, R. 14—Sale contrary to provision of—Validity Mortgage with possession and lease forming part of same transaction—Rent under lease—Decree for—Sale of mortgaged property in execution—Validity—Omission of judgment-debtor to raise plea of invalidity of order for sale in prior execution proceedings—Effect—Constructive res judicata—Applicability of rule of, to execution proceedings.

Held, that a mortgage with possession and lease back on the same day formed part of one and the same transaction.

Held, further that although the mortgagee in such a case might obtain a decree for rent on the lease document alone, his claim would nevertheless be one arising under the mortgage, and a sale by him of the mortgaged property in execution of that decree would be within the mischief of O. 34, R. 14 of Civil Procedure Code.

Seemle the principle of constructive res judicata is not applicable to execution proceedings.

A decree-holder cannot demand that the Court shall infringe a statutory provision merely because the judgment-debtor has omitted to demand that it shall not. (Jackson, J.) LAKSHMI KUTTIAMMAL v. MARIATHUMMAL. 20 L. W. 649 : 35 M. L. T. 118 (H.C.) : 1924 M. W. N. 771 : 82 I. C. 504 : 1925 Mad. 127 : 47 M. L. J. 798.

— O. 37, R. 3—Leave to defend—Grant of—Discretion of Court—Principles—Payment into Court or furnishing security—Condition as to—Order imposing—When proper.

The question to be considered on application under O. 37, R. 3, C. P. C. is whether or not a triable issue is disclosed on affidavit or otherwise by the defendant. By triable issue is meant a plea which is at least plausible. The defendant must state what his defence is and must, as a rule, bring something more before the Court to show that it is a bona fide defence, and not a mere attempt to gain time by getting leave to defend. Once the Court comes to the conclusion that there is a triable issue in the case, it must grant leave to defend without requiring the defendant either to pay the amount claimed into Court or to furnish security therefor. Such a condition must be imposed only in exceptional cases, where, for instance, there appears to be so grave a suspicion that the Court comes to the conclusion that the defence is put in only in order to obtain further time. Appellant sued respondent and attached before judgment the property of the appellant under O. 38, R. 5 C. P. Code. The respondent agreed to furnish security and executed bond as follows: "I have hereby given as security all the rights which I have in the property described hereunder for the aforesaid suit amount. In case the aforesaid suit is decided in favour of the plaintiff, the under-mentioned property myself and my heirs hereby bind ourselves to be responsible for the said amount. This security bond is executed for 5,000 rupees to the Court." The trial Court dismissed the suit but on appeal the suit was decreed. Held, that the security bond ceased to be operative with the dismissal of the suit by the first Court and that the same did not ensure for the benefit of the appellate decree. A party who asks for a temporary injunction pending suit must show a prima facie case on the merits of his action. The granting of the application would then depend on the balance of convenience. If the other party has already invested lots of money on the project which is sought to be restrained, but he is a man of means who can easily pay any damages that may ultimately be awarded against him, no interim injunction should be granted. —O. 39, R. 2—Temporary injunction—When granted—Principle guiding.

A person asking the Court to exercise its discretionary jurisdiction must make out a strong prima facie case in support of the title which he asserts and must satisfy the court that its interference is necessary to protect him from irreparable or at least serious injury before the legal right could be established at the trial. Being an exceptional injury, an injunction will be refused in the first instance except on a clear prima facie case and "upon positive averments, of the equities on which the application for relief is based." The rule of law is that the court, should, before disturbing any man's legal right or stripping him of any rights with which the law has clothed him, be satisfied that the probability is in favour of his case ultimately failing in the suit. For the appointment of a receiver in a suit, there must be some substantial ground for interfering with the existing rights of possession. The fact that no harm would be done by such appointment is not a sufficient ground.

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 40, R. 1.

A Receiver appointed by Court, by consent of all parties, will not in the absence of proof of maladministration, be removed or discharged. His powers of "realisation, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property" include a discretionary power of sale, "to be exercised in good faith in the interests of the estate, with the approval of the Court." A consent order does not prevent a party from impeaching the administration thereunder "which is of such character as either (a) amounts to a malfeasance, and, accordingly, releases the consenter, or (b) has been proved by experience to be in substance so protracted and imperfect as to be futile, 40 M. ——— O. 40, R. 1—Receiver—Choice of person—Parties to suit—Partition suit.

The general rule in selecting receivers for estates is not to appoint a party to the suit without the consent of the other party except in special cases. This is subject to an exception in partnership and partition suits. Even in the latter class of cases, if the Court cannot expect honest and disinterested management by appointing a party as receiver, it should appoint a stranger. (Das and Ross, JJ.) BHAGWAN DAS v. A receiver's account must be vouched by the production of proper receipts. The vouchers will be admitted as evidence of the payment of the sums therein specified and credit given to the accounting party in the account, unless the other side shows some reasonable ground for impeaching the vouchers, but if any party objects, the affidavit or oral evidence of the person who received the money is required, and if this cannot be had, then proof must be given of his signature to the voucher. The question of bad management by the Receiver of the estate does not arise when a Receiver submits his accounts in order that it may be passed. Questions with regard to the soundness or prudence of the system of management adopted by a Receiver or charges of wilful default or neglect are not matters that can be disposed of in the shape of exceptions to account. ——— O. 40, R. 1—Receiver—Concurrent jurisdictions—Appointment of receiver by two courts in respect of the same property.

It is of the utmost importance that where concurrent proceedings for similar relief are taken in two different and independent Courts, no order should be passed which may lead to friction or conflict of jurisdiction.

A Receiver is merely the Officer of the Court through whom the Court takes possession of property, the subject of a litigation. Consequently where a Receiver of certain properties has been appointed by a Court, it is inexpedient that another court of independent jurisdiction should appoint another receiver for the same property. —O. 41, R. 17—Council instructed merely to apply for adjournment of appeal—Refusal of application—Appearance—Dismissal for default—Preparation of formal decree by mistake—Appeal, whether competent.

An application by a counsel or a pleader who is instructed only to apply for adjournment which is refused is not an appearance within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code. 15 W. Where a counsel applies for adjournment of the appeal and on the request being refused expresses his inability to argue the appeal and the Court after referring to the judgment of the lower Court as clear and well reasoned and free from any defect of error in law or fact dismisses the appeal.

Held that the dismissal of the appeal is not based on any determination of the merits but only on the failure of the appellant's counsel to put in an appearance and must be regarded as an order under O. 41, R. 17, C. P. Code, against which no appeal is provided by the Code.

Held further that though the appellant might have been misled, by reason of a formal decree having wrongly been prepared by the office in the case, into thinking that he was bound to file an appeal, yet he was not entitled to file an appeal to which he had no right under the statute (*Neave, A. On appeal by the co-sharer landlords impleading the plaintiff alone, the lower appellate Court held that the appellants had not received the whole rent and allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit holding that the tenant had not been made a party to the appeal and the question of limitation would arise if the tenant were now to be made a party. In an appeal by the plaintiff against a decree dismissing a suit in ejectment brought against three tenants who formed members of a joint Hindu family, the name of one of the tenants was omitted from the array of parties by mistake. Held that under O. 41, R. 22, C.P.C. the appellate Court had power to adjourn the case in order to make the omitted defendant a party to the appeal and that its omission to do so amounted to a denial of justice. — O. 41, R. 20—Power to add party—Discretion.

The power of an appellate court under O. 41, R. 20, to add a party to an appeal is one which is not circumscribed by any rule of limitation. It is a discretionary matter, on which a higher court will not interfere if the discretion has been soundly and reasonably exercised. Where without a plaint being amended a new defendant was added, and the decree also omitted his name as a result of which he was omitted in the memo. of appeal, the Court can direct him to be added as a respondent even after the appeal time has expired. O. 41, R. 22, C. P. Code allows a respondent to take any cross-objection which he could have taken by way of appeal. It does not allow him to take any objection which he had already taken by way of appeal and which had been decided against him. In an appeal relating to the specific performance of a contract of sale, cross-objections filed by the plaintiff were dismissed on the ground that it was not competent to him to file cross objections after the appeal of the other side had been dismissed. Held that it was open to the plaintiff to appeal on his own account. Petitioner applied for probate of a will. The respondent, the Collector, representing the Secretary of State, moved the Court for an enquiry under S. 19 (h) of the Court Fees Act as to the true valuation of the estate. The case was adjourned several times and on the date last fixed for hearing the Government Pleader examined two witnesses who did not advance his case. The

C. P. CODE (1908), O. 47, R. 1.

Government Pleader was not ready with any further evidence and the Court dismissed the case. Thereupon the Collector applied for review on the ground that the Government Pleader expected a short adjournment of the case and that the matter involved a question relating to the public revenue. The Court below granted a review. Held, that no sufficient case had been made out for review and that the order of the Court below was bad. Under the words "other sufficient reason" in O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code, the reason must be one having sufficiency of a kind analogous to the two specified cases, that is to say, analogous to excusable failure to bring to the notice of the court new and important matter or analogous to error on the face of the record. 6 A. W. N. 697, Foll.

It is not the law that in almost every case where there was some little excuse for a manifest negligence the Court would be entitled to re-open the matter by granting a review.

It is not the duty of the lower Courts to maintain, still less to interest any special practice as regards the grounds upon which adjournments of cases are given. The notion is erroneous that parties whose cases are fixed have a sort of right to get adjournments without any reason being given provided that somebody else undertakes to keep the Court busy.

Obiter: The Court should treat a vakil appearing for the Government with the same stringency as, but with no greater stringency than any of the other vakils appearing for other litigants. (Rinkin and Ghose, JJ.) BINDUBASHINI ROY CHOWDHURY v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA. 51 C. 70.

—O. 47, R. 1—Review—Sufficient reasons—Discretion of Court.

The expression "any other sufficient reason" in O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code, must be interpreted to mean a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. Whether any analogy can be discovered between the two grounds specified, namely, the discovery of new and important matter or evidence and some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record need not be considered. But the question whether a particular reason is analogous to either the one or the other of these two grounds, may obviously lead to very refined if not settled arguments. The discretion of the Court in saying what is sufficient reason within the meaning of O. 47, R. 1 of C. P. Code is not so rigidly circumscribed that an analogy must in every case be discovered between the two grounds above specified. (Mookerjee and Chitner, JJ.) KUMAR GOPIKA RAMAN RAY v. MAHARAJA. 39 C. When a point of fact or law has been brought to the notice of a Court trying a case and has been referred to in its judgment and decided by it, no ground for review is furnished by the fact that such decision was considered erroneous by the party against whom it was given. Subsequently it was objected that the award was bad because the agreement to refer was not in writing. Held, that the objection was unsustainable. During the pendency of an appeal the parties thereto agreed to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration but no application in writing under Sch. II, Para. 1, Cl. (2) of the C.P. Code was made. The plaintiffs however signed their names on the order sheet of the Court in relation to the order of reference, attended the proceedings before the arbitrator who however did not admit the evidence produced by them. The award of the arbitrator was objected to by the plaintiffs on the ground that there was no application in writing asking for a reference. Held, that the plaintiffs were estopped from objecting to the award on the ground of want of a written application for reference. Where an award of arbitrators is good on the face of it the parties cannot object to the arbitrator's decision either upon law or on fact and the Courts will not ordinarily review his decision provided he acts within his authority and acts in accordance with the principles of natural justice. —Sch. II, para. 1—Matter in difference.

A failure to pay a claim constitutes a matter in difference between the parties to a submission (1911) 5 S. L. R. 4 Foll. (Raymond, A. J. C.) MRS. BEITH STEVENSON & CO., LTD. v. FIRM OF NAROOMAL KHEM CHAND. 17 S. L. R. 86 :

—Sch. II, paras. 1, 16, 17, 20 and 21—Reference to arbitration pending suit without sanction of court—Suit subsequently withdrawn—Decision by arbitrators—Error of law—Effect—Enlargement of time for award—Fresh submission.

Para. 1 of Sch. II, C.P. Code is not mandatory; it is permissive. If the parties apply to the Court for an order of reference then the Court must keep control over the proceedings up to the end. But it is not necessary for the parties to take this course, and there is nothing to prevent their getting the suit dismissed by consent. Then the whole matter is at large and the parties can go on with the arbitration.

Where there is no suit pending when an application is made to the Court under para. 20, Sch. II, C. P. C. there is nothing to bar the procedure under Para. 20 in the fact that the original agreement to arbitrate was made while a suit was pending. Paras. 20 and 21 provide for an adequate check of the proceedings before the award becomes a rule of the Court. This is all that is necessary. Held that where pending a suit a reference to arbitration was made without the intervention of the court and subsequently the suit was withdrawn proceedings fell directly within the terms of para. 20 because the matter was referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court. The Court made no order in the matter of arbitration in the original suit which was simply dismissed, 29 C. 167; 30 C. 218; 38 B. 687; 36 M. 358 Ref.

An enlargement of time for the award is equivalent to a fresh submission to arbitration.

Arbitrators are judges of law as well as judges of fact and error of law certainly does not vitiate their award. (Das and Ross, JJ.) KOKIL SINGH v. RAMASRAY PRASAD CHOWDHURY.

Where arbitration is actually proceeding the Court is not to appoint a Receiver except in exceptional circumstances without the concurrence of the arbitrator. —Sch. II, para. 3 (2)—Reference to arbitration—Cases appearing in the special list—Power of court to make necessary orders.

C. P. CODE, (1908), Sch. II.

It does not necessarily follow that when a case referred to arbitration appears in the special list, the order for arbitration cannot be superseded by the court for proper reasons and the necessary orders passed for the trial of the suit. Parties who wish to take advantage of the 2nd Sch. to the C. P. C. and agree to refer suits to arbitration rather than have them tried by court, may not thereby make opportunity to delay the solution of their differences. (Buckland, J.) SARUPCHAND HUKUMCHAND v. — Sch. II, paras. 5, 15 and 16—Arbitration—Award—Setting aside—Personnel of arbitrators changed by parties without reference to Court—Award if valid

Where during the pendency of an arbitration proceeding a change in the personnel of the arbitrators is made with the consent of both the parties but without the intervention of the Court, this cannot be said to be a defect which strikes at the root of the arbitration. The foundation of proceedings by arbitration is the consent of the parties to a decision by an extrajudicial tribunal and where there is such consent the omission to move the Court under para. 5, (2) Sch. II, C.P.C. does not render the award a nullity. As an award it can only be set aside on any of the grounds specified in Sch. II, para. 15, C.P. Code. (Walmley and Suhrawardy, JJ.) MAHOMED SHEIKH v. — Sch. II, paras. 11 and 16—Arbitration—Special case stated—scope of—Court answering special case—Objections to award—Time for filing.

Para. 11 of Sch. II of the C. P. Code is intended to meet a class of cases in which any question of law which the arbitrator or umpire may feel himself unable to decide can be referred to the Court for its opinion with the leave of the Court. Where the special case stated for the opinion of the Court goes beyond the scope of para. 11 of Sch. II of the C. P. C. and covers questions of fact arising in the case it is not open to the Court to decide the questions of fact raised by the umpire. It is for the umpire to decide them. The scope of paragraph 11 of Sch. II of the C. P. Code is really confined to questions of law though it is true that it is not expressly stated that the statement of the special case must relate to questions of law. Sufficient indication in this direction is given as to the scope of this rule by the wording of Form No. 4 of the Appendix to this schedule which expressly refers to questions of law to be stated for the opinion of the court. Where a special case is submitted for the opinion of the Court and the Court completes the award of the arbitrator by deciding the special case, it is bound to give to the party an opportunity of objecting to the award before a judgment is pronounced upon it. — Sch. II, para. 12—Court's power to modify award—Accounts—Arbitrator an officer of Court—Position of.

C. P. CODE (1908), Sch. II.

The fact that an arbitrator in a particular case happens to be an officer of the Court does not affect the power of the Court to modify or correct the award. Where no misconduct is proved, except for a patent error apparent on the face of the award as made, the award is final and the Court cannot set it aside. Where in a suit for accounts, the arbitrator gave an award for a sum larger than that claimed in the plaint, the same is binding irrespective of the fact that the Court itself would have come to a different figure. (Kennedy, J. C. and Madgavkar, A. J. C.) JAN MAHOMED v. HAJI MUKHI GAZI. 78 I. C. 60.

— Sch. II, paras. 12, 14 and 15—Reference to arbitration pending suit—Award going beyond matters in dispute in the suit—Decision on rights of strangers.

The C. P. Code deals with arbitrations under three heads:—

1. Where the parties to a litigation desire to refer to arbitration any matter in difference between them in the suit in that case all proceedings from first to last are under the supervision of the Court.

2. Where parties without having recourse to litigation agree to refer their differences to arbitration, and it is desired that the agreement of reference should have the sanction of the Court, in that case all further proceedings are under the supervision of the Court.

3. Where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award.

Full directions are to be found in the Code as to the course of procedure in cases falling under head No. 1, and large powers are given to the Court with the view of making the award in such cases complete, operative and final. The Court makes an order of reference on the agreement (which must be the agreement of all parties to the suit), being brought before it and fixes a time for delivery of the award with power to enlarge the time, if necessary. When the award is submitted to the Court, the Court may in certain specified cases correct or modify it, subject to a right of appeal. In certain specified cases, it may remit the matter to the arbitrators or to the umpire, as the case may be. No award is to be set aside except in one of three cases specified and defined. In cases falling under heads 2 and 3, the provisions relating to cases under head 1 are to be observed, so far as applicable. But there is this difference. In cases falling under head 1, the agreement to refer and the application to the Court founded upon it must have the concurrence of all parties concerned, and the actual reference is the order of the Court, so that no question can arise as to the regularity of the proceedings up to that point. In cases falling under heads 2 and 3, proceedings described as a suit and registered as such must be taken in order to bring the matter, the agreement to refer or the award, as the case may be under the cognizance of the Court. That is or may be a litigious proceeding—cause may be shown against the application and it would seem that the order made thereon is a decree within the meaning of that expression as defined in the Civil Procedure Code. The Indian Arbitration Act, on the other hand, relates exclusively to arbitration by agreement without intervention of a Court of Justice, and, subject to the provisions of Sec. 23, applies only in cases where if the subject-matter submitted to arbitration were the subject of a suit the suit could, whether with leave or otherwise, be instituted in a Presidency Town.

An examination of the provisions of the second schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure and of the Indian Arbitration Act leaves no room for controversy that the legislature has made clear and distinct provisions to regulate the procedure in respect of each of the four types of arbitration which have special characteristic features. The jurisdiction thus created in respect of each type of arbitration must be exercised through the machinery provided and in conformity with the procedure prescribed. The Legislature never contemplated a confusion of these jurisdictions. No provision can be traced for simultaneous arbitration, by private agreement and on reference by Court, in respect of subject-matters within and beyond the scope of a suit and amongst persons, some parties and some strangers to a litigation. What has happened in the present case is, in essence, an arbitration in a manner neither known to nor contemplated by the law, and the Court must consequently decline to affix the stamp of its authority on the product of the labour of the arbitrators. From this standpoint, the award must be treated as invalid.

The arbitrators on such a reference are consequently limited to questions in dispute between the parties in the cause referred to, and they are not competent to mix up, in their investigation and determination, other controversies wherein strangers to the suit are interested. When an award has resulted from proceedings so carried on in a manner not contemplated by the law, the Court cannot be called upon to invoke the aid of the doctrine of separability.

This is not a case where the arbitrators have failed to act with regularity from lack of care or knowledge; the proceedings have been deliberately organised and carried on by the parties in a manner not contemplated by law and they have thus contrived to defeat the object they had at heart, namely, to settle their differences, in a tribunal of their choice.

It is quite impossible that one and the same arbitration should be held as to matters within the jurisdiction of the Court and matters without the jurisdiction of the Court: between the parties to the suit and between them and other persons: under the Code provided by the Indian Arbitration Act and under the Code provided by the Second Schedule: under the superintendence and control of the Judge who has seized of the suit and of the Judge disposing of business under the Indian Arbitration Act: partly upon an order of reference and partly under an agreement. —Sch. II, para. 12 (b)—Arbitrator taking wrong view of evidence—If award can be corrected.

C. P. CODE (1908), Sch. II.

Even where a Court thinks an arbitrator has taken a wrong view of the evidence and that such wrong view was palpable or apparent on the face of the evidence, the Court cannot rectify or correct the award unless the award was imperfect in form or the obvious error was of such a character that it could be amended without affecting the decision of the arbitrator. It is well settled that a Court acts without jurisdiction if it modifies an award because it takes a view different from that held by the arbitrator. (Mukerjee, J.) MAHENDRA NATH KUNDU v. SURESH CHANDRA FRAMANIK. 80 I. C. 10.

—Sch. II, paras. 14 and 15—Private award—Arithmetical mistake—Court's powers to correct.

A private award cannot be amended by the Court on the ground that the arbitrator had made an arithmetical mistake in arriving at it, as it does not amount to an illegality. (Le Rossignol, J.) RIAZ-UD-DIN v. SHUJA-UD-DIN. 78 I. C. 1042.

—Sch. II, para. 14 (c)—Awarding excess as jeshatabagam—If illegal.

—Sch. II, para. 15—Arbitration—Private enquiries by arbitrators—Court superseding arbitration and taking up case—Propriety of.

When an appeal was pending the parties agreed to refer their disputes to arbitrators who made an award. The award was attacked as vitiated by misconduct on the ground that the arbitrators made secret enquiries. The Court below held this to be misconduct and therefore entertained and decided the appeal on its merits without reference to the arbitration. Held, that it could not be said that the Court below acted without jurisdiction or illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. (Daniels, J.) *BABU RAM LAL v. —Sch. II, paras. 15 and 16—Arbitration—Award—When open to attack jurisdiction of Court.

An arbitration, in substance, ousts the jurisdiction of the court, except for the purpose of controlling the arbitrators and preventing misconduct and for regulating the procedure after the award. So far as the hearing of the merits is concerned and the decision contained in the award, the Court has nothing to say, good, bad or indifferent. It has no right to review it or to consider it and in substance hear an appeal therefrom. (Walsh, A.C.J. and Ryves, J.) AFTAB BEGAM v. HAJI ABDUL MAJID KHAN.

—Sch. II, para. 15—Patent error of law vitiates award—Breach of duty though honestly caused is legal misconduct—Arbitration Act, S. 14.

The Court will set aside an award if there is an error of law patent on the face of it. The term misconduct has in the legal sense a wider significance than personal misbehaviour. "Legal misconduct" means misconduct in the judicial sense of the word not from a moral point of view and means some honest though erroneous breach of duty causing a miscarriage of justice. Where the arbitrators had admitted improper evidence, and were misled by it;

Held, that they had committed an error of law patent on the face of the award and that this could amount to legal misconduct.

Per Madgavkar, A. J. C.—Patent errors of law are legal misconduct on which Courts can in their inherent power, set aside the award under S. 14 of the Arbitration Act. Whether the Courts should do so or should only remit the award is a matter on which no hard and fast rules can be laid down, depending as it does on the peculiar circumstances of each case. Where the parties appointed, each two arbitrators and also an umpire, the two arbitrators took different views. The umpire being unable to choose between the two views drew lots and decided accordingly. Held, that the conduct of the umpire did not amount to misconduct within the meaning of Sch. C. P. CODE (1908), Sch. II.

—Sch. II, para. 15—Award would be set aside if umpire does not inform the parties the date of hearing.

The arbitrators to whom a dispute was referred having differed, appointed an umpire under the express terms of the contract. The umpire informed both the parties of his appointment, but fixed no date of hearing. No further steps were taken by any of the parties concerned and the umpire made his award whereupon the applicants objected on the ground that they had desired to lead evidence before him, but had no opportunity to do so.

Held, that the duties of an umpire are identical with those of an arbitrator. And therefore the parties are entitled to a hearing before an umpire no less than before the arbitrator and it is incumbent on the umpire on appointment, to fix a day of hearing and apprise the parties of it. (5 S. L. R. 89 Foll.) And in the absence of an opportunity of hearing of the parties before the umpire, the decision filing the award must be set aside. (Kennedy, J. C. and *Madgavkar, A. J. A restrictive provision like the one in Sch. II, para. 16 (2), C. P. C. must be strictly construed. The decree in respect of which that section prohibits an appeal must be one which has been passed after a substantial compliance with the preceding provisions of Sch. II. In a case where the validity of the reference is attacked, the court in order to determine whether an appeal lay must decide whether the reference was valid or not. If the reference is valid and a decree is passed in terms of the award no appeal lies therefrom but if the reference is not valid it is not a decree under Sch. II and an appeal will lie as from any other decree. (Kinkhede, A. J. C.) HUSSAINBHAI BHORA v. BANSILAL. 1924 Nag. 338.

The Alliance Bank of Simla had created and controlled a Provident Fund for its employees. The Bank suspended payment and went into liquidation. compelled to subscribe thereto and every half year the Bank contributed a sum equal to the aggregate amount of the subscriptions of the members during the preceding half year. Every half year the Bank also contributed interest at a rate not exceeding the rate at which interest was paid on fixed deposits and not exceeding 5 per cent per annum. The half yearly contributions of capital were divided (by book entry) among the members in proportion to the amount of their subscriptions and the half yearly interest was paid upon the capital amount from time to time standing to the credit of each member. The account of the fund was kept in the general books of the company at their head office where a subsidiary ledger was also maintained showing the amount from time to time standing to the credit of each member. Each member was supplied with a pass book which was made up and balanced half yearly. In the case of a member who was also a customer of the Bank in the ordinary sense, his Provident Fund Account was wholly distinct from his personal account. As regards the mode of collecting subscriptions those who had no personal accounts received their salaries in full and returned their subscriptions to an office of the Bank whose duty it was to collect them. Members with personal accounts were credited in those accounts with their salaries in full and debited with their subscriptions. Held, that there was a fiduciary relationship between the bank and its employees who were members of the Provident Fund; that the provision as to interest was not wholly inconsistent with the existence of a fiduciary relationship and that the money in this fund so constituted never became the property of the bank in the sense that the relationship between the Bank and the members was merely that of debtor and creditor. The amount standing to the credit of each member was his property in the possession and under the control of the bank. The members of the fund were entitled to priority not only in respect of the contributions made by him but also in respect of the contributions made by the Bank which contributions included the sums equivalent to the aggregate sums subscribed by the members and the interest provided by the Bank. Consequently the members of the Provident Fund were entitled to receive payment in full of the amounts standing to their credit in respect of the fund in priority to the unsecured creditors and shareholders of the Bank. *See v. second rule, that is to say, that the company ought to bring the action "where the persons against whom the relief is sought themselves hold and control the majority of the shares in the company and will not permit an action to be brought in the name of the company. In that case the Courts allow the share-holders complaining to bring an action in their own names. This, however, is mere matter of procedure in order to give a remedy for a wrong which would otherwise escape redress, and it is obvious in such an action the Plaintiffs cannot have a larger right to relief than the company itself would have if it were Plaintiff, and cannot complain of acts which are valid if done with the approval of the majority of the share-holders, or capable of being confirmed by the majority. The cases in which the minority can maintain such an action are therefore, confined to those in which the acts complained of are of a fraudulent character or beyond the powers of the company. A familiar example is where the majority are endeavouring directly or indirectly to appropriate to themselves money, property, or advantages which belong to the company, or in which the other share-holders are entitled to participate. No mere informality which can be remedied by the majority will entitle the minority to sue, if the act when done regularly would be within the powers of the company and the intention of the majority of the share-holders is clear (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.) *GHANDY v. —Meeting—Directed to be held under the orders of Court—Appointment of Chairman—Powers and privileges of Chairman—Polling time—Scrutineers not appointed—Opportunity not given to test validity of votes—Report of Chairman—Confirmation of Court.

A meeting of the shareholders of a limited Company was held under the orders of the Court for the purpose of electing directors. The Chairman was one appointed by the Court. At the meeting various names for the directorate were proposed and seconded. At the time of the poll the Chairman ordered the doors of the meeting room to be closed and took votes and proxies of those only who were present. Under the articles of Association of the Company no one was entitled to vote at the meeting who was indebted to the Company in respect of call money on his shares. A person using proxies at any meeting of the Company must himself be a shareholder at the time. No scrutineers were appointed to examine the voting. The report submitted to the Court by the Chairman showed that the persons proposed by the defendants were duly elected. The plaintiffs took out a notice of motion for inspection and discovery of the papers connected with the meeting to see if only qualified persons had taken part in the meeting. It was also objected that the action of the chairman in closing the door at the time of the polling vitiated the proceedings. The Court below discharged the motion and overruling the plaintiffs' objections confirmed the report of the chairman. Held on appeal that the order of the lower court was not improper, though no doubt the plaintiffs had a right to inspect the papers relating to the voting at the meeting and it would have been better to have given an opportunity of doing so. The action of the chairman in closing the doors of the hall at the time of the polling and in omitting to appoint scrutineers was not an illegality, he having a discretion in the matter. In the absence of anything to show that something improper was done at the meeting so as to affect the voting and the proper recording of votes, the report of the chairman must be accepted. A company cannot purchase the shares from a share holder. It can accept a surrender of the shares subject to the conditions and limitations applicable to a forfeiture of the shares. Where the facts are against it no presumption arises that an entry of forfeiture of shares in the books of the company has been properly made. Even after a transfer, surrender or forfeiture of the shares, the liability of the shareholder continues and he is liable as a contributory on liquidation of the Company if it takes place within a year. It is not necessary that a list of contributories should have been placed before a meeting of the creditors to make the share-holder liable as a contributory. Where under the rules of business of a company a quorum for a meeting of directors is required before they can transact business, it is not open to a less number of directors by themselves to transact business by circulation even though the rules authorising the transaction of business by circulation do not fix any number of directors among whom the matter should be circulated. COMPANIES ACT (VII OF 1913), S. 213.

shareholders of the Bank for approval. One of the directors had entered into a provisional agreement with the Central Bank for amalgamation. A summary of the terms of amalgamation was notified to the shareholders and the provisional agreement was also kept open for inspection by the shareholders at the Registered office of the Company. The notice also referred to an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders on 19-7-1923 for considering the resolution that the Tata Bank be wound up voluntarily, that the Tata Bank be amalgamated with the Central Bank, that the provisional agreement be adopted and that the liquidators be authorised to work out the scheme. A further meeting of the Shareholders of the Company was fixed for conforming the above resolution. The first meeting was held on 19-7-1923 as notified. The Chairman of the meeting delivered a speech in support of the resolution and moved for its adoption. Next the resolution was opposed by the Shareholders. The plaintiff, who was also a shareholder, raised a long point of order attacking the legality of the notice convening the meeting, the directors and other officers of the Tata Bank and opposing the amalgamation. The chairman of the meeting ruled the point of order as being in itself out of order. Subsequently the plaintiff moved an amendment to the resolution requiring that the entire value of the properties and assets and capital and liability of the Tata Bank as on 30-6-1923 be credited on amalgamation to the capital of the Central Bank without any reduction and that nothing out of the said value be allowed to be carried by way of premium or otherwise to the reserve fund of the Central Bank. The shareholders present at the meeting refused to give a hearing to the speech attempted to be made by the plaintiff in support of his amendment. The chairman also disallowed the amendment as being out of order. The original resolution was put to the vote and declared carried by an overwhelming majority. A poll was demanded and before its result was declared, the plaintiff raised a further point of order challenging the validity of all the votes tendered in support of the resolution. The chairman ruled this point of order also as being out of order and declared the result of the poll. The resolution was passed and confirmed at subsequent meeting held on 6-9-1923 and the appointment of the liquidator was then considered. Originally two names were proposed as liquidator and two amendments were moved, the last of which was declared lost on a show of hands. A poll having been demanded, it was taken, but before the result of the poll was declared, the chairman of the meeting in consultation with the proposer and seconder of the resolution came to an agreement to appoint four named individual as liquidators. The demand for a poll was then withdrawn and the chairman moved an amendment to the effect that the four named persons be appointed liquidators. The amendment was carried both as an amendment and as a substantive proposition. The plaintiff thereupon sued for a declaration that the notices convening the meetings of the shareholders were not sufficient, that the meetings were not duly convened, that the amendments were out of order and that the resolutions were invalid and not binding on the Company. Held, that under S. 79 of the Companies Act read with art 68 of the Articles of Association of the Tata Bank all that was required by law to be stated in the notice was the general nature of the business. The general nature of the business was clearly indicated in the notice and sufficient details were given, which were necessary for the purpose of enabling the shareholders to consider the question. Where there is any secret agreement or any interest of the directors in the agreement not disclosed in the circular, or in the notice, the court will view with strictness any omission to refer to it in the notice; and the omission to mention any secret arrangement would constitute a serious defect in the notice. But where no secret agreement is proved or suggested and where there is no indication that there was anything to conceal, the court will as far as possible take a liberal view of the terms of the notice and will not upset the proceedings taken on a notice for some defect which might have been avoided, but which was not avoided on account of some honest mistake. Every limited company has a statutory right of going into voluntary liquidation and selling its assets to another company if the prescribed conditions are satisfied. An amalgamation may take place either by the transfer of undertakings A and B to a new corporation, C, or by the continuance of A and B by B upon terms that the shareholders of A shall become shareholders in B. It is not necessary that there should be a new company.

The point of order raised by the plaintiff was a request to the chairman to hold that the meeting was not competent to consider and confirm the said arrangement which was ultravires of the company. The chairman acted properly in ruling it out of order and that was the only course which the chairman could adopt in dealing with it. It was for the shareholders to consider whether to accept or reject the resolution, and the point of order might well have been made the subject of a speech against the resolution; but as a point of order it was properly ruled out. Though an amendment to a resolution might be allowed, even though notice of such amendment has not been given, an amendment which practically negatives the resolution could not be allowed. In other cases it depends on the nature of the resolution and the nature of the amendment, whether it could be or should be allowed by the chairman. Any proper amendment, which is moved by any member at a meeting, should be put to the meeting for consideration and if the chairman rules out any such amendment, the resolution is liable to be set aside.

With regard to a right of speech of a shareholder at a meeting, the majority must not refuse to listen to the speech of a member in reasonable terms for a reasonable time and if having regard to the circumstances of the case, the court is satisfied that the closure was properly applied, then even if it resulted in negating the right of speech to a particular member, it does not vitiate the resolution. It is difficult to lay down any general rule as to what should be the result where the right of speech is denied to a member in a general meeting of the shareholders. The proper test to lay down is to consider the facts and circumstances of each case and to determine whether the denial of the right of speech is sufficient to vitiate the resolution under the circumstances of the case. Those who refuse unnecessarily out of sheer impatience to listen for any reasonable length of time, to any arguments in support of the opposite views incur a grave risk in adopting the attitude of exposing the very resolution, which they may be anxious to adopt to the scrutiny of the court and to render it liable to be set aside. The very purpose which they may have in view may be defeated by those who resort to it. A shareholder is not entitled to speak at such a meeting as he pleases but has a right to be heard in reasonable terms for a reasonable time. (Shah, A. C. J. and Fawcett, J.) PARSHURAM DATTARAM v. The lease was given to the director not by virtue of his position as such but precisely as it would be given to any private person not connected with the company. Held, that the proper remedy was by way of suit and that the application was misconceived. The object of S. 235 of the Companies Act was to facilitate the recovery by the liquidator of assets of a company improperly dealt with by its promoters, directors or other officers. The section applies to breaches of trust and to misfeasance by such persons. A debt due by a director to a company upon foot of an ordinary contract and which he has failed to pay cannot be held to be money of the company. (Scott-Smith and Fforde, JJ.) SRI RAM v. A suit, which had been heard for two days, was on the representation of counsel on both sides that it was likely to be settled, passed over. Later in the day counsel for the defendant stated that the case was settled and that the terms would be put in later. What happened was that counsel for both parties left the amount to which the plaintiff was entitled to be fixed by the counsel for the defendant. The counsel named a certain sum, but on the plaintiff being informed of it, he repudiated the suggestion that the counsel's opinion was final. On an application by the defendant asking that the terms of the settlement arrived at might be recorded and decree passed in accordance therewith, the question arose whether the parties to the compromise were truly adidem. Held, that though the impression upon the minds of counsel for both parties was that the settlement had been achieved, yet in point of fact there was a misapprehension as to the exact ambit of the terms of that agreement, that as the defendant's Counsel was under the impression that his interposition was merely to be accepted as a leading and predominant element in contributing to the compromise, while the plaintiff's Counsel though that it was to be conclusive, the parties were not adidem in connection with the compromise and that the same had failed as a settlement of the suit between the parties. See ibid. Express authority on the part of Counsel from the client is necessary to entitle counsel to commit the fortunes of his client to the determination of the Counsel for the other side. contempt. It is well-settled that when a person is guilty of such contempt, he places himself in a perilous situation so as not to be heard by the Court till he has purged his contempt. R. and others who had instituted a suit in the District Court to establish R's title to the absolute estate in a Zamindari subject to the life interest of C, being in want of funds to carry on the said litigation approached T. for financial aid and entered into an agreement with him, which provided, inter alia as follows :—“(1) It is therefore agreed that you T. should advance for the proceedings of the said suit and appeal money up to a sum not exceeding two lakhs of rupees and within that limit as per the conditions mentioned below; that in respect of the money advanced by you from time to time detailed receipts for the vakil's fees, printing, stamps, etc. should be furnished to you; that as regards the whole of the balance, accounts of receipts and expenses should be rendered to you and for the sum so ascertained you should obtain receipt from R out of us and with respect to the money that may again be required, you should at the request of R out of us advance money, look into accounts, and get detailed vouchers for moneys spent as above stated and settle the accounts then and there without giving room for disputes in future.

(10). We shall not compromise with the debt, or file razinama or withdrawal without your consent. (11) It is agreed that if K. High Court Vakil, who is working on our behalf in this suit advises us from the then existing circumstances of this suit, that it would be better for us to compromise, we should agree to it and compromise or, withdraw the suit. (12) Moreover out of the moveable and immoveable properties that may be obtained by such compromise, we shall first pay to you the principal money advanced by you together with interest at one rupee per mensem from the respective dates and out of the moveable and immoveable properties that remain after so giving away to you, we shall at once execute and give you a proper sale-deed and place you in possession of 3/32 share. All of us and our heirs are liable to you and your family members according to all the aforesaid terms and are also bound to give effect to them without fail." T. advanced a portion of the amount which he undertook by the agreement to advance, and before making any further advances, insisted upon vouchers being furnished to him as regards fees alleged to have been paid to pleaders and as regards amounts spent on lodging expenses, etc. R. the settlor sent a reply dated 14-2-1908 to T's demand for vouchers which reply ran as follows:—"while not even one half of the amount agreed to be expended for the suit has yet been spent and while you are liable to pay the entire amount for the expenses of the suit and though the arrangement is that you should not fail to spend the amount required for expenses in this Court (Court of first instance), and though you are fully aware of the fact that in the event of your failing to do so, the agreement would be cancelled, you have, without sending money when required by us, written this letter containing false and unnecessary reasons. I do not know what reply you expected to be given thereto. For the money spent previously, the necessary explanations, accounts of credit and debit and receipts bearing my signature have been sent, when credit and debit accounts have been sent under my signature and on my responsibility. I do not see proper reasons for the transaction being stopped. Held, on a construction of the agreement set out above (1) that T. was entitled to insist upon vouchers of the disbursements made by R. out of the sums advanced by T. under the agreement, the settlor R. was bound to send vouchers of those disbursements whether demanded by T. or not; R's letter dated 14-2-1908 amounted to a refusal by him to send them, coupled with an intimation that if money was not sent, though the vouchers should not be furnished in the first instance, he, R would treat the contract evidenced by the agreement at an end: the settlor R in sending the letter broke the contract and T. might, if he wished have taken the refusal of R. to furnish vouchers as a repudiation by him of the contract and have elected to treat the contract at an end, but if T. did not do so it was not open to R. to put an end to the contract merely by committing a breach of it; (2) that the agreement embodied in Cl. 12 of the agreement was an agreement by the plaintiff in O.S. No. 18 of 1903 to assign to others part of the fruits they might acquire in an action at law and therefore perfectly legal: and there could be no distinction on the point between the fruits of an action which the plaintiffs got by compromise and the fruits he would receive by a decree or verdict in his favour; (3) that even if the money given to the plaintiffs in the compromise was a non-existing thing at the date of the agreement and only came into existence subsequently at the date of the compromise decrees contemplated by the agreement, the agreement attached to the things so coming into existence subsequently and (4) that on the true construction of cls. 10, 11 and 12 of the agreement the giving of the consent of T and his vakil K, was not a condition precedent which must be performed before any compromise should be made. "Moveable or immoveable property" in cl. 12 of the agreement included almost every conceivable kind of property and the words of that clause would be satisfied if half the estate sued for or another estate or the jewels of the tenant for life C. deposited in his safe, and the money in his chest had been awarded under the compromise. As regards the clause relating to the consent of T or the vakil to the compromise, it would be unbusinesslike and indeed irrational for the parties in 1907, the date of the agreement, to have entered into a contract making such consent a condition precedent to the compromise which might be entered into years after. A term must, therefore, be implied to exist in the contract to the effect that the consent mentioned should be given when possible. (Lord Atkinson). *SRI RAJA VATSAVAYA VENKATASUBHADRAYAMMA v. —Construction.

Where a contractor agreed to construct 'kothi' in the bagh at the rate specified less Rs. 10 per cent for commission, and the work was to be done within one year and where within a few weeks of the acceptance of this contract radical changes began to be ordered by the owner.

Held, the arrangement by way of rebate or a reduction of 10 per cent. commission in favour of the owner, was an arrangement which was only exigible and became crystallised when the work was completed and the final accounts at the end of the year were to be made up. As the contract was not possible of completion within the year and as it in point of fact was not completed and as the failure to complete was not due to any fault on the contractor's part the stipulation accordingly disappeared. A fortiori such a deduction was never agreed to with regard to the further work. ——— Construction—Previous negotiations of constitute a condition precedent—Effect of.

If the documents or letters relied on as constituting a contract contemplate the execution of a further contract between the parties, it is a question of construction whether the execution of the further contract is a condition or term of the bargain; or whether it is a mere expression of the desire of the parties as to the manner in which the transaction already agreed to will in fact go through. In the former case there is no enforceable contract either because the condition is unfulfilled or because the law does not recognise a contract to enter into a contract. In the latter case there is a binding contract and the reference to the mere formal document may be ignored. (Lord Shaw.) SETH HUKAM CHAND v. RAJA RAM BAHADUR SINGH.

——— Construction—Contract should be read as a whole.

——— Construction—Price of property to be settled by valuer—Fraud or mistake in valuation—Contract when enforceable.

Where a contract refers the price of property agreed to be sold to a valuer, this does not of itself preclude the Court from inquiring into the adequacy of the consideration and this inadequacy of consideration would, of course, be strengthened as a defence if any circumstances arose which threw a doubt on the accuracy with which the valuation was made. Where the valuer applies a wholly mistaken standard it is open to the court to interfere with the valuation. (Mears, C. J. and Piggott, J.) HIRA LAL v. KHAIRATILAL. 46 A. 211 : 22 A. L. J. 76 :

——— Construction—C. I. F. Contract—Sale of goods—Passing of property.

In the case of a C. I. F. contract, the question whether the property in the goods has passed from the seller to the buyer depends entirely on the question whether the seller has parted with the control over the disposal of the goods. He may intend to do this if he endorses the bill of lading over to the purchaser. But if he endorses the bill of lading in blank and hands it over to his agent for delivery with instructions that he shall not hand it over until the goods are paid for then the seller has shown his intention to retain the disposal of the goods under his control. ——— C. I. F. Property passes to purchaser on putting articles on board.

The obligations of a seller under a C.I.F. contract are that he secures the freight for the carriage of the goods in question to their destination, has the goods covered by an Insurance policy for the voyage, places the goods on board the ship proceeding to the destination mentioned in the contract, and then tenders the necessary documents to the buyer. When he has done this, he has done all that he need do to entitle him to the payment of the price at which the goods have been agreed to be purchased. The insurance of the goods is clearly intended for the protection of the buyer and if the goods are lost in transit, it is the buyer that recovers the amount of the insurance policy. The buyer therefore protects himself against the loss of the goods by getting the seller to insure them as soon as they are placed on board and the property in the goods therefore which are appropriated to the buyer passes to him as soon

It was proved that the third party was a benamidar for the plaintiff, but the vendee pleaded that he was not liable as there was no privity between him and the plaintiff. Held, the ordinary rule of law that a stranger to a contract though beneficiary thereunder could not sue upon it does not prevent a Court, in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction from passing a decree in his favour, when all the parties affected by the contract are before the court, 3 Mer. 582; 31 I. —Sale of goods—"Office dhara"—What is—Failure to give notice—Breach of contract—Damages—Customs duty—If to be allowed.

There is a trade usage in Karachi according to which buyers of goods sold by importing offices are within certain limits allowed to keep the goods in the importer's godowns and can ordinarily take delivery of them at their convenience after the time prescribed. In such a case, if the seller fails to give notice to the buyer of the arrival of the goods, he commits a breach and the damages are assessable on the basis of the market rate as on the date of the breach or as on the date of expiry of the days of grace.

Where customs duty is payable by the buyer, the same should be deducted along with the contract price in assessing damages. (Kennedy, J. C. and Aston, A. J. C.) FIRM OF RAMSARAN DAS RAMGOOVER v. BHURMAL RECKHAND. 1924 Sindh 38.

—Sale of land—Time essence of contract—Waiver.

—Sale of immovable property—Deposit—Payment of instalments of purchase money—Breach of contract—Rescission—Right of vendor to keep moneys advanced by vendee.

If a party to a contract for sale of land breaks the contract, then if that breach is something that goes to the root of the contract, the other party has his option. He may still treat the contract as subsisting and sue for specific performance; or he may elect to hold the contract as at an end, i. e. no longer binding on him, while retaining the right to sue for damages in respect of the breach committed. The test is as to whether such an election has been made. Where money is paid by the purchaser not as a guarantee for the performance of the contract but in part payment of the purchase money and the vendor is entitled to exercise his option of treating the contract as at an end and determines it, the instalments of money paid after the deposit are recoverable from the vendor. But the vendor is entitled to keep the deposit as liquidated damages for breach of the contract. (Lord Dunedin, Phillimore and Carson, JJ.) WILLIAM JOSEPH MAYSON v. A. J. CLOUET. 35 M. L. T. 205. —S. 2—Contract—Consideration—Bonus to employee—Promise to pay—Suit to enforce—Maintainability—Transfer of ownership in bonus to employee by employer—Suit to recover bonus in case of—Maintainability.

In a suit which was dismissed for want of a cause of action the allegations, in the plaint were that the plaintiff, a godown-keeper in the employment of a Mahomedan firm, was credited with a bonus of Rs. 3,500 out of the profits of the firm in consideration of the good services rendered by him and of the final profits made by the firm, that bonus was carried to plaintiff's credit in the firm's books in 1919, and that in 1920 he was allowed to draw out of it Rs. 420 but that the defendants refused, in spite of his demand to pay the balance.

Held by the Officiating Chief Justice.—The allegation in the plaint disclosed a case of a completed gift and a transfer of ownership in favour of the plaintiff; if ownership in the bonus was completely transferred, and there was more than a mere promise without consideration to give the plaintiff a bonus, it was immaterial that the amount was originally of the nature of a bonus; and the suit was wrongly dismissed on the ground that the plaint disclosed no cause of action.

Held by Srinivasa Aiyangar, J. (Concurring).—The plaintiff's claim should be deemed to be based on a contract, apart from any question whatever of a contemplated gift and apart from any relationship between the parties of depositor and deposit or creditor and debtor, and the plaintiff had a case on the footing of a contract which was clearly sustainable. —S. 16—Amending Act of 1899, S. 2—Unconscionableness of bargain. If can be gone into—Position to dominate will.

By Sub-S. 3 of S. 16 three matters are dealt with. In the first place the relations between the parties to each other must be such that one is in a position to dominate the will of the other. Once that position is substantiated the second stage has been reached, viz., the issue whether the contract has been induced by undue influence. Upon the determination of this issue a third point emerges, which is that of the onus probandi. The burden of proving that the contract was not induced by undue influence is to lie upon the person who was in a position to dominate the will of the other. Error is almost sure to arise if the order of these propositions be changed. The unconscionableness of the bargain is not the first thing to be considered. The first thing to be considered is the relations of the parties. Even though a bargain had been unconscionable a remedy under the Contract Act does not come into view until the initial fact of a position to dominate the will has been established. Once that fact is established, then the unconscionable nature of the bargain and the burden of proof on the issue of undue influence come into operation. The decision in 42 Cal. 690 which lays down that "where there is ample security, the exaction of excessive and usurious interest in itself raises a presumption of undue influence which it requires very little evidence to substantiate," is wrong. —S. 16—Helplessness of borrower—Caused by lender—Mortgage—High rate of interest.

Defendant a pirdanashin lady had her properties attached in execution. She approached the plaintiffs for a loan and one of them promised a loan on the security of the property at 12 per cent. The defendant thereupon obtained an adjournment of the court sale, but the plaintiffs did not advance the loan. Subsequently on the last adjourned date for the sale, the defendant obtained money on mortgage from the plaintiffs at 24 per cent. with 3 monthly rests and containing a condition of foreclosure.

Held, that the helplessness of the defendant was to a large extent caused by the plaintiffs having promised to lend her at a reasonable interest almost up to the date of sale and thus preventing her from going to other money-lenders, that she was forced to consent to these onerous terms by reason of the last day for sale having approached, and that the terms of the mortgage were hard and unconscionable. and next that the bargain was unconscionable. The mere fact that the borrower was in urgent need of money does not show undue influence. Where the defendant, mortgagor, was a businessman well aware of the contents of the document he was executing, the well-known principle that the signature attached to a document supposed to be of a wholly different kind or not to contain a clause so important as to substantially alter its character, is invalid on the ground that the mind of the person signing did not accompany the signature, does not apply. The principle does not also apply where the person signing is estopped by negligence from denying that he did not understand what he was signing. (Barton, J.C.) *OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF MADRAS v. S. 16—Undue influence—Purdanashin lady—Fiduciary relationship.

The execution of a document is induced by undue influence in fact in a case where the mind of the person who executes the document is not free and unlettered, and where the execution of the document is proved to have been induced by some person possessing a personal ascendancy over the will of the person who executed the document; if one person, having a dominion over another person's will, induces that other person to execute a document, whether it be in his favour or in favour of the third person, then the doctrine of undue influence applies, and the Court will not allow that document to stand. Or again, where one person is in a fiduciary relationship to the person who executes the document, and the person, who is in this fiduciary relationship to the executant of the document benefits under that document, then the Court will assume, if the relationship is such that it may reasonably result in undue influence, that the execution of the document was induced by undue influence. The ordinary cases of fiduciary relationship are those of physician and patient, trustee and cisus quae trust, parent and child and in all such cases where the person in the fiduciary relation receives a benefit under the document, the Court will assume without proof that it is a document the execution of which was not fairly arrived at, and it will set that document aside, unless the person benefiting under it can satisfy the Court that the executant had independent legal advice. Ss. 23 and 65—Chit fund—Lottery—Discontinuance in the middle—Subscriber is entitled to sue for a refund of subscriptions paid—Severance of legal from illegal part of the contract.

The defendant was carrying on a chit fund. There were 500 subscribers each paying one rupee per month. The chit was to go on for 50 months and every month 2 prizes of Rs. 25 each were to be drawn by lot; any subscriber who happened to win a prize would get Rs. 25 at once and had to pay thereafter only Rs. 8 a month while if he wins a second prize he would be given another Rs. 25 and thereafter his subscriptions would cease and his name would no longer be included in drawing the prize. At the end of 50 months all subscribers who had won no prize would be paid back the whole of the money they had subscribed. Held, that the arrangement was clearly a lottery. Where the stakeholder discontinued the chit after 27 months and thereupon a subscriber sued him for refund of the subscriptions he had paid, Held per Krishnan, J. (Odgers, J. dissenting) the main point was to pay back the total amount of subscriptions paid while the arrangement to give prizes was only a collateral one serving as an inducement to join the chit and hence the former was severable from the latter and the illegality of the latter did not necessarily attach to the former. The suit for refund was therefore maintainable. (1919) M. W. N. 570 not foll.

Per Odgers, J.—As a material part of the illegal purpose had been carried out, the subscriber was not entitled to recover the amounts paid, as both the plaintiff and defendant were in pari delicto and there was no ground for holding that they were not potior est conditio possidentis. It cannot be disputed that a Kaccha Adatia in Bombay enters into transactions on behalf of his up-country constituent with third parties in Bombay and that when he enters into such transactions under instructions from his up-country constituent, the third party is responsible for the losses to the up-country constituent. To the third party in Bombay both the Kaccha Adatia and his constituent would be responsible. The name of the up-country constituent is not communicated to the third party in Bombay, but the name of the third party with whom the Kaccha Adatia transacts business on behalf of the up-country constituent is communicated to the up-country constituent. The Adatia enters into contracts with the third parties in Bombay on behalf of his up-country constituent as an agent, the name of the principal not being disclosed. Where the plaintiff is employed as a Kaccha Adatia by an up-country constituent, and where transactions are entered into by the Adatia with third parties in Bombay and where there is the circumstance that the intention of the third parties is not shown to be to deal in differences only, it is not enough for the defendant to prove an agreement between himself and his Adatia that the Adatia would so arrange business for him as not to require him to give or take delivery. In order that a transaction may be treated as a wager, it is essential that the common intention of the two parties should be to deal in differences only.

In a suit on a contract which defendant alleges to be by way of wager, it is not sufficient for the defendant to show that neither party intended or contemplated that there should be any delivery of goods. He has to show further that there was an agreement that neither party should make or demand delivery. Where both parties took pains to create evidence to clothe the transaction with the appearance of a valid contract, much stronger evidence than was created is necessary to rebut its effect. Defendant agreed to purchase from plaintiff twenty candies of cotton at Rs. 150 per candy and deposited certain ornaments as earnest money. The goods were to be delivered on 1-1-1917. The contract also provided if the price on the date fixed was over Rs. 150 the plaintiff was to give the defendant the profits. On the date fixed for delivery the price had fallen down to Rs. 130 and the defendant defaulted to take delivery. In a suit for damages by plaintiff Held, that the contract was not a wagering transaction and the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The mere fact that the parties had unnecessarily stipulated for the consequences of a breach by providing for the payment of difference in price between the contract rate and the price on the date of default did not make the contract a wagering one (*Shah A. It was urged that though the transactions were wagering ones, the plff. was an agent of the defendant and therefore the collateral liabilities as between plaintiff as agent and the defendant as principal were unaffected. Held, that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to prove that he was not acting for himself as a principal, and with the defendant as the other principal, but was acting merely as agent between the plaintiff as one principal, and the defendant as agent and one or more other principals, third parties; that in the absence of a single instance to establish his dealings with any other party than the defendant, the lower

In a suit by plaintiff for recovery of money on account of shares sold by him to defendant upon the Madras stock Exchange of which they were both members, the defendant pleaded that the transaction in question was a dealing in differences and thus partaking of the nature of a wagering contract. Held, that the burden lay on the defendant to prove amutual understanding between the parties that the shares should not be delivered but only the differences paid. — S. 39—Breach of contract—Anticipatory breach—Acquiescence by other party to the contract in the repudiation—Termination of the contract.

An anticipatory breach: that is to say, a breach of the contract before time has arrived for performance is a matter of intention. If one party to the contract, by words or by conduct, expresses to the other party an intention not to perform his obligation under the contract when the time arrives for its performance, the latter may take him at his word and accept the repudiation of the promise and sue him for breach. The legal position is this. The first party has, in fact, made an offer. This offer is "I am not going to perform the contract. I offer to end it here and now, and to accept the consequences of ending it, those consequences being you can sue me for damages for my refusal." The other party may or may not accept that offer. If he accepts, then by consensus the contract is determined but with a right to damages against the party who has refused to perform. But it is the intention of the contracting parties that can either tie or untie the bonds of a contract. It is open to the party guilty of a breach to retract before the other party acquiesces in it and thereby puts an end to the contract. (Scott Smith and Fjorde, JJ.) JHANDOO MAL JAGAN NETH v. —S. 69—Scope of—Co-mortgagor redeeming—Suit for contribution.

S. 69, Contract Act, contemplates only those cases where payment is made by a person under no legal liability to make it and for another person who is bound in the law to pay it. It does not apply to a case where contribution is claimed by some of the mortgagors who have redeemed a mortgage against the purchaser of the title of one of the other mortgagors, as the latter is not a person from whom money is legally recoverable. In order to enable a party to recover money paid by him from another under S. 70 it is necessary that the party sought to be made liable must not only have been benefited by the payment but must also have had an opportunity of rejecting such benefit. Plaintiff contracted to buy a building in the city of Bombay for 18 Lakhs of rupees and paid one lakh of rupees as earnest money to the defendant. The contract was entered into in January 1920, and the sale was to be completed within six months. The building was erected on leasehold land which had been taken by the defendant for a term of 50 years from the year 1886. At the date of the sale a tenant was in possession of the building for a term expiring in March 1920. A few days after the contract for sale the plaintiff contracted to resell the building to a person who was desirous of opening a hotel. The tenant claimed that he was entitled to a renewal of a lease from the defendant for a period of six years under an oral contract. The tenant gave notice of his claim to the plaintiff and also sued the defendant in May 1920 for specific performance to grant a further lease. In April 1920 the solicitors of the defendant sent the title deeds of the properties to the plaintiff's solicitors for investigation. In August 1920 the person with whom the plaintiff had contracted to resell the house wrote to the plaintiff stating that if the sale to him was not completed by November 1920, he would cancel the contract. The plaintiff in his turn asked the defendant to complete the sale before November 1920 making time the essence of the contract. As the defendant failed to fulfil the contract within time the person with whom the plaintiff had contracted to resell the building cancelled his contract. In a suit by the plaintiff against the defendant for refund of the earnest money together with damages to the extent of 5 lakhs of rupees the defendant counter claimed for specific performance. Held, that the plaintiff was justified in making time the essence of the contract and that the time he gave was reasonable. The default therefore lay on the part of the defendant who was bound to return the earnest money and also pay to the plaintiff all the costs incurred in the investigation of title. The plaintiff however was not entitled to damages on the footing of the difference between the contract price and the market value of the property on the date of breach. The appellant gave a lease of some lands to the plaintiff under the belief that he was the lessee of it from his brother. He failed to give possession as his brother had leased the same to a third person. In a suit by the plaintiffs for damages for breach of contract which was decreed in the trial court it was pleaded on behalf of the appellants, that he had acted in good faith, that the respondent must prove fraud, collusion and misrepresentation before he could claim damages. It was further contended that the fraud of English decisions was that an action for breach of contract with regard to immoveable property could not lie, beyond actual expenses incurred. (Bain v. Fothergill. 1874 L. R. 7 H. L. 158) Flucrean v. Thorn Hill (1776) 2 W. B. L. 1078.)

Held on appeal, that the rule of English Law laid down in Flucrean v. Thorn Hill and Bain v. Fothergill was not law in this country. That in India S. 73 of the Indian Contract Act should govern an action for breach of contract with regard to immoveable property; that the question of the appellant's good faith was immaterial and he was liable to fulfil his absolute obligation to deliver possession. *A dikesavalu Naidu, v. ————S. 73—Damages—Contract for sale of goods—Breach by buyer—Measure of damages—Delay in resale by vendors—Fall in market—Loss if recoverable.

CONTRACT ACT, S. 73.

In assessing damages for breach of a contract for the sale of goods the fundamental basis is compensation for pecuniary loss naturally flowing from the breach, but this is qualified by the plaintiff's duty to mitigate the loss consequent on the breach, and he cannot claim any part of the damage which is due to his neglect to take such steps. If the seller elects to resell he must do so within a reasonable time from the date on which the contract was broken by the buyer. In such a case the resale price may be accepted as evidence of actual value of the goods at the date of the breach of contract. But the seller cannot delay the resale until the market has fallen and then resell the property and thereby cause to the buyer a loss which he might not have sustained had the resale taken place within a reasonable time from the date of the breach of contract. Where there is a clear breach of contract on a particular date subsequent negotiations between the parties do not affect their rights inter se under the contract and the seller if he wishes to resell must do so within a reasonable time after the breach. If he delays further he is thrown back on his remedy of damages on the ordinary basis of the difference between the contract rate and the market rate on the date of breach. (*Shah, A. C. An earnest is something paid or given at the time of bargain to evidence the fact that the negotiation had ended in an actual and binding contract, and as a pledge for its due performance by the depositor, to be forfeited in case of non-performance by his default. Though the plaintiffs owing to their default may not have any claim for damages, there is no justice or equity in allowing defendants to retain the sum paid to them in part-payment for the price of the goods which are admittedly never delivered, and which beyond doubt owing to rise in the prices and in consequence of the plaintiffs' default they were able to sell at such better rates than they would otherwise have done. But the drafts were sent through cliffs, which bank, 'or the remaining three shipments, when presented to the defendant were dishonoured. The plaintiffs thereupon sued the defendant for the price of the goods or in the alternative for damages. Held, that the defendant had no right to refuse to take delivery of the goods, he having agreed to extend the time therefor. The plaintiffs were entitled to and did send the goods within a reasonable period beyond the contract time. The property in the goods not having passed to the defendant, the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue for the price but only to claim damages represented by the market rates at the date of breach. One of the brothers having made default in payment of his share of the annuity, annuitant sued for resumption of the properties allotted to him at the partition but the lower appellate court decreed the arrears of the annuity and relieved defendant against the resumption of the properties holding that the stipulation was by way of penalty. Held, that the stipulation in the partition deed for resumption of the ———S. 74—Penalty—Meaning of lease—Stipulation for payment of royalty in four kists—Interest payable on default—Power of Court to relieve against.

Interest is payable by way of damage for the loss sustained to the party who advances money to another. This damage may be the subject of an agreement between the parties and at the time when the contract of loan was entered into, the parties may fix a consolidated sum or merely a certain percentage on the amount advanced to be paid by the debtor as compensation to the lender on account of his being out of pocket with respect to the sum advanced by him as a loan. The latter way of fixing compensation is commonly known as interest on the loan. This is enforceable in law as an agreement between the parties : but over and above this in order to ensure payment of the loan at an appointed time the parties may further agree that an additional sum by way of penalty or an increased rate of interest over and above that originally fixed would be payable by the defaulting debtor in case of breach of the contract to pay at the appointed time. The enhanced rate of interest may be chargeable either from the time the breach is committed or from any prior period. This kind of stipulation is said to be penal, and the creditor cannot, as a matter of right, enforce it in law. Section 74 in such a case gives power to the Court to interfere with the contract entered into, between the parties by empowering the court, to vary the amount fixed or the increased rate of interest by allowing only reasonable compensation. A mining lease provided inter alia for the payment of a royalty of Rs. 1,750 every year in four instalments, for interest at one per cent in case of default of the payment of the kist at the due date and for interest at Rs. 3-2-0 per mensem in case of default in payment of four consecutive kists. In a suit by the lessor for recovery of the royalty with increased interest as provided in the deed, held, that the stipulation for increased interest on default of the payment of the four kists was a stipulation by way of penalty but that the Court could allow the claim for interest at enhanced rate as reasonable compensation for breach of contract committed by the lessor. The explanation to S. 74 of the Contract Act and the illustration (d) to the Section added by the amending Act of 1899 did not make any change in the law but merely explained and removed the doubt as to the right interpretation of the section as originally enacted. —S. 74—Penalty—Chit Fund—Subscriptions payable monthly—Provision for payment of whole of the arrears in case of default in payment of instalment.

Plaintiff was the stake-holder of a chit fund and the defendants were the holders of one chit. The chit holders were 10 in number and each chit was of Rs. 400 per year. The defendants bid for the first chit and became entitled thereto as they offered to pay the highest amount of premium. The total amount pooled being Rs. 4,000 the defendants agreed to a deduction of Rs. 1,500 as premium and out of the balance of Rs. 2,500 deducting a sum of Rs. 400 payable for that chit and a further sum of Rs. 100 retained by stake-holder as advance towards the second chit payable by the defendants, the actual amount received by the defendant was Rs. 2,000. The defendants executed a bond for Rs. 3,500 in favour of the plaintiff containing the following among other provisions:—

"Out of this sum of Rs. 3,500 we shall pay you Rs. 300 for the second chit which is due on 15th December, 1918. From the third chit forward we shall pay you on 30th Kurthigai of each year at the rate of Rs. 400 per instalment. If we fail to pay in this way we shall pay the amount due for the instalment for which we have failed to pay within six months, together with interest thereon at the rate of 2 per cent. per mensem from the date of default. If we fail to pay even in this way, we shall pay you on demand the whole of the remaining amount together with interest thereon at the aforesaid rate in a lump sum without reference to future instalments."

Held, that the provision with regard to the whole of the unpaid balance becoming due on default being made for six months after the date fixed for payment of any instalment, was penal and could be relieved against.

Where on a proper construction of the contract between the parties the debt itself arises or becomes due and payable by the debtors on the respective dates fixed for the instalments, the stipulation that on default being made in the payment of any instalments, the whole of the balance should become due and payable, would be in the nature of a penalty. If the real agreement between the parties was to the effect that the whole amount was on the date of the bond a debt due, but the creditor for the convenience of the debtor allowed to be paid by instalments intimating that if default should be made in the payment of any instalment he would withdraw the concession, then the stipulation as to the whole amount of the balance becoming payable would not be penal.

A commission agent and his principal do not stand in the relation of vendor and vendee when goods have been purchased in the ordinary course of business by the former for the latter and despatched to him by rail. (Ireland v Livingstone. L. R. 5 H. L. 395 : Cassabaglow v. Gibb, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 797 referred to.) The agency contract is in some respects analogous to that of a contract of purchase and sale, as for example in the commission agent having the right of stoppage in transitu : but the property in the goods passes to the principal immediately on purchase and does not depend on the manner of delivery. S. 91, Indian Contract Act, does not in terms apply to such a case. Where the customary method of doing business as between a principal and his commission agent was to despatch goods by rail uninsured and on a particular consignment of goods being lost, the principal could not hold the carrier responsible for safe delivery on account of the absence of insurance, the agent is not guilty of negligence and hence cannot be charged for the loss. §§ 95 and 96—Sale of goods on credit—Omission to take delivery—Buyer repudiating contract.

Where on sale of goods on credit the buyer makes default in taking delivery and repudiates the contract, the general provisions of S. 95 of the Contract Act giving the seller a lien on goods remaining in his possession after sale has effect. (Reilly, J.) MULKI NARAYANAKAMMATHI v. K. KUNI MOYI. 20 L. W. 486 : (1924) M. W. N. 748 : 82 I. C. 850 : 1924 Mad. 866 : 35 M. L. J. 72 (H. C.).

§ S. 96 and 97—Sale of goods on credit—Variance from the original terms on account of special circumstances—Insolvency of buyer before delivery whether the vendee can cancel contract.

The defendants sold piecegoods to plaintiffs on condition that the plaintiffs were to have two months time for payment after delivery. The defendants having understood that the plaintiffs were in embarrassed circumstances, varied the terms by insisting on cash payment. The plaintiffs filed a suit for breach of contract on the grounds (1) that the defendants had broken an important part of the contract by refusal of credit and (2) that under S. 96 of the Indian Contract Act, the seller had a right to retain the goods in case of the buyer becoming insolvent.

Held, dismissing the plaintiffs' claim, that S. 96 of the Contract Act entitled a buyer to take delivery of goods where the payment is to be made at a future day and no time is fixed for delivery : but it gives the seller a right to retain the goods of the buyer who becomes an insolvent before delivery. That till the bales were appropriated towards the contract, the property in the bales did not pass to the buyer and that S. 96 cannot apply.

Held further that the insolvency of the plaintiff was a special circumstance which would justify the defendants in asking for cash against delivery. (Devadoss, J.) ABDUL RAHMAN SAHIB v. SHAW, WALLACE & Co. 20 L. W. 725e

§ S. 107—Refusal to take delivery—Resale—Appropriation—Absence of.

The defendants refused to take delivery of goods contracted to be purchased on the ground the contents were not complete. The plaintiffs thereupon resold the goods and claimed the loss. Held in the absence of evidence of appropriation, there was no right of re-sale. (Shadi Lal, C. J. and Lamsdun, J.) THE FIRM MAKHAN LAL—HAZARI LAL v. THE FIRM SURAJ BHAN BAKHTIWAR MAL. 76 I. C. 77.

§ S. 107—Resale—Notice—Burden of proof

The giving of a notice is a condition precedent to exercising the right of resale and the person who resells must plead and prove notice. He cannot get over the statutory obligation by saying the purchaser did not suffer any loss by the resale. (Kotwal, A. J. C.) NARAIN DAS v. KUNJILAL. 1924 Nag. 162 (2).

—S. 108— Exception 1—Attachment of moveable property in the possession of the judgment debtor—Property hired by him—Sale by bailiff without knowledge of the owner—Rights of purchaser.

In execution of a decree for money certain moveable property in the hands of the judgment debtor was attached and sold by the bailiff. It was found that the property had been hired by the judgment-debtor and not his own. Held that the purchaser at the court sale did not get a better title than the judgment-debtor and he was liable to return the property or its value to the owner. —Ss. 109 and 118—Contract for sale of goods—Numbers on packages not material or of the essence of the Contract unless descriptive of the quality of the contents—Mistake.

A contract note for the sale of bales of Long Cloth in course of manufacture described some of them as bearing numbers "139" and "141", whereas from previous contracts in respect of the sale of the identical bales beginning from that of the original vendor who, in ordering them from the Mills, had required his numbers "739" "741" respectively to be printed not "139" or "141". Held, (affirming the decision of the High Court of Bombay in its appellate jurisdiction) that, as the numbers in the contract had no specific meaning in the market, and were merely reference numbers the figures "139" and "141" being mere clerical errors for "739" and "741" respectively did not constitute a warranty of the goods or, indicate their quality or description. —Ss. 160 and 161—Bailment—Loss or injury to goods—Liability of bailee—Negligence—Presumption.

Under S. 160 of the Contract Act it is the duty of the bailee to return or deliver according to the bailor's directions the goods bailed without demand as soon as the time for which they were bailed has expired, or the purpose for which they were bailed has been accomplished. If, by the default of the bailee the goods are not returned, delivered, or tendered at the proper time, he is responsible to the bailor for loss, destruction or deterioration of the goods from the time. An action in trespass lies where the bailee has destroyed the bailed property, or lost it, while where the bailee has been guilty of a conversion of the bailed property either by a user of it in a different manner or for a different purpose from that agreed upon or by failure to redeliver it or deliver it over in accordance to the terms of the contract, the bailor may sue him in trover. Proof of loss or injury to the goods establishes a sufficient prima facie case against the bailee to put him upon the defence. Under S. 213, Contract Act, an agent is under a statutory obligation to render accounts to his principal but not vice versa. The mere fact that the principal has kept accounts does not entitle the agent to ask for accounts. The proper relief is to claim a specific sum and therein ask the principal to produce the account books. (Moti Sagar, J.) GHULAM QUTAB-UD-DIN KHAN v. FAIZ BAKSH. 78 I. C. 959.

—Ss. 231 and 251—Partnership—Money borrowed by partner and spent by him for partnership purposes—Liability of the other partners—Dormant partner—Extent of liability.

Where one member of a partnership borrows money on his own credit by giving his own promissory note for the sum so borrowed and he afterwards uses the proceeds of the note in the partnership business, of his own free will, without being under any obligation to or contract with the lender so to do, the partnership is not liable for the loan. The ultimate use by a firm of money borrowed by a partner individually on his own credit does not make the firm liable for the loan. The circumstance that the firm obtains the benefit of a transaction entered into by one of its members may show that he entered into the contract as agent of the firm. But the fact is no more than evidence that this was the case and the question upon which the liability or non-liability of the firm depends is, not whether the firm obtained the benefit of the contract, but did the firm by one of its partners or otherwise enter into the contract. The defendant entered into a contract with the plaintiff who was a dealer and broker in stocks and shares for sale of certain shares. The relevant portion of the contract was as follows :—"Sold this day by order and for account of B. G. H. to selves for principals, etc." The contract was signed by the plaintiff over the word "brokers". The defendant having failed to deliver the shares, the plaintiff sued for damages. The plaintiff also alleged a custom of the Calcutta share market whereby the broker is treated as principal and entitled as principal to enforce contracts. Held that the plaintiff having entered into the contract on behalf of undisclosed principal as broker or agent, he could not enforce the same. Further the plaintiff's suit must fail under S. 236 of the Contract Act as he was not acting as agent but on his own account. 17 Cal. 449 ; 42 Cal. 1050 ; L.R.

18 Q. B. D. 708 referred to. Though evidence of a usage augmenting the responsibility of a broker is admissible as consistent with the contract, evidence of a usage inconsistent with the terms of the contract is inadmissible. —S. 239—Partnership—Company promoters—Relationship between—Agreement of parties.

Persons who are working together to form a company, although they may intend to become members of the company, after its formation are not partners if this be the only relation between them : they are, it is true, engaged in a common object, and that object is ultimately to acquire profit, but their immediate object is the formation of a company, and even if the company is not to be incorporated they are only in the position of persons who intend to become partners after the company is formed.

Per mookerjee, J. Promoters may become partners in fact, by actually carrying on as incidental to the work of forming a corporation, a business enterprise ; in such an event it is the carrying on of such business, not the combination to effect an incorporation that makes them partners. One partner has no power in the absence of special authority to bind the firm by submission to arbitration, but each partner who does any act necessary for, or usually done in, carrying on business of such a partnership as that of which he is a member, binds his co-partners to the same extent as if he were their agent duly appointed for that purpose and S. 188, Contract Act, gives an agent, having authority to carry on a business, power to do anything necessary for the purpose or usually done in the course of conducting such business. —S. 254—Suit before the termination of partnership term—If premature.

By a partnership deed the partnership was to last from 1st January 1915 till 31st December, 1919. The plaintiff's suit for dissolution and accounts was filed on the 20th November, 1919. Various allegations and counter allegations had been made in the pleadings and in the evidence and from these it was perfectly obvious that there was a state of feeling existing between the partners which rendered it impossible for the partnership to be continued with any advantage.

Held, that the Court could infer from that that the business of the partnership could not be carried on at a profit and that it would only be carried on at a loss, and therefore the suit was not premature. (Macleod, C. J. and Crump, J.) Hasham Ismayal v. Nariman Rustumji Mehta. 1924 Bom. 57.

—Mesne profits—Joint decree—Liability of each judgment debtor to contribute.

The doctrine that no suit for contribution lies between tort-feasors does not apply in its full extent to India. If it does apply, it applies only where it must be presumed that the party in default knew that he was committing an unlawful act or the act is one of an obviously illegal character. It is obviously equitable in the case of a decree for mesne profits against parties who were in joint possession that a person who had to satisfy the entire decree should be able to recover his share from his co-defendants, unless there has been something in his conduct to deprive him of this right. that in law each joint owner of an estate is regarded as having a proprietary right in the whole estate. That however is merely a right and must not be confounded with the manner of enjoying that right; it operates in strict law to prevent a co-owner from setting up a claim to any parcel as his exclusive property during the continuance of the joint ownership. But where co-owners, by arrangement, either tacit or express, take up exclusive possession and enjoyment of different parcels of the joint property, without such definition on severance of interest as would amount to partition, the Court will not interfere with the arrangement at the instance of one co-owner during the tenure in common and will do so only on partition so far as may be necessary to make an equitable division of the property. 28 C. 223, 11 C. COPY RIGHT ACT (1911)—Abridgment—Merely selecting passages and knitting them together does not constitute—Raw material or the original works are open for consultation for all—Use of another's labour and skill only is prohibited.

An abridgment of an author's work means a statement designed to be complete and accurate exposition of the thoughts, opinions and ideas by him expressed therein, but set forth much more concisely in the compressed language of the abridger. A publication the text of which consists of a number of detached passages selected from author's work, often not contiguous, but separated from those which precede and follow them by considerable bodies of print, knit together by a few words so as to give these passages, when reprinted, the appearance, as far as possible, of a continuous narrative, is not an abridgment at all. It only expresses, in the original author's own words, some of the ideas, thoughts and opinions set forth in his work. And it is obvious that the learning, judgment, literary taste and skill requisite to compile properly and effectively, an abridgment deserving that name would not be at all needed merely to select scraps taken from an author and to print them in a narrative form.

To constitute a true and equitable abridgment, the entire work must be preserved in its precise import and exact meaning, and then the act of abridgment is an exertion of the individuality employed in moulding and transmuting a large work into a small compass, thus rendering it less expensive and more convenient both to the time and use of the reader. Independent labour must be apparent, and the reduction of the size and work by copying some of its parts and omitting others confers no title to authorship, and the result will not be an abridgment entitled to protection. To abridge in the legal sense of the word is to preserve the substance, the essence of the work in language suited to such a purpose, language substantially different from that of the original. To make such an abridgment requires the exercise of mind and labour, skill and judgment brought into play, and the result is not merely copying.

To constitute a proper abridgment the arrangement of the book abridged must be preserved, the ideas must also be taken and expressed in language not copied but condensed. To copy certain passages and omit others so as to reduce the volume in bulk is not such an abridgment as the Court would recognise as sufficiently original to protect the author.

The mere process of selecting passages from works readily accessible to the public is not, but difficulty in obtaining access to the originals or skill manifested in making or arranging the selection is sufficient to give the character of an "original literary work" to the selection. (1893) 1 Ch. 218; Appr.

A publication, the text of which consists merely of a reprint of passages selected from the work of an author can be entitled to copy-right. For instance, it may very well be that in selecting and combining for the use of schools or universities passages of scientific works in which the lines of reasoning are so closely knit and proceed with such unbroken continuity that each later proposition depends in a great degree for its proof or possible appreciation upon what has been laid down or established much earlier in the book, labour, accurate scientific knowledge, sound judgment touching the purpose for which the selection is made, and literary skill would all be needed to effect the object in view. In such a case copyright might well be acquired for the print of the selected passages.

COPYRIGHT ACT.

It is the product of the labour, skill and capital of one man which must not be appropriated by another, not the elements, the raw material, if one may use the expression, upon which the labour and skill and capital of the first have been expended. To secure copyright for this product it is necessary that the labour, skill and capital expended should be sufficient to impart to the product some quality or character which the raw material did not possess, and which differentiates the product from the raw material.

Any new and original plan, arrangement or combination of material will entitle the author to copyright therein, whether the materials themselves be old or new. Whosoever by his own skill, labour and judgment writes a new work may have a copyright therein unless it be directly copied or evasively imitated from another's work. To constitute piracy of a copyright it must be shown that the original has been either substantially copied or to be so imitated as to be a mere evasion of the copyright.

In the case of works not original in the proper sense of the term, but composed of or compiled or prepared from materials open to all, the fact that one man has produced such a work does not take away from any one else the right to produce another work of the same kind and in doing so to use all the materials open to him. The true principle in all these cases is that the defendant is not at liberty to use or avail himself of the labour which the plaintiff has been at, for the purpose of producing his work; that is, in fact, merely to take away the result of man's labour or in other words, his property.

This principle applies to maps, guide books, street directories, dictionaries, to compilation of scientific work and other subjects, and applies to a selection of poems.

What is the precise amount of the knowledge labour, judgment or literary skill or taste which the author of any book or other compilation must bestow upon its composition in order to acquire copyright in it within the meaning of the Copyright Act of 1911 cannot be defined in precise terms. In every case it must depend largely on the special facts of that case, and must in each case be very much a question of degree.

It will not create copyright in a new edition of a work of which the copyright has expired merely to make a few emendations of the text or to add a few important notes. To create a copyright by alterations of the text these must be extensive and substantial practically making a new book. With regard to notes, in like manner they must exhibit an addition to the work which is not superficial or colourable, but imparts to the book a true and real value over and above that belonging to the text. This value may perhaps be rightly expressed by saying that the book will procure purchasers in the market on special account of these notes. When notes to this extent and of this value are added they attach to the edition the privilege of copyright. The principle of the law of copyright directly applies. There is involved in such annotation and often in a very eminent degree, an exercise of intellect and an application of learning which place the annotator in the position and character of author in the most proper —S. 1, Sub-section (1)—'Original' does not relate to ideas but to their expression.

The word "original" does not mean that the work must be the expression of original or inventive thought. Copyright Acts are not concerned with the origin of ideas, but with the expression of thought; and in the case of "literary work" with the expression of thought in print or writing. The originality which is required relates to the expression of the thought; but the Act does not require that the expression must be in an original or novel form but that the work must not be copied from another work—that it should not originate from another. —S. 3—Copyright—Infringement—Presumption of Copyright—Infringement—Expert evidence—Duty to take.

Where the defendants in an action for damages for infringement of copyright in respect of a work do not put in issue the existence of the copyright in the work, there is an irrebuttable presumption that the alleged work was a work in which copyright existed and that the plaintiff was the owner of the copyright. In this class of cases, the Court should be reluctant to sit as experts and to decide the question of infringement of copyright without the aid of expert evidence. The proper course, in such cases, is to get the opinion of experts who might be appointed Commissioners to investigate and report on the matters in issue. The opinion and findings of the experts are not conclusive on the Court, but may be reviewed on exceptions. (Mookerjee and Chatterjee, JJ.) SITA NATH BASAK v. MOHINI MOHAN SINGH. 39 C. L. CO SHARERS.

Dispossession of one—Remedies—Equity.

The equitable principle of law as between co sharers is that one cannot disturb the possession of another without a suit for partition. But this cannot apply unless it is found that the co-sharers are in possession of separate portions by mutual arrangement for sake of convenience. Unless such mutual arrangement is proved a co sharer who is dispossessed cannot recover possession without a suit for partition. (Mukerji, J.) BRABBAR ALI SHAH v. KAN ALI.
82 I. C. 31.

Ejectment—Co-sharers remaining in separate possession of items of common property—Private arrangement—Transferee from co-sharer—Rights of.

Where a co-sharer has been in separate possession of a piece of joint land for a long time without any let or hindrance by the other co-sharers, the latter have no right to eject him or his transferee or to disturb his possession or enjoyment otherwise than by seeking partition. Where for facility of cultivation the co sharers of a khata had under private arrangement been in long possession of separate lands and one of the shares transferred his plots under an invalid transfer who took formal possession of the plots and subsequently the other co-sharers dispossessed him under a decree for ejectment for arrears of rent, held that their possession was not that of trespassers but of proprietors. (Neave, J.) BABU RAM v. YASIN.
L. R. 5 A. 526 : 1924 All. 880.

Ejectment—Excessive—Occupation by one sharer—Remedy—Partition.

Where a plaintiff co-sharer, sued for joint possession with the defendant another co-sharer, on the ground that the latter was in occupation of an excess area and it was found that the defendant had been in possession for a very long time. Held, that the plaintiff could have sued for partition or profits and that he need not be put in joint possession. (Neave, J.) AMBIKA PRASAD SINGH v. RAM KISHAN.
L. R. 5 A. 185 (Rev.) : 1924 All. 923.

Improvements made by one—If confers a right to exclude others.

Where one of two co-sharers effects improvements at his own expense, he is not thereby entitled to exclude the others from joint possession. (Newbould and Ghose, JJ.) MAHAMMAD SAFAR JAMA KHAN v. SATYA NIRANJAN CHAKRAVARTI.
82 I. C. 290.

Joint possession—Suit for—When lies—Setting up of rival claim in written statement—Effect of.

If one co-owner seeks to defeat the claim of another to joint possession, special circumstances must be alleged and proved to justify exclusive occupation. In a case of total denial of title and setting up jus tertii, a decree for joint possession must follow. Mere setting up of a rival claim or a hostile title in the written statement does not amount to ouster. (Walmsley and Mukerji, JJ.) RAJENDRA NARAIN RAI v. BHAIKABENDRA NARAYAN ROY.

CO-SHARERS.

Default in payment of rent—Purchase by one—If enures to the benefit of all.

Where all co-sharers made default in payment of rent due and in consequence the tenure is sold and is purchased by one of them the purchase does not enure for the benefit of all. (Jwala Prasad and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) MADUSUDANLAL v. RAM GULAM SAHU.

Lambardar—Power of—To confer occupancy rights.

Neither a lambardar nor a cosharer who collects rent by some agreement could confer occupancy rights on persons not entitled to it under the law. (Fremantle, S.M. and Burn J.M.) KUNWAR BAHADUR v. SHAMBHU DAYAL.
L. R. 5 A. 165 (Rev.).

Partition—Disagreement as to management—Co-sharer cannot deal with common land to the detriment of another co sharer

Partition is the remedy which a co owner has if he and the other co owners cannot agree as to how the lands which they hold in common should be managed. 17 I. A. 110 Ref. Where lands in India are held in common by co-sharers each co-sharer is entitled to cultivate in his own interests in a proper and husbandlike manner any part of the lands which is not being cultivated by another or his co-sharers but he is liable to pay compensation in respect of such exclusive use of the lands. Such an exclusive use of lands held in common by a co sharer is not an ouster of his co-sharers from their proprietary rights as co-sharers in the lands. No co-sharer can, as against his co-sharer, obtain any joint right, rights of permanent occupancy, in the lands held in common, nor can he create by letting the lands to cultivators as his tenants any right of occupancy in them. 17 I. A. 120-121 Ref. Where a co-sharer alleged that he purchased joint rights in lands held in common by the co-sharer. Held, such a purchase would in law be held to have been a purchase for the benefit of all the co-shares, and the joint rights so purchased would by the purchase be extinguished. Suit for possession of land in exclusive possession of another co-sharer does not lie—Plff. may sue for partition.

Where a co-sharer takes and retains possession of a portion of the shamilat (for as long as 20 years in this case), he cannot be dispossessed therefrom until partition takes place. The plffs. Co-sharers in such a case have no right to oust deft. or even to get joint possession with him so long as there has been no partition of the shamilat. (Scott Smith, J.) MAHOMED AMIN v. KARM DAD.

One co-sharer in peaceful possession—Whether other co-sharers are entitled to a decree for a joint possession.

CO-SHARERS.

On the death of a tenant, a co-sharer entered an occupancy holding, after an agreement of compromise with the tenant's widow and was in continuous possession. The plaintiffs as co-sharers of the mahal, brought a suit for joint possession, without bringing a suit for partition and profits:

Held, though the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, did provide for the execution of a decree for joint possession, it was not the duty of the court to grant (1) a decree for joint possession in every case where there were joint owners and joint claimants. (2) That the other co-sharers (Plaintiffs) were not entitled to a decree for joint possession, but were entitled to a declaratory decree. (Mukerjee, J.) GAIRAJ SINGH v. RAM ANJOE SINGH. L. ———Rent—Suit for—Parties —Apportionment of rent.

It is not open to one of the co-sharers to sue for his own share of the rent without making the other co-sharers parties to the suit, or without proving previous separate collection. The simple suit for rent cannot be converted into one for apportionment of rent. The suit for apportionment of rent should be properly framed so as to implead all the co-sharers and the tenants. A co-sharer cannot as a matter of right, claim from the tenant what he estimates to be his proportionate share of the rent. (Suhrawardy and Cholzner, JJ.) *KAMALESH RAY v. ———Different sets—Several respondents—Practice.

COSTS.

Where there is no necessity for separate appearances on behalf of the several respondents only one set of costs is usually allowed for all. When such parties appear separately an application should be made at the time when judgment is delivered in their favour with costs for separate sets of costs. Unless such an application is made and ordered a mere general order for payment of costs means that the losing party should only pay one set of costs to be divided among the successful parties. ———Discretion as to—Successful party when deprived of costs.

The discretion vested in a Court as regard costs should be exercised according to the rules of reason and justice and not according to private opinion, according to law and not humour. When the court has not exercised the discretion in a legal and regular manner the higher courts have the jurisdiction to set the order right. It is an established principle that costs should follow the event, and in a case where one party should fail on the objections raised by the opposite party it does not appear to be in accordance with any principle to dismiss the case on a ground not taken and deprive the opposite party of their costs. The appellate Court has jurisdiction to interfere in such cases. 14 M.C.C.R. 258; 15 A 333; 16 B. 241; 16 B. 676 Ref. (Subbanna, J.) BHUTAI KUSHALCHAND v. OMEDMAL KAPURCHAND.

The words "costs in the cause" in an order made in an interlocutory proceeding do not mean that the costs would inevitably follow the event, but that those costs remain to be dealt with by the Court at the hearing, the judge at the trial having still power to deal with such costs. If a decree is passed in favour of one side or the other for costs then those costs must be taken as being included in the final orders unless the Judge expressly excludes them. (*Macleod, C. Appeal—Declaratory decree that mortgages did not affect plaintiff's reversionary rights—Condition of payment of a certain sum.

The suit was one for a declaration that a certain alienation made by the plaintiff's father should not be binding upon their reversionary interest. The plaint was rightly stamped with a court-fee of Rs. 10. The suit was decreed subject to a reservation that a sum of Rs. 2,365 had been borrowed for necessary purposes. On appeal by the plaintiffs for the same relief held that the memorandum of appeal need not be stamped with more than 10 rupees. From the mere fact that the suit had been decreed on payment of a certain sum to the defendant—mortgagee, its nature was not in any way altered. It was not contemplated by the legislature that the court-fee payable on a part of a whole claim in appeal is, in the absence of express direction to the contrary, to exceed the court-fee payable on the whole claim. 92 P. Determination of—Allegations in plaint.

The question of court-fee should be determined on the basis of the plaint and where the relief claimed is a declaration, it is not open to a court to say he should have asked for consequential relief and paid a fee on that basis though it may be he ultimately fails unless he asks for the consequential relief also. Mesne profits—Appeal against decree bearing full court-fee—Dismissal—Subsequent ascertainment of mesne profits—Appeal—Fresh Court-fee if payable.

Plaintiff brought a suit for possession and mesne profits, the claim for mesne profits being valued at Rs. 4,696-8-3. The suit was decreed for possession and it was directed that the amount of mesne profits should be ascertained. An appeal to the High Court bearing full Court-fee was filed but the appeal was dismissed. Then the mesne profits were ascertained to be Rs. 1,604-10-3. The defendant appealed to the District Court and preferred a second appeal in the High Court. Held that the Court fee on the mesne profits had in fact been paid already by the Mortgage—Decree for sale—Suit for declaration that the property belonged to plaintiff and was not liable to be sold—Plaintiff not a party to the decree—Consequential relief—Court-fee payable on plaint.

77 I. C. 1039.

A decree for sale was passed on the basis of a mortgage. The mortgagee took steps to bring the property to sale but the plaintiff who was no party to the mortgage-decree sued for a declaration that the property belonged to him and was not liable to be sold in execution of the aforesaid decree. A court-fee of Rs. 10 was paid on the declaration sought.

Held, that the plaintiff being no party to the mortgage-decree, the suit did not involve a consequential relief and the court-fee paid was sufficient. 24 O. C. 361 distinguished. (Wazir Hasan and Neave, A. J. Cs.) SRI RAM v. MATHURA PRASAD. 1 O. W. N. 582.

Valuation—Appeal—Decision of trial Court on the question of market value of the property and jurisdiction—Appeal.

Plaintiff valued his suit for purposes of court-fee and jurisdiction at five thousand and five hundred rupees. The defendant objected that the value of the land was only Rs. 1,100, and that the plaintiff had purposely exaggerated his claim. The question of the market value of the property was put in issue and decided in favour of the defendant. The suit having been dismissed, plaintiff preferred an appeal to the High Court. Defendant objected that the appeal lay to the District Court and not to the High Court. Held, that the valuation of the suit must be taken to be that decided by the trial Court and that the appeal lay to the District Court. For the purpose of determining the course of appeal in the present case the value of appeal is to be taken to be the actual value of the property as determined by the trial Court. Suit for possession and mesne profits—Appeal with full court-fee—Subsequent ascertainment of mesne profits—Second appeal against mesne profits—Whether court-fee to be paid a second time.

The plaintiff valued his suit for possession at Rs. 775 and mesne profits at Rs. 4,676. A decree for possession was ordered but mesne profits were ascertained subsequently at Rs. 1,604. The defts. appealed to the High Court paying stamps on the original Memorandum of Appeal ad valorem, before mesne profits were ascertained. In a second appeal, against the assessment of mesne profits. Held, that S. 6 of the Court Fees Act cannot be applied, and that when once the full court-fee —S. 7 (iv) (a) and (x) (a)—Specific performance of contract—Suit by plaintiff for return of a sale deed or for execution of a fresh sale-deed and its registration—Court-fee payable.

In pursuance of a contract for sale of a shop defendant executed a sale-deed and gave it to the Sub-Registrar for registration. The document was returned to the defendant and in the absence of the plaintiff (the vendee) the defendant sold the shop to a third person. Subsequently plaintiff brought a suit for return of the original sale deed or in the alternative for the execution of a fresh sale-deed and for its registration. Plff. valued the suit under S. 7 (iv) (a) of the Court Fees Act and on the relief for registration paid a court-fee of Rs. 10 under Sch. II, Art. 17 (vi) of the Act. Held, that the suit was one for specific performance of a contract of sale and court-fee was payable under S. 7 (a) (b) of the Court Fees Act according to the amount of consideration. The absence of a prayer for possession was immaterial. (Scott-Smith and Fforde, JJ.) FAKIR CHAND v. RAM DATT, 5 Lah. 75: 80 I. C. 953: 1924 Lah. 439.

sion on behalf of the family. Held, that the possession of one member of the family was the possession of all the members of the family, that the Court should decide the question of court-fee by reference to the allegations in the plaint and not by what is afterwards found by the Court and that the suit was properly stamped as a simple suit for partition. —S. 7 (iv) (b)—Suit for partition—Right to share disputed right—Court-fee payable on.

The valuation for the computation of court-fees in a suit for partition depends upon whether the relief sought is merely a change in the mode of enjoyment of the property or the enforcement of a disputed right. In the present case the plaintiffs alleged a partial partition and they claimed partition of that part of the family property, including certain moveables, which was kept joint at the partition.

The defendants' case is that the plaintiffs have already separated and have been given their full shares and have no rights whatever in the property in suit, which is not available for partition. Held, this is a clear denial of the plaintiffs' right to share, and the present suit is a suit to enforce the right to share in the property on the ground that it is joint family property falling under section 7, cl. (iv) (b) of the Court Fees Act. (Baker, J. C.) BIHABDOO v. SADDGO, 20 N. L. R. 43: 81 I. C. 766: 1924 Nag. 86.

Where a plaintiff who is not a party to a deed wants a declaration that the deed is not binding on him or on the devaswom of which he is a trustee, the suit is one for declaration and not one for cancellation. 14 M. 26; 32 M. L. J. 447; 37 M. 420 Ref.

Where a plaintiff sues for such a declaration and for an injunction and accounts as reliefs consequential on this declaration, the plff. is entitled to place his own valuation on these reliefs, but the relief for purposes of jurisdiction and court-fees must be the same. A claim for further relief, viz., that the 8 defendants should be removed from the office of trustee comes under Art. 17 (ii) of Sch. II of the Court Fees Act and a separate fee of Rs. 10 need not be paid for each of the 8 trustees especially where the ground for removal is the same. —S. 7 (iv) (c)—Declaration to avoid an award—Valuation.

In a suit for a declaration that a certain award is invalid there being no contract at all between the parties, and for an injunction by way of consequential relief, the plaintiff has the right to value his claim for the purposes of court-fees and the value for the purposes of the jurisdiction is the same. 44 Bom. 331, Foll. (Raymond, A. J. C.) TYEBALLY ABDUL HUSSAIN v. MESSRS. JAMES FINLAY & CO. 17 S. L. R. 15 : 80 I. C. 969 : 1924 S. 105 (2).

—S. 7 (iv) (c)—Suit for declaration that decree was fraudulent and injunction—Court-fee payable thereon.

In order to determine whether a suit is properly valued or not it is necessary to confine attention to the plaint itself and not to look to other circumstances which may subsequently influence the judgment of the Court as to the true value of the relief sought. A suit for a declaration that the decree obtained by the defendant is fraudulent, for an injunction against the defendant restraining him from interfering with the plaintiff's possession of the property in suit and for consequential relief confirming plaintiff's possession, comes within S. 7 (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act and the valuation of the suit is the valuation of the decree which the plaintiff seeks to set aside. 6 C. L. J. 427 Ref. In such cases the value put by the plaintiff should be taken as the proper value unless it appears that the value so put is arbitrary and inconsistent with the value of the reliefs sought. High Court and not to the District Court. (Campbell and Moti Sagar, JJ.) GANGA SINGH v. SHER SINGH. 5 Lah. 440.

—S. 7 (iv) (c)—Valuation—If arbitrary Power of Court.

The valuation put by a plaintiff in a suit falling under S. 7 (iv) (c) Court Fees Act, is not to be an arbitrary valuation, but is to accord with the value of the subject-matter of the suit and, in case of dispute, is to be determined by the Court. (Prideaux, A. J. C.) KALICHARAN LAL v. SHIVSHANKAR SAHAI. 1924 Nag. 295.

—S. 7 (iv) (c) and Sch. II, Art. 17—Suit for declaration and consequential relief—Memorandum of appeal—Court-fee.

Where the plaint prays for a declaration and consequential relief, the value of the consequential relief determines the court-fee payable on the plaint. 4 Pat. L. J. 297 : 46 I. A. 24 : 5 P. L. J. 394, Foll.

Where however an appeal is preferred only against the declaration it may be valued under Sch. II, Art. 17 of the Court Fees Act. The nature of the relief sought may vary at the stage when the appeal is preferred and the Court-fee leviable will be upon the altered relief on appeal. (Jwala Prasad, J.) *NEKO TEWARI v. —S. 7 (iv) (c)—Valuation of suit—Valuation of subject-matter—Option to plaintiff to put his valuation.

In suits coming under S. 7 (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act the plaintiff is at liberty to put his own valuation whatever be the real value of the subject-matter. (Young, J.) SIT SOE v. MA THIN. 3 Bur. L. J. 128 : 1924 Rang. 378 (2).

—S. 7 (iv) (c) and (d)—Valuation fixed by plaintiff—Finality of—Suit for declaration, injunction and appointment of Receiver.

A suit for declaration and injunction and for the appointment of a Receiver falls within S. 7 (iv), clauses (c) and (d) of the Court Fees Act and the plaintiff can put his own valuation for the reliefs claimed. —S. 7 (v) (d)—Claim for Khudkhasht lands—Addition of milkiat shares—Effect.

A suit for khudkhasht lands falls under S. 7 (v) (d) and not S. 7 (v) (a) of the Court Fees Act and court-fee on the market value is to be paid. But when the plaintiff claims for milkiat shares within which the khudkhasht lands lie and for khudkhasht lands, separate court-fees should be paid. —Ss. 7 (1), 4 (e) and 11 (b)—Suit for declaration of plaintiffs' liability to make a small periodical payment than that claimed by debt—Valuation for purposes of court-fees and jurisdiction.

COURT FEE, S. 7.

A suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is liable to pay achu palasha (a kind of royalty payable to a bill owner) only at the rate of 150 seers of paddy per annum and not at the rate of 459 and odd seers as claimed by the defendant, does not fall under S. 7, cl. (1) or S. 4, cl. (c), or S. 11, cl. (b) of the Court Fees Act. The suit is one for a declaratory decree without any consequential relief, and its jurisdictional value cannot be higher than the value of the subject-matter in dispute between the parties. The subject-matter in dispute is the difference between what the plaintiff admits to be the proper rate and the rate alleged to be claimed by the defendant. The declaration which the plaintiff seeks, if allowed, would relieve him from the liability to pay the difference between these two sums for all time, and therefore in estimating the value of the subject-matter in dispute the Court must take the capitalised value of that right. —S. 7 (iv) (c)—Suit for declaration that there was no contract—Injunction against arbitration proceedings.

In a suit for a declaration that there was no valid contract between the parties or a valid reference to arbitration and an injunction restraining arbitration proceedings going on, plaintiff can put his own value as the case falls under S. 7 (iv) (c) Court Fees Act. —S. 7 (iv) (f)—Suit for accounts—Plaint valuation—Binding on defendant for purposes of appeal.

A suit for setting aside a sale of joint family properties was decreed on condition the plaintiff paid a certain sum to the alienee. and not under cl. (v) (a) or (b) of S. 7 of the Court Fees Act. Court-fee should therefore be paid on the market-value of the property in suit.

The plaintiff in the above suit having valued his plaint at ten times the share of the Government revenue due on the land, the Court directed him to pay court-fees on its market value. The plaintiff did not pay and the Court holding that the subject-matter of the suit exceeded its jurisdiction directed the return of the plaint for presentation to a superior Court. Held, that the procedure of the Court below was illegal. The Court should have first called upon the plaintiff to state the market value and then directed him to pay the proper court-fee on his plaint and on his failure to do so rejected the plaint. If the plaintiff paid the requisite court-fee and it was then found that the valuation of the suit went beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, the plaint should have been returned for presentation to the proper Court. An appeal by a landlord from the decree in a suit for commutation of grain rents into money rents on the ground that the rate fixed by the Lower Court is too low, falls either under Sch II, Art. 17, cl. — S. 12—Decision about amount is final but as to category of suit or applicability of a section is not final.

The question whether an order directing additional Court-fee to be paid is an interlocutory order which will be revised depends on the circumstances of each case. If it is an order merely assessing valuation of the property and the only question involved is as to the amount upon which the Court-fee has to be paid, the decision of the Court of first instance would appear to be final under S. 12 of the Courts Fees Act. That section has been enacted in the interests of revenue and is final so far as that Court is concerned. There will be no appeal or revision from that order. But the question may under certain circumstances be raised on appeal from the final decree made in the suit. Where, however, the question is, under what provision of the Court Fees Act the relief sought for in the plaint comes or under which category the suit falls, the decision of the first Court is not final. Where it involves the jurisdiction of the Court to try the suit the decision is liable to be revised. (23 Bom. 436 ; 28 Cal. 334 ; 14 Mad. 169 ; 1 All. 360, Foll. The application for review was presented to the stamp Reporter on the 6th Sep. 1922. The court-fee paid on the application was one half of the Court-fee paid on the Memorandum of Appeal. The application was returned by the Stamp Reporter on the day it was presented, when the High Court had been closed for the vacation. Thereupon the application was presented to the senior Judge on the 13th of Nov. 1922, when the Court re-opened after the long vacation. Held, that the presentation to the Stamp Reporter was proper presentation within the meaning of Arts. 4 and 5 of Sch. I to the Court Fees Act. As the decree in the appeal was not in existence till the 21st of July 1922 the delay in presentation could not be a ground for penalising the applicant. An application for probate was made on the 19th March 1922, the estate was valued and court-fees to the extent of Rs. 18,000 were paid. Thereafter, the will was proved on the 8th April 1922, and an order for probate was made. On the 8th April, 1922, it was brought to the notice of the Court that in the interval between the payment of court-fees on the application for probate and the order for Probate, the Bengal Court Fees (Amendment) Act, 1922 came into force on the 1st April 1922, and that the court-fees if calculated on the basis of the amended statute, would exceed the amount already paid by Rs. 10,370. Held, that the petitioner was not bound to pay the excess amount and that the Court-fee already paid under the old Act was sufficient.

S. 19 I (1) of the Court Fees Act provides that no order entitling the petitioner to the grant of probate or letters of administration shall be made upon an application for such grant, until the petitioner has filed in Court a valuation of the property in the form set forth in the first Schedule and the Court is satisfied that the fees mentioned in paragraph II of the Schedule have been paid on such valuation. The third Schedule shows that the petitioner for probate or letters of administration is required to set out in detail the valuation of the moveable and immoveable properties left by the deceased. The law consequently, requires that such valuation should be made and the Court-fees paid on the basis thereof before an order entitling the petitioner to the grant of probate or letters of administration is made upon the application. As soon as he complied with requirements of the statute, his application was presented, and he became entitled to an order for the grant of probate or letters of administration if he could establish the genuineness of the testamentary instrument propounded by him. The subsequent amendment of the Act did not affect the petitioner. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) THADDEUS NAHAPIET v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA. 39 C. L. J. 209 : 81 I. The trial Court granted a decree for possession to plaintiff on payment of the market value which was fixed at Rs. 6,800. The vendee valued his appeal at Rs. 6,800 and asked for a decree restoring that property to him or else requiring the successful pre-emptor to pay him an additional sum of Rs. 3,200. Held that they were two alternative relief based on exactly the same cause of action and only one of them could be granted. They were not two distinct subjects within the meaning of S. 17 of the Court Fees Act, and the correct Court fee is one calculated not on the aggregate of the two values but on the higher of the two. COURT FEE, S. SCH. I, ART. 5.

The subject-matter of an appeal was valued at Rs. 7,750 and on the 20th December 1919, a court-fee of Rs. 385 was paid on the memorandum in accordance with the table rates of ad valorem fees embodied in Sch. I of the Court Fees Act, 1870. The appeal was thereupon registered and was heard in due course. Judgment was pronounced on the 29th August 1922, when the appeal was dismissed with costs. On the 21st November 1922, the appellant presented the application for review of judgment. The application bore a court-fee of Rs. 192-8-0 that is, one half of Rs. 385, the amount payable and paid on the memorandum of appeal, when it was lodged in this Court. After the 20th December 1919 when the memorandum of appeal was filed and before the 21st November 1922, when the application for review was lodged, the Bengal Court Fees Amendment Act, 1922 (Act IV of 1922, B. C.) had come into force on the 1st April 1922. Sec. 5 of this amending statute modified Art. 1 of Sch. I of the Court Fees Act, 1870, by enhancement of rate of fee payable on plaints, written statements and memorandum of appeal. Sec. 9 as a corollary altered the table of rates of ad valorem fees appended to the same Schedule. The consequence was that from the 1st April 1922, the amount of Court-fee payable on a memorandum of appeal valued at Rs. 7,750 was raised from Rs. 385 to Rs. 615. Held, that neither under the Court Fees Act as originally framed in 1870 nor under the Court Fees Act amended in 1922, can a petitioner for review of judgment be called upon to pay Court Fees on the basis of the fee which would be payable on the plaint or memorandum of appeal if it were to be filed on the date of the application for review. The amount must be calculated on the basis of the fee leviable (which, in the normal course of events, is the fee actually levied,) on the plaint or memorandum of appeal according to the law in force when the plaint or memorandum is filed in Court. Tested in the light of this principle the application in the present case must be deemed to bear the correct Court-fee and must accordingly be heard on the merits. An application for review of the decision of a Court on an appeal must pay full court-fee on the valuation of the appeal and not merely on the subject of the review application. Had the legislature intended that an ad valorem fee should be levied only on the value of the subject-matter in respect of which relief was sought by the application for review, it could have said so in clear and definite terms. The words "Plaint" or "Memorandum of appeal" mean the plaint or memorandum of appeal in which the judgment review of which is asked for, was passed. 31 All. 294 ; 3 C. W. N. 292 followed. —Sch. II, Art. 17—Suit for reversal of patni sale—Court-fee payable on—Amending Act (IV of 1922)—Effect of.

A suit for the reversal of a patni sale is not solely for a declaration that the sale is a nullity. It is on the other hand a suit for the reversal or cancellation of sale, on the assumption that if the validity of the sale is not challenged the sale would remain operative between the parties.

Prayers for injunction and for confirmation of possession are prayers for consequential relief. Where the suit had been instituted on the 16th June 1920, the amount of Court-fee leviable on the plaint must be determined by a reference to the law as it stood on that date, irrespective of the amendment under Bengal Act (IV of 1922). —Sch. II, Art. 17, S. 7 (4) (c)—Applicability—Execution of mortgage decree against joint family—Resistance by some members—Declaratory suit that the mortgagee be entitled to attach and sell the joint family estate—Whether consequential relief.

In a suit for enforcement of the mortgage against a joint family of defendants 1—6, and a personal decree was passed against defendant 1 only, as no necessity was proved, and the decree-holder applied for execution against 1st defendant, defendants 3, 7 and 8 and resisted the application on the strength of a prior partition, and deft. 10, on a prior sale to him by the judgment-debtor for consideration and the 1st deft.'s share was diminished. The decree holder filed a declaratory suit for holding that the sale to the 10th defendant was nominal, and that the prior partition suit filed on behalf of defendant 3, did not take place, with a specific relief, that it may be declared that the plaintiffs are entitled to realise their decree from the joint properties by attachment and sale. It was contended that the Court-fee paid was insufficient, for, besides the declaration claimed, consequential relief is claimed for, in the last prayer, and ad valorem fee under S. 7, cl. 4 (c) should be paid.

Held, that the last mentioned relief is a mere surplusage and the relief sought is merely declaratory and the Court-fee charged should be under Sch. II, Art. 17 of the Court Fees Act, (Jwala Prasad, J.) MAHABIR PRASAD v. SHYAM BEHARI SINGH. 3 Pat. 795 : 80 I. C. 655 : 1925 P. 44.

—Sch. II, Art. 17 (6)—Suit for partition—Declaration of right to partition and possession—Ejectment suit—Court-fee payable on.

Ordinarily, where the plaintiff in the case, as laid by him in the plaint, affirms that he is in possession of a portion of the joint estate and claims a change in the mode of enjoyment of the property and prays for separate possession of his share as the result of redistribution of the property under the separate management of the parties, his suit is one for partition and separate possession of his share in the entire property, and as such the claim falls under Article 17 clause (6) of Schedule II of the Court Fees Act, and a fixed fee of Rs. 10 only is payable thereon. Where, however, the plaintiff admits that his title is disputed and that he is out of possession and enjoyment of the property sought to be partitioned, and he does not hold or possess or occupy any portion or item of the divisible property, and asks for partition, his suit must be treated practically as an ejectment suit, and an ad valorem Court-fee is leviable on a plaint in such suit.

The Court will have to see whether the plaintiff claims anything more than a change in the mode of enjoyment of the property by partition or, in other words, whether it is a part of his cause of action as disclosed in the plaint that the defendants have denied his right for partition, or his right to joint possession in the property, or the nature of the property in the suit involved either in whole or in part. If he seeks a declaration of his right to partition on the ground that it is disputed it may safely be said that he claims something more than a change in the mode of enjoyment. This must be determined with reference to the tenor of plaintiff's claim as laid in the plaint, i.e., on the cause of action as disclosed in the plaint. If the plaintiff alleges that each party is in possession of what he says is joint family property, then, on the principle that possession of one co-owner is possession of another the plaint cannot be treated as one instituted by person who is admittedly out of possession or whose right to partition is admittedly disputed, or the quantum of whose interest in the joint property is admittedly a matter on which he himself seeks an adjudication of the Court. Such a suit is one for partition of joint family property and must be distinguishable from a suit for declaration of his right to partition and possession, or for possession of his share on partition, or for ejectment by a person who admits that he is wrongfully excluded from enjoyment of joint family property. In the latter class of suits what the plaintiff himself seeks is an establishment of his own title or right to partition of the property which is already in dispute. (Kinkhede A. J. C.) *MINAH v. A man who instigates the formation of an association, the purposes of which are such as to render that association unlawful and contributes to and solicits contributions for that association may, broadly speaking, be considered to have contributed to and solicited contributions for the purpose of such association. But a penal statute has to be construed strictly and before an association can have a purpose it must be in existence and any contribution to or solicitation for such an association prior to its formation cannot render a person amenable to S. 17 (1) of the Cr. Law Amendment Act. The intention of the legislature was to render punishable only such contributors, etc. who contributed or solicited contributions for the purpose of an existing association. But such acts amount to "instigation" of the formation of an association which is unlawful under S. 15 (2) (b) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. The conduct of the accused amounting to abetment of the commission of an offence by a class of persons exceeding 10 is liable to the penalty provided by S. 117, I. P. C.

A person is said to "instigate" another to an act when he actively suggests or stimulates him to the act, by any means or language direct or indirect whether it takes the form of express solicitation or of hints, insinuation or encouragement. 22 M. The provisions of Sec. 190 extend to any offence and notwithstanding the use of the words "Police Report" in Sec. 173, that Sec. 190 (1) (b) cannot be restricted merely to non-cognizable offences and a Magistrate is empowered by Sec. 190 (1) (b) to take cognizance both of cognizable and non-cognizable offences upon a report such as is mentioned in sec. 190 (1) (b). The expression "other offence" in S. 106, Cr. P. Code, refers to offence ejusdem generis with the offences against public tranquility and of assault mentioned in the section. To attract the operation of S. 106, Cr. P. Code, it is enough if the offence brought home to the accused necessarily includes or implies a breach of the peace. It is not necessary that apart from the offence, there must have ensued a breach of the peace. The facts constituting an offence must be looked at, for determining whether the case comes within S. 106 or not. Wrongful confinement per se is not an offence involving a breach of the peace but if the accused is found to have violently seized another person, tied his hands and wrongfully confined in an open garden, security can be ordered under S. 106, Cr. P. Code. (Venkatasubba Rao, J.) KUPPA REDDIAR In re. 20 L. W. 481 : 47 Mad. 846 : 81 I. C. 920 : 25 Cr. L. J. 1096 : 1924 Mad. 808 : 47 M. L. J. 232.

If the Magistrate who is responsible for the administration of a district or subdivision is not satisfied that there is any need to take proceedings under that chapter it may be questioned whether any superior judicial authority can be called in to interfere with the exercise of his discretion, though there is no doubt that judicial authority can properly be exercised to check the magistrate's proceedings if he exceeds the powers given him by law for the prevention of offences. S. 107, Cr. P. (1) That it entailed a heavy duty on the magistrate to exercise the powers under S. 110 of the Code with much discretion, and that he must have acted only when the information was precise and supported at the subsequent enquiry by satisfactory evidence.

The issue of a preliminary notice under S. 112, Criminal Procedure Code is not a formal matter ; it is a judicial act to be exercised after due consideration of the materials placed before Magistrate.

Held, that the notice served upon the petitioners under S. 112, Cr. P. Code did not comply with the provisions of the Code as it was very meagre and did not contain sufficient details regarding the charge brought against them.

Held, further that the object of the notice under S. 112, Cr. P. C. being to enable the accused to prepare for his defence and to summon witnesses on his side before the actual trial commences, the defects in the notice could not in any way be remedied by explanations given by the Prosecuting Inspector at the commencement of the trial.

In a case in which proceedings were taken against the two petitioners not only for their conduct coming within clauses (d) and (e) of S. 110, Cr. P. Code but also under Clause (f) thereof for the reason that they were so desperate and dangerous as to render their being at large without security hazardous to the community, both the petitioners were tried jointly, and evidence relating exclusively to the nefarious acts of each of the petitioners was let in, in addition to the evidence regarding the events in which it was alleged that they were associated together, and the Magistrate passed an order against them on a consideration of the entire evidence thus introduced into the record against both the petitioners.

Held, that the petitioners should not have been jointly tried and had been prejudiced by such joint trial. (Madhavan Nair, J.) KUTTI GOUNDAN In re. 47 M. L. J. 689.

The evidence ought to be of such a nature as to lead to a reasonable and definite ground for concluding that the petitioner is a habitual offender. Where the person is able to produce witnesses on his behalf to speak of his good character, the court should not disbelieve the same unless there are substantial reasons for doing so. To prove a charge under Sec. 110, Clause (a) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, with which the petitioners were charged in the present case, it is necessary to keep in mind that such evidence must be specific and must relate to particular instances within the knowledge of the witnesses. Mere belief and information without reference to acts and instances which have induced the witnesses to form the opinion can hardly be regarded as evidence of repute within the meaning of Sec. 117 (3) of the Code. The evidence must be of persons who are acquainted with the accused and live in the neighbourhood and are themselves aware of the accused's reputation. It must be an opinion formed by the witnesses from specific cases coming to their knowledge and not merely from reports or rumours received from others. For instance, where a witness says that to his knowledge a certain person is a thief or a house breaker by habit and on being pressed to give the source of his knowledge he merely says that there is a rumour to such effect or that he heard it from the villagers generally without being able to name any one of them, such evidence is not admissible in law. Where in a proceeding under Sec. 110, Criminal Procedure Code, the accused person is able to produce witnesses on his behalf to speak of his good character the Court ought to pay particular attention to such evidence and to give substantial reason for not believing such evidence before it makes an order under S. 118. S. 133 of Cr. P. Code deals with the condition of things at the time when the enquiry is held. If at such a time a house or branch of a tree is likely to fall and thereby endanger the life of passersby, no doubt action might be taken under the section. But it is not meant to apply to what may happen at some indefinite time in the future or under quite abnormal circumstances. Where a solid and vigorous branch of a tamarind tree is 15 ft. above the level of a country-road, it cannot be said that an obstruction at the height, having regard to the normal traffic is an unlawful obstruction within the meaning of S. 133, Cr. P. Code. Even if it could be held that the branch was likely at some time or other and under abnormal circumstances, to prove an obstruction it is not necessary for the magistrate to go to the extreme length of ordering it to be cut down. A tamarind tree is an object of veneration to many Hindus and the safety of the public, which after all is what is contemplated by the section would have been adequately secured if the magistrate had ordered proper support to be given so as to prevent the branch from falling. Proceedings had been drawn up under S. 144, Cr. P. Code, between petitioners and one H. and others regarding a plot of about 24 bighas of raiyati land which had newly formed on a diara. These proceedings under S. 144 were converted into proceedings under S. 145 and the parties gave the Court to understand that all they wanted was a demarcation of the plots they respectively claimed. The opposite party in those proceedings stated that they did not claim the 24 bighas which was the subject of the proceedings. An amin was directed to go and demarcate the diara lands and eventually submitted a report which was not agreed to by one of the parties. A petition was put in by the opposite party that the present petitioners were interfering with their possession. The Sub-Divisional Officer thereupon passed an order under S. 144 directing the petitioners not to interfere with the possession of the opposite party with regard to the plots. The petitioners applied to the High Court for revision of the order under S. 144, Cr. P. C. but the order had expired by lapse of time. Held, that notwithstanding that the order had lapsed the case was one for interference by the High Court in revision. The opposite party were not parties to the proceedings under S. 145 nor had any report been received from the police as to their possession of the plots or of a likelihood of a breach of the peace. The procedure of the Sub-Divisional officer in passing the final order under S. 144, Cr. P. —S. 144 (1) and (2)—Object of—Statement of material facts—Restriction on liberty of individual—Vague order improper.

Under S. 144, Cr. P. Code, something more is necessary to be done than a mere recital of the fact that in the opinion of the District Magistrate there was sufficient ground for proceeding under S. 144. When a Magistrate is of opinion that there is a sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, such Magistrate may, by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in the manner provided by S. 134 direct any person to abstain from a certain act. An order as it stands which does not state any facts relating to the case in order to show that there was any justification for making the order under S. 144 is bad in law.

S. 144, Cr. P. C., is not intended to restrict the liberty of an individual if there is no apprehension of a breach of the peace on account of any act to be done by him. Nor does it relieve the Magistrate of the duty of making a proper enquiry into the circumstances which show a likelihood of a breach of the peace. If it is found that a man is doing that which he is legally entitled to do and his neighbour chooses to take offence thereat and to create disturbance in consequence the duty of the Magistrate is not to continue to deprive the first of the exercise of his legal right but to restrain the second from illegally interfering with that exercise of legal right. 5 Cal. 132 Ref. It is open to the Magistrate in the case of alluvial lands recently formed, where questions of breach of the peace arise, to deal with the matter either under Act V of 1920 or under the provisions of S. 145, Cr. P. Code. There is no implied repeal of S. 145, Cr. P. Code, so far as alluvial lands recently formed are concerned by Bengal Act V of 1920. The mere fact that the court examined a court witness after the arguments on both sides, does not furnish a ground for revision especially where neither party asked the Magistrate to allow further arguments to be addressed after

The Magistrate in order to assume jurisdiction under S. 145, Cr. P. C., has to satisfy himself about the likelihood of a breach of the peace. He is to exercise his own judgment upon the materials placed before him, and to arrive at a conclusion as to whether upon the material placed before him there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace. He would not be justified in acting merely upon the expression of an opinion by the police, and if by exercising his own independent judgment he came to the conclusion that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace he is entitled to act under the section. If in the proceedings so drawn up in the office a reference is made to the police report and to the petition of the second party which documents stated that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace that will not by itself take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to initiate proceedings under S. 145, if he was satisfied that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace. A person who is not a party either to the proceedings or to an order under S. 145, Cr. P. Code is certainly entitled to challenge the propriety of it. Held, further, that possession through the exercise of the right of the Zamindar of collecting rent from the tenants in possession cannot from juridic point of view be regarded as actual. Proceedings under S. 145, Cr. P. Code were initiated in May 1922. The proceedings were amended upon a report from the police and fresh proceedings were drawn up in 7th August 1922. The case was allowed to hang on from August 1922 up to June 1923. Witnesses were examined on certain dates and then the case was postponed from time to time to examine further witnesses. The witnesses were examined at long intervals and although arguments were heard no order was passed for about 10 months. The Magistrate apparently forgot all about the case until he was reminded of it when he was going away on transfer. He then hurriedly disposed of the case by an order of the 27th March 1924, striking off the proceedings on the ground that there would be no likelihood of a breach of the peace after such a long interval. Held, that the order of the Magistrate was not justified by any provision of law. It is highly desirable that once the hearing is commenced and witnesses are examined the hearing should go on from day to day until all the evidence is taken and argument is heard and then the order should be passed as soon as possible. This object cannot be gained until all the contending parties are on the record and an opportunity is given to them to put forward their respective claims. — S. 145—Scope of enquiry—Reference to arbitration—Award—Order of Magistrate embodying award—Legality of—Inclusion of larger area in final order—Legality of.

The scheme of S. 145, Cr. P. C., is against the view that a reference to arbitration and the award thereon can be made the basis of an order of the Magistrate under S. 145, Cr. P. Code. It is for the court to consider who was in possession at the date of the proceedings. The scheme of the enquiry is retrospective and not prospective. There might conceivably be certain instances in which the parties have agreed that the Court should refer the matter in dispute to arbitration for the purpose of deciding the question as to who is in actual possession at the time of the proceedings. A compromise can only be taken by the Magistrate as evidence for an order to be passed under S. 145 (5), Cr. P. Code and cannot possibly be made the basis of an order passed under cl. (6). A magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under S. 145 (6) in respect of land which was not referred to in the initiatory proceedings. 3 Pat. L. J. 248 : 32 C. 552 : 2 Pat. L. J. 86 : 15 C. The object of S. 145, Cr. P. C., is to bring to an end by a summary process disputes relating to land, etc., which are in their nature likely if not suppressed to end in breaches of the peace. The mere circumstance that the dispute is of a religious nature is not sufficient to justify action being taken under the section, unless there is positive evidence on the record that breach of the peace is likely to occur, if proceedings are not instituted.

The expression "it duly proved" in S. 162 of the Cr. P. Code clearly shows that the record of the statements cannot be admitted in evidence straightway but that the officer before whom the statements were made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement or omitted statement that is relied upon by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness; and the provisions of S. 67 of the Evidence Act apply to this case as well as to any other similar case. A person is not accused of the offence of criminal breach of trust by reason of his having actually caused wrongful loss to anybody; it is enough that he intended to do so, even if no wrongful loss was ever caused in fact. Such loss is certainly the usual consequence of the offence but it is not one of the consequences by reason of which the person is accused of the commission of the offence. It is therefore not one of the consequences contemplated by S. 179, Cr. P. Code. The offence of criminal breach of trust is complete with the act of conversion and the intention to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss. That intention can only be formed or at least can only be proved to have been formed, at the place where the conversion takes place and that place is the forum for trial of the accused. 38 M. 630 foll 46 B. 641 diss. —S. 190 (1) (a)—Complaint—Cognizance by a Magistrate—Police report—Showing complaint to be false—Procedure.

If a person is charged by another person with an offence and on enquiry by the police the police consider that the whole case is false, it is open to the complainant on petitioning against the police enquiry to place the matter within the scope of the operation of S. 190, sub-S. 1 (a) Cr. P. Code. But where a Magistrate has already taken cognizance of an offence in which certain persons are accused, there is no authority for the suggestion that if when the charge sheet is placed before the Magistrate the police officer as the prosecution medium omits the name of certain persons whose participation in the offence has up to that time been before the Magistrate he is compelled in any way to follow what is after all no more than advice tendered by the prosecuting authority. But the Magistrate need not, without giving any reason differ from that advice. Once the Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence he is strictly entirely independent of any opinion which the police officer offers to him and it is within his power to order that any persons who have been, since he has taken cognizance of the matter, accused as being participants in the offence should be produced before him to undergo the preliminary enquiry before committal or for trial in cases which do not go to a higher tribunal for trial. To hold otherwise would be to place in the hands of the police (after a judicial tribunal had taken cognizance of the offence) powers which might be subject to the gravest abuse. Where an objection as to the absence of a complaint in writing was not taken at the trial or in the appellate court but only in revision, it is not sufficient to upset a conviction under S. 182, I. As the provision as regards sanction was removed from S. 195, Cr. P. Code and as it was made obligatory for the public servant concerned to make a complaint instead of giving a sanction in order to prosecute a person for offences referred to in S. 195, Cr. P. Against an order of the subordinate Judge refusing sanction to prosecute the petitioners for perjury there was an appeal to the District Judge. When the appeal was pending the new Cr. P. Code came into force. It was contended that the District Judge had no power to grant sanction afterwards as he did. Held, that the petitioners had incurred a liability to have their prosecution for false evidence sanctioned and the complainant on his application being dismissed by the Sub-Judge acquired a right to apply to appellate Court under S. 195, Cr. P.C., (as it was unamended) for the grant of sanction which the lower Court had refused. Under these circumstances the repeal of S. 195 as it then stood could not affect any pending investigation in respect of the right which had accrued to the complainant or the liability which had been incurred by the applicants. The District Judge had therefore power to grant the sanction. Where the particular passages complained of as being perjured evidence were not set out in the order of the District Judge but were set out in the application for sanction the order of sanction must be deemed to have been passed with respect to the statements alleged in the application. The petition was under S. 195 (6) of the old Code of Criminal Procedure to set aside an order of a District Magistrate revoking the sanction granted by a Sub-divisional Magistrate, for the prosecution of the respondent for an offence under S. 188, I. P. C. Objection was taken to the maintainability of the petition on the ground that the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XVIII of 1923) had abolished such sanction and that was the law applicable to the case. Petitioner contended that the right to move the High Court under S. 195 (6) for sanction was of the nature of a substantive right, such as a right of appeal, which could not be taken away by any alteration of the processual law.

Held, that the right conferred by S. 195 (6) of the old Code was not a right in the nature of a right of appeal, that the amendments made by the new Code did not take away any substantive right and merely affected procedure, and that the petition was therefore unsustainable. The enquiry contemplated by S. 202, Cr. P. Code, does not necessarily mean an inquiry by the Magistrate himself examining witnesses or by holding investigation into the case. It is open to the Magistrate to investigate into the matter in order to ascertain the truth or falsity of the complaint in any way he thinks proper. Where an investigation had been made by the police and witnesses had been examined by the investigating police-officer, there is nothing in law to prevent the Magistrate from looking into the police papers for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. The enquiry contemplated by S. 202, Cr. P. Code is not limited to any particular form of enquiry and if upon looking into the police papers the Magistrate was satisfied that it was not a fit case in which process ought to be issued against the accused person, there is nothing in law to prevent the Magistrate from doing so. Held, that the District Magistrate was influenced by the decisions of the civil court and that he had no right to rely on them.

It is open to a Deputy Magistrate to form his opinion with regard to the credibility of the witnesses called before him. If a prima facie case is made out he should clearly leave it to the jury at the Sessions to form their own view as to their credibility of the evidence. But if after hearing the evidence he is satisfied that it is not trustworthy and that a conviction will not result, he is entitled to record a finding that the witnesses who spoke in support of the charge cannot be believed and that a conviction will not result.

After a charge under S. 409, I. P. C. is framed against an accused under Chapter XXI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Magistrate cannot discharge the accused but can only acquit him unless he convicts or decides to commit him to the Sessions under S. 347, Cr. P. Code.

When, however, a case is taken up from the first under Ch. XVIII as an enquiry preliminary to commitment a Magistrate can, under S. 213 (2), cancel the charge and discharge the accused even after hearing witnesses for the defence if he is satisfied that there are no sufficient grounds for committing the case. A charge framed by the Magistrate when trying a warrant case cannot be cancelled under the above section.

It is open to a Magistrate to pass an order of acquittal in respect to one part of the offence, e. g. criminal breach of trust in respect to one item and to commit the accused under S. 347, Cr. P. C. to the Sessions in respect to another part of the offence if he finds that a prima facie case is made out.

S. 347, Cr. P. Code does not empower a Magistrate to discharge an accused against whom a charge has been framed. It is only in respect of the offence for which the accused is to be committed to the court of session that the proceedings are taken out of Chapter XXI and the other proceedings of the Magistrate must remain governed by the provisions of that Chap. The accused was originally tried under S. 324 of the Penal Code. After the evidence for the prosecution closed, the accused was charged under S. 324 of the Penal Code and the trying Magistrate recorded his plea and proceeded to hear the evidence for the defence. The charge aforesaid was framed on the 16th November, 1923. The evidence for the defence was concluded on the 12th of December 1923. On the 15th of December, 1923, the trying Magistrate altered the charge into one under S. 307 of the Penal Code and without giving the accused an opportunity to re-examine the witnesses for the prosecution in regard to the altered charge or to produce such further defence evidence as he may have in his defence on that charge, committed him to the Court of Sessions for trial on the charge so altered. S. 231, Cr. P. Code requires that when a charge is altered by the Court after commencement of the trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to re-call or re-summon and examine with reference to such alteration or addition any witness who may have been examined and also to call any such further witness whom the Court may think material. The alteration was made at a very late stage of the case and no commitment ought to have been made on the altered charge without giving the accused an opportunity of re-examining the witnesses for the prosecution and producing his defence in regard thereto. Held, that the procedure of the Magistrate was entirely illegal and likely to prejudice the accused in his trial before the Court of Session. To attract the applicability of S. 236, Cr. P. As there is a common relation between a police investigation, an inquiry by the Magistrate preliminary to commitment and a final trial in the Sessions Court, to the statements made at these different stages the words "series of acts" would be applicable. A series of acts means two or more acts connected together by some common relation. 45 Bom. 834 Exp. and Dist. (Kenney, C. J. and Raymond, A. J. C.) SALEH SHAH v. EMPEROR. 82 I. C. 59 : 16 S. L. Under S. 345 (6), Cr. P. The complainant charged five persons with an offence under S. 326, I. P. C., and subsequently put in a petition whereby he withdrew his complaint against one of the accused who had apologised and wished the case to proceed against the others. Held, that there was in effect a composition of the offence with one of the accused and that expression "withdrew the complaint" was loosely used. Per Le Rossignol, J. (Harrison, J. Contra) There is nothing in S. 248, Cr. P. A Magistrate is not compelled to commit to Sessions any case in which he considers that a conviction is impossible. At the same time where the accused is charged with an offence triable only by a Court of Session the Magistrate must exercise a proper discretion in ordering the discharge of the accused. Where an accused seeks to exercise the right of cross examination conferred by section 256, Criminal Procedure Code, he cannot be legally required to deposit the expenses.

The question who should pay whether the Government or the complainant, is one to be decided by the Magistrate. Section 544 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is subject to rules made by the Local Government. The rules in force in the Central Provinces will be found in the Judicial Commissioner's Circular, No. 1—37.
If the complaint is a private one brought for using false trade-mark and the prosecution is not one carried on by, or under the orders or with the sanction of the Government and is bailable, the only provision under which the Government could be made to pay the expenses is if it appears to the presiding officer that the prosecution is directly in the interests of public justice, a point which is one obviously for the Magistrate to decide. But in no case can the accused be compelled to pay the expenses of the witnesses for the prosecution whom he wishes to cross-examine under Section 256, Criminal Procedure Code. Under that section the right of the accused to cross-examine is absolute. (Baker, O. J. C.) trate to examine all witnesses cited for defence.

Where in a criminal trial it became obvious, that, if the prosecution story which put as the leader of an assault an individual whose presence at the scene of the alleged occurrence was conclusively disproved, it could not but throw serious grounds of suspicion upon the whole of the prosecution story, and the defence cited an important witness to prove his absence, the magistrate is not justified in refusing to examine the witnesses simply because he was unwell at the time. The proper course could have been that some effort should have been made to ascertain (either by telegram or by correspondence and either undertaken on behalf of the Court or undertaken by the applicant himself) as to whether it would, within a reasonable time, be possible for the invalid gentleman to come and if not, then, reluctantly to come to the conclusion that it was necessary that his evidence should be taken on commission owing to his inability to be present at the place where the case was being —Ss. 258, 259 and 514—Charge framed against accused—Complainant and accused absent—Order of discharge if valid—Proper procedure—For forfeiture of bond, when accused's presence held unnecessary.

When the parties are, after a charge is framed, absent the proper procedure for the Magistrate is to get the accused arrested under a warrant and then decide whether he is guilty or not, and not to discharge the accused and then direct the taking of proceedings under S. 514 for forfeiture of his bond. After a charge is framed the provisions of S. 259 will not apply and to apply the provisions of S. 258 the Magistrate must find the accused not guilty.

Held further, that where in a case an order of discharge is passed after a charge is framed and obviously the complainant has no desire to proceed with his complaint, justice will be done by altering the order of discharge to one of acquittal holding the accused to be not guilty of the offence charged against him.

Held also, that when the court itself by discharging the accused persons holds that their presence on the date of hearing was unnecessary, no action should be taken under S. 514. (Dalal, J. C. and Neave, A. J. C.) EMPEROR v. GODHAN, 10 W. N. 586 : 10 O. & A. L. R. 998.

Where a charge has been framed against the accused and the latter have entered upon their defence and produced some defence witnesses, they cannot be acquitted on account of the absence of the complainant.

—S. 259—Warrant case—Adjournment to absence of complainant—Liability to pay costs.

In a warrant case after charge is framed the magistrate has to go on with the trial irrespective of the presence or absence of the complainant. An Indian British subject claiming to be dealt with as such must put in his claim before the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of enquiry or trial. This applies to Presidency Magistrates as well as Magistrates in the mofussil. If the Magistrate rejects the claim and tries him, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such appeal. This applies to Presidency Magistrates as well as Magistrates in the mofussil. If the Magistrate rejects the claim and commits him to the Court of Session, he may repeat the claim before the said Court. Such repetition may only be made in a Court of Session and not in the High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction. If the Court of Session rejects the claim and tries him, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such a trial. It necessarily follows that if a claim is made before Presidency Magistrate and rejected by him and the accused is committed to the High Court, there is no provision for repetition of the claim before the High Court, and the accused will not be entitled to put in, under S. 275, Cr. P. Code before the High Court, a further claim for being tried by a jury the majority of whom should be Indians. Where no such claim was put forward before a Magistrate there being no provision for repetition of the claim before the High Court, S. 528 B is a bar to the assertion of the same in any subsequent stage of the case. The claim may be made at any time up till the time when the commitment is made. The committing court becomes functus officio and loses all jurisdiction over the case after the commitment and special provisions have been made in Ss. 216 to 219 to enable the Court to retain jurisdiction only in respect of some matters. On a charge under S. 304, I. P. The Asst. Sessions Judge who charged the jury expounded the law only with reference to the right of private defence of the body and omitted all reference to the right of private defence of property. Held, that the Judge should have charged the jury that if they believed that the accused had reasonable ground for supposing that the thief had with him articles taken from the house, the accused was entitled to exercise his right of private defence of property under S. 103, I. On a charge of dacoity it is insufficient to read the definition of the offence to the jury. At the same time an omission to give a detailed definition of the offence amounts to a misdirection when it is clear that the nature of the offence has been described in detail to the jury. The charge to a jury can never be absolutely exhaustive. This is particularly the case where the accused persons have remained undefended. Though the Judge did not definitely explain that the jury must give a distinct verdict as to each of the three accused, but he has dealt with the case of each separately, and there is no reason to suppose that the jury did not regard the accused persons as distinct individuals, or that any of the accused has been prejudiced by this omission on the part of the Judge, the conviction will not be set aside on appeal. Where the appellants were convicted by the verdict of a jury under Ss. 147 and 353, I. P. C., it was urged on their behalf in appeal, that there was misdirection to the jury owing to the fact that the Judge did not place before them the evidence that there was against the accused separately, as S. 352 is essentially an individual offence, (2) that the Judge erred in his charge to the jury because he left it to them to find out the common intention, and his statement "that the mob had a premeditated object of disturbing the public peace and resisting the Police by criminal force" was beyond the common objects set out in S. 141, I. P. C. so as to prejudice the accused.

Held, dismissing the appeal, that the jury did not come to a wrong conclusion because (1) of the Judge's omission to place the evidence against each of the accused separately, (2) that the Judge's charge to the jury in respect of the accused forming an unlawful assembly with the object of disturbing the public peace, did not go beyond the common objects set out in S. 141, I. S. 307 of the Cr. P. Code requires the High Court to give due weight to the opinion of the Sessions Judge and the jury after considering the entire evidence and then to acquit or convict the accused. It does not require the High Court to attempt to reconstruct the verdict of the jury. In giving due weight to the opinion of the jury, the High Court would always hesitate to reverse a unanimous verdict unless it is perverse or unreasonable. On a reference under S. 307, High Court may exercise any powers which it may exercise on appeal but it is perfectly within its rights in considering that in cases such as these, interference should only be permitted in cases of perversity or clear and manifest error and that where a jury has arrived at a verdict which is not perverse and not clearly and manifestly wrong, such verdict should not be interfered with although it is perfectly possible to form a not unreasonable opinion contrary to the opinion taken by the jury. The advantage of adopting this course is that it secures the object of the legislature in creating juries. If the other view be taken and the case is re-opened ab initio, it is somewhat difficult to see what useful function is performed by a jury. For in every case in which the Judge does not agree with their verdict, the case can be referred to the High Court which then proceeds to try it de novo. The High Court should not interfere unless the verdict is perverse or clearly and manifestly wrong. In no case is it more difficult to arrive at a confident verdict as to whether evidence is false or true than in cases in which women alleged that they have been outraged or that outrage has been attempted upon them. Not only has one to consider the possibility of deliberate falsehood but those who have to arrive at a verdict have to consider the possibility of unintentional mis-statements produced by hysterical conditions which are apt to be found for in cases of this nature. The difficulties are increased when from the nature of the charge there can be no physical trace of outrage such as in a case of attempted rape. Where there is no reason to suppose that the jury did not give an honest and a not unreasonable verdict, the High Court will not interfere with that verdict. CRIM. P. CODE (1898), S. 307.

Sec. 307, Cr. P. Code, lays down that, in dealing with a case submitted thereunder, the High Court "may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal" and that "subject thereto, it shall, after considering the entire evidence and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the Jury, acquit or convict the accused of any offence of which the Jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it." The High Court's duty accordingly is to consider the evidence on record as it stands, to weigh the respective opinions of the Sessions Judge and the Jury, and then to form its own conclusion. It still remains that the verdict of the Jury is first in the field and the Sec. 299 of the Code makes it primarily the function of the Jury "to decide which view of the facts is true and then to return the verdict which under such view ought according to the direction of the Judge to be returned" and "to decide all questions which according to law are to be deemed to be questions of fact." On general principles therefore it appears that when the process which Sec. 307 directs has not been carried out, and the opinions of the Judge and the Jury have been measured, in the result the verdict of the Jury should stand unless the evidence and the opinion of the Judge show clearly that it is wrong and that in the interests of justice it ought to be reversed. The question must be framed in such a way as to enable the accused to know what he is to explain, as to what are the circumstances which are against him and for which an explanation is needed. The omission of the Magistrate to examine the accused at the end of the trial in accordance with the provisions of S. 342, Cr. P. Unless the irregularity is shown to have prejudiced the accused in any way the conviction will not be set aside. (Boys, J.) GANGASAHAI v. EMPEROR.

—S. 342—Non-examination of accused after cross-examination after charge vitiates trial though accused is not prejudiced.

It is obligatory on the Magistrate to question the accused generally on the whole case after the prosecution have closed their case, i.e., when all the prosecution witnesses have been examined in chief, cross-examined, and re-examined. The examination of the accused after the charge and the examination in-chief of only some of the prosecution witnesses and again after the cross-examination of only sum of such witnesses is not a compliance with the mandatory provisions of law and the trial is vitiated by the omission to question the accused generally after the cross-examination of a re-called witness is finished although the accused may not have been thereby prejudiced on the merits. 50 Cal. 223 at 227 Foll. S. 342 (1) is mandatory and the omission to question the accused generally on the case as required by the section is not a mere irregularity but it is an illegality which vitiates the whole trial. The examination contemplated is after the prosecution case is closed and if the Magistrate discharges the accused without calling on the defence, the proceedings are not vitiated in any way. A general question as to what the accused has to say is not sufficient. The court must communicate to the accused by appropriate questions everything that is alleged against him and ascertain what explanation or defence in law or in fact he wishes to put forward.

Written statements filed in court cannot take the place of the examination contemplated by the section. (Kinkhede, A.J.C.) UDHAO v. EMPEROR.

The object of S. 342, Cr. P. The provisions of the section are mandatory. The accused was sent up for trial at the instance of the police under S. 409, I. P. Code as a warrant case under Chapter 21 of the Cr. P. Code. The magistrate framed a charge in respect of Rs. 24,000 alleged to have been criminally misappropriated and having regard to the heavy amount involved decided to commit the accused to the sessions. But afterwards he came to the conclusion that there was no offence made out in respect of Rs. 7,000 and he discharged the accused of the offence in respect of this amount and framed a new charge under S. 409, I. CRIM. P. CODE (1898), S. 367.

The provisions of S. 360, Cr. P. Code are mandatory and an omission to comply with them vitiates the trial. The general object of S. 350 is to ensure the accuracy of the record and also that the accused should know and understand what evidence is given at the trial. The reading over of the evidence to the witnesses is so essential to the framing of an accurate record that the direction in S. 360 that the evidence should be read over to the witness is imperative and not merely directory. Under S. 408, Cr. P. Code there is a right of appeal to the Sessions Judge from an order of a Magistrate, passed in a summary trial under S. 562 Cr. P. Code. An order under S. 562 Cr. P. Code does not amount to sentence. (Boys, J.) HIRA LAL v. EMPEROR. 46 A. 828: 22 A. L. J. 751: L. R. 5 A. 131: 82 I. C. 172: 25 Cr. L. J. 1244: 1924 All. 765.

The right of appeal against an acquittal under S. 417 Cr. P. Code, is one that vests with the Government and should be sparingly used. But the discretion is not subject to the control of the Court. The Cr. P. Code makes no distinction between an appeal from an acquittal and an appeal from a conviction. If in an appeal from an acquittal the appellate court thinks that the lower court has taken an erroneous view of the evidence it has no power to refuse to convict. 20 A. 459: 19 B. 51: 17 C. 485: 38 M. 1028. The Government did not either in 1921 or till 8th December 1922 decide to prosecute the accused under S. 121, I. P. C. Where there is a verdict of a jury from which the judge differs and refers the case to the High Court, it is not for the High Court to see whether it is necessary for the ends of justice that the opinion of the jury should be reversed. That condition is set down for the Sessions Judge to observe. When once a reference is made to the High Court, the language of the Code does not justify any undue preference being given to the opinion of the jury over that of the judge. The respondents were called upon to show cause why they should not be ordered to furnish security for their good behaviour for one year. A Magistrate of the first class held an inquiry as to the truth of the information under S. 117, Cr. P. Code, and finally under S. 119 of the same Code discharged the respondents. The District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court asking it to set aside the order of discharge and either convict the accused under S. 118, Cr. P. Code or pass an order for further enquiry. Held, that the trial court having fully considered the evidence and discharged the accused, the High Court would not interfere unless it could be shown that the order of the trial court was either perverse or unreasonable. P. Code, held by the Full Bench, that the object of the legislature was to place Indian and European British subjects on the same footing, and had been carried out by S. 446. That the trial of the accused was by law bound to be by jury unless he himself desired to be tried by European assessors by the proviso to sub-cl. (2) of S. 446.

“By ordinary course” is meant the course which would be followed in the absence of a claim by the accused to be dealt with under Ch. XXXIII of the Code or in the absence of a notification by the Local Govt. under S. 269. (Broadway, Fforde and Campbell, JJ.) BRAY v. REX.

Even though an accused person tried before the Presidency Magistrate did not put forward his claim to be dealt with as an European British subject in accordance with the provisions of S. 528-A, Cr. P. Code, he can rely upon his right under S. 449 (1) (c) Cr. P. Code, for the purposes of an appeal. Where the accused asked for leave under S. 449 (1) (c), Cr. P. Code, on the ground he was a European British subject and that the case if tried outside the Presidency-town, would have been tried under Ch. 33 of the Cr. P. Code he must satisfy the Court in these matters and the Crown should have notice to show, if possible, that the allegations are not true or that the case would not have been triable under Ch. 33 of the Cr. P. Code if triable outside the Presidency town. It is not incumbent on the accused to put forward his claim as a European British subject either before a Magistrate holding an enquiry or trial in a Presidency town or before the High Court during the trial of the case. The question should be raised at the time when leave to appeal under S. 449 (1) (c), Cr. P. Code, is asked for. The right of appeal under S. 449 is at the best a qualified right very different from the right conferred by S. 410, Cr. P. Code.

If it is based on S. 443, sub-S. — Ss. 476 and 195 (b) and (c)—Their relation—Whether a Court can make complaint against persons who are not parties to—Effect of recent amendments.

In an insolvency proceeding, where the Judge was convinced that there was flagrant tampering with the Court records, and ordered a judicial enquiry under S. 476, to enquire into offences under S. 120-b read with Ss. 465, 466 and 109, I. P. C., alleged to have been committed by persons not parties to the suit and it was doubted whether a Court can make a complaint in respect of any person other than persons who were parties to the proceedings before it.

Held, that by the recent amendment of the Code the necessity for sanction to prosecute has been done away with altogether and in the place of that sanction, has been substituted a complaint made by a Court itself in writing. Powers given in S. 476 should be strictly confined to those granted.

Held, further, that the offence referred to in S. 195, sub S. (1) cl. (b) or cl. (c) must be read in conjunction with the wording of S. 195 (1) (c) and that the offence alleged to have been committed by a party to a proceeding before a Court is the only exception which a Magistrate can take cognizance of without sanction and complaints under S. 476 against the persons who are not parties to the proceedings before it was not contemplated by the Code.

CRIM. P. CODE (1898), S. 487.

Under S. 476 of the Cr. P. Code, no appeal lies against an order made by the Court to which the Court making a complaint is subordinate. Where the Lower Appellate Court withdraws a complaint made under S. 476, the High Court would not generally interfere in revision, except perhaps in extraordinary cases. The question whether the complaint should be made under S. 476, Cr. P. Code, is almost invariably a matter of discretion and if the trial Court or a Court to which it is subordinate, thinks that there should be no complaint made, then it would not be desirable that the High Court should interfere (*MacLeod, C.
